MISSOURI WOMAN CABLES CROKER'S WIDOW SHE WAS 'MRS. GUY MARONE'

Wife of Telegraph Operator in Little Town of Belle Says She Married Marone in 1911 and Divorced Him in 1913; Lived With Him in Northampton, Mass.

TELLS OF STAYING AT HOME OF THE DAVIES'

Woman, Now Mrs. R. B. Kays, Says She Cabled Mrs. Bula Croker Because She Felt Sorry for Her Over Charges.

By the Associated Press.

BLAND, Mo., June 16.—Mrs. R. B. Kays, wife of a telegraph operator of the Rock Island railroad, staying temporarily in the little town of Belle, eight miles from here, late today told the Associated Press she was the mysterious Mrs. Guy Marone mentioned in the Richard Croker Sr. will case.

It was testified in the Croker will contest in Dublin that Mrs. Croker was the wife of Guy Marone when she married Croker. The jury did not accept this statement and upheld the will, which left nearly all the estate to Mrs. Bula Croker.

Mrs. Kays said she was married to Guy Marone in 1911 and that they were divorced in 1913, but refused to say in what city the marriage ceremony was performed or where the divorce was granted. She asserted that she and Marone rented an apartment from Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Davies in Northampton, Mass., for six months in 1911.

Mrs. Croker, in Dublin today, gave out a cablegram from Mrs. Kays saying she was the Mrs. Marone mentioned in the trial.

Referring to the cablegram which she sent to Mrs. Croker, Mrs. Kays said: "I merely sent that cablegram because I felt an injustice was being done Mrs. Croker, and I felt sorry for her."

"I never met Mrs. Croker and do not know any members of the Croker family," she added. "The only thing I know about the will case is what I read in the papers. I felt so sorry for Mrs. Croker when I read that the Davies were testifying that she was Mrs. Marone, so I sent her the cablegram merely to let her know that the former Mrs. Marone was still alive."

Mrs. Kays expressed surprise when asked about the cablegram.

"How did you find out about that?" she asked.

When told Mrs. Croker had made it public in Dublin, she expostulated:

"Well, what do you know about that! I did not intend anything like that at all.

"I went eight miles to Bland and sent that cable message so no one in Belle would know anything about it."

Mrs. Kays said she did not know where Marone is now.

"I saw him about six months ago in New York. He has a brother in New York who is a lawyer, and another who is a doctor.

"After Marone and I were married in 1911 we rented from the Davies for about six months."

Mrs. Bula Croker Gives Out Cablegram in Dublin.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, June 16.—A cable message from Bland, Mo., possibly throwing light on the identity of the mysterious Mrs. Guy Marone of Northampton, Mass., whose name figured so prominently in the recent Croker will case, was given out today by Mrs. Bula Croker, widow of Richard Croker, senior.

The message, signed, according to Mrs. Croker, by a "Mrs. Kays," was as follows:

"I was the Mrs. Marone who lived with Davies, Northampton. Positive proof."

The Davies referred to are Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Davies, who testified at the trial that Mrs. Croker was the woman known to them in Northampton as Mrs. Marone. This identification was held by the jury to have been unsubstantiated.

The Chief Justice in instructing the jury called attention to the fact that the testimony that Mrs. Croker was the wife of Marone at the time of her marriage to Croker was contradicted by Oklahoma witnesses. The testimony of these witnesses, he

SOLID FRONT PROMISED BY LEAGUE AGAINST ALCOHOLISM

Secretary of Organization Says Political Party Will Get No Where on Nullification Platform

By the Associated Press.

WESTERVILLE, O., June 16—In a statement today discussing attempts to do away with state prohibition enforcement laws, Dr. Ernest S. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, asserted that the "Forces behind la wand order in this country will present a solid front against those candidates who are not 100 per cent for manitainance of the Constitution."

"From the presidency on down to the last township constable, the attitude of those seeking office must be made plain as the shining sun at high noon on a cloudless day. The people will not support a spineless, equivocating candidate for either high or low office, nor will they give their suffrage to men like Gov. Smith of New York. If any political party is so foolish as to take a wet attitude or to support a nullificationist standard bearer, that organization, for that reason, must be fought at the polls," he declared.

SMOKING WEED RAID MADE

Two Held and Quantity of Contraband Seized at New Orleans.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, La., June 16.—The first raid under the new ordinance outlawing "Marijuana," a Mexican smoking weed better known as "Mary Warner" and said to be in reality the East Indian hashish, was made by the police today. Two persons were arrested and a quantity of the contraband seized.

Officials of the Orleans Parish School Board are investigating the alleged use of the weed by school children as the result of a report from the chief attendance officer.

DEMPSEY-GIBBONS FIGHT ASSURED BY $100,000 PAYMENT

Kearn's Champion's Manager, Accepts Second Installment Due on Guarantee—Paid by Banker.

$76,000 RAISED BY MAYOR IN 24 HOURS

Shelby Official Says He Has Pledged Last Dollar—New Executive for Bout Selected.

By the Associated Press.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., June 16.—The Jack Dempsey-Tom Gibbons heavyweight championship fight, sagging at the knees and ready to collapse, was shoved back on its feet tonight with new executives in charge and Jack Kearns, manager of the heavyweight champion, happy with the receipt of a $100,000 draft, the second installment due Dempsey on his $300,000 guarantee.

The fight will be staged as scheduled in Shelby, the cow town, before the sun sinks in the West on Fourth of July afternoon.

Payment of the $100,000 to Kearns was made by George H. Stanton, president of the Stanton Trust and Savings Bank, shortly before 6 o'clock tonight in the offices of the banking institution. Kearns accepted the money with offers in his pocket to take the match elsewhere, but he declared he wanted to go through with the fight at Shelby at any cost.

How Money Was Raised.

The story of the raising of the $100,000 due Kearns is one of the rarest tales of financing in the history of boxing. Mayor Jim Johnson of Shelby, 60 years old, was individually responsible for raising $76,000 in less than 24 hours, while Great Falls business men raised the balance.

Johnson begged Stanton, the banker, to advance $50,000 of the $76,000 while he raised the remainder, $26,000, from lifelong friends in Shelby. Telegraph and telephone wires sizzled all day carrying messages authorizing Johnson to draw on his friends.

Johnson, a former cow-puncher before he became wealthy with the development of oil fields near Shelby, said he had sunk every dollar he possessed in the enterprise and would see it through even if he went flat broke.

New Executive Chosen.

Dan Tracey, a hotel owner and mining operator, was selected to be the executive to be in charge of the fight, with Fred R. Searles, former assistant cashier of the Great Falls National Bank, as assistant treasurer. The original executives, Johnson and Loy J. Molumby, State commander of the American Legion, will not be surplanted it was announced, but will work under the direction of Tracey, who declared he would not accept the responsibility unless he could have absolute authority.

Tracey is a life-long friend of Kearns, who formerly did some cow-punching himself in this section of Montana, before he became identified with the boxing game.

Threatening cloudy weather with a sprinkling of rain and Kearns' anxiety over the collection of the $100,000 were reflected in Dempsey's workout this afternoon.

As the champion parted the ropes to pull on the gloves, big drops of rain began to splash in the ring, but the shower held off until Dempsey went through his usual six rounds of boxing, a round of punching the heavy leather-filled bag, and a round of shadow boxing, two rounds with George Godfrey, the negro giant, the workout appeared to be slow compared with knockouts of the previous days.

Shelby Jubilant Over News That Cancellation Is Averted.

By the Associated Press.

SHELBY, Mont., June 16.—Shelby breathed a sigh of relief upon the receipt of information tonight from Great Falls that the $second $100,000 of the $300,000 guaranteed Jack Dempsey for his bout with Tommy Gibbons July 4 had been paid. Mike Collins, the match-maker, announced that the plans of the fight had not been altered during the delay incident to the payment of the $100,000.

The fight population and residents of Shelby were jubilant when word of the payment was received.

The training camp of Gibbons was a colorful scene this afternoon with Shelby's new cowboy police force in attendance. Gibbons held himself in reserve and did not extend either his punch or his foot work.

SENATOR PEPPER BROADENS AMNESTY RECOMMENDATION TO COVER SACRAMENTO CASE

His Findings, After Study of "Political" Prisoners Situation, Will Be Transmitted to the President.

By CHARLES G. ROSS
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 16—Senator George Wharton Pepper, Republican, of Pennsylvania, already on record for the immediate and unconditional release of all the remaining "political" prisoners of the Chicago I. W. W. group, has just told the Post-Dispatch correspondent that he has broadened his recommendation to include the entire list of I. W. W. prisoners sentenced at Sacramento.

Senator Pepper has submitted his findings on the Sacramento case, the result of several months exhaustive study of the evidence, to Acting Attorney-General Seymour, for transmission to the President. He did this, he said, at the request of the President. With his conclusions for the guidance of the department, he presented a summary of the evidence on which each of the remaining Sacramento prisoners was sent to jail.

Covers the Cases of 43 Men.

The appeal of the senator from Pennsylvania, one of the leaders, if not the leader, of the Philadelphia Bar, now covers the cases of 43 of the "political" prisoners, 22 of the Chicago and 21 of the Sacramento group. He will next undertake a study of the evidence against the four so-called Wichita prisoners, also I. W. W.'s, for whom clemency already has been recommended by the district attorney who prosecuted them and the judge who heard the trial and sentenced them.

Senator Pepper's verdict on the Sacramento cases has been eagerly awaited by amnesty champions everywhere, and the news that he favors a favorable judgment is hailed with a delight that could only be heightened by a similar announcement regarding the President himself. Release of a considerable portion of the last 50 "politicals" behind bars is believed to be measurably nearer as a result of Pepper's recommendation.

"I am not and never have been an advocate of blanket amnesty," Senator Pepper told the correspondent. "The conclusion that I have reached, while applicable to all the Sacramento defendants, is based on a study of each case separately."

Senator Pepper's examination of the Chicago record was made when 28 of the convicted men (there were originally 100) were in jail. The study convinced him that all but two of the 28 should never have been convicted and that the two had been adequately punished.

California Case Conclusion

His conclusion with regard to the Sacramento prosecution as given to the Attorney General, and repeated to the correspondent is that there is doubt, to say the least, whether the men should have been found guilty on the counts on which they are now imprisoned and that, even if the evidence justified conviction, they already served "superabundant" sentences.

"The presence of these men in jail," he said, "is a challenge to an American lawyer's loyalty to his profession, I went into their cases, not as a senator but as an American citizen and a lawyer. No lawyer can afford to be indifferent to cases affecting human liberty, the maintenance of which must depend on the regularity of our criminal procedure."

Accepted the Challenge.

Senator Pepper told how he came to take up the cases of the political prisoners. A delegation of amnesty workers called on him last summer and asked him to sign a petition for general amnesty. He declined. They argued that, since the prisoners had been deprived of liberty virtually en bloc, they should be released en bloc. Pepper said that two wrongs did not make a right and that each case should be handled individually. They told him no disinterested person with the requisite equipment appeared to have the time and inclination for the tedious task of examining the voluminous trial records.

Pepper accepted the challenge. He told the delegation that he would tackle the job but not till after the November elections because he did not want the issue of human liberty dragged into partisan politics. True to his promise, Pepper plunged first into the Chicago and then the Sacramento case, with results as stated.

Senator Pepper has voluntarily performed a unique public service at the expenditure of much time and tedious effort, a service of inestimable value to the cause of free speech. Needless to say, his economic point of viey is at the opposite pole from that of the I. W. W. He did not count the fact of membership in the I. W. W. either for or against the prisoners, his sole concern as a lawyer and a citizen was to see whether men were being unjustly deprived of their liberty.

All Put in Same Category.

In his study of the Sacramento trial, Senator Pepper reached precisely the same conclusion that has

PAROLED I. W. W. NOW MAN WITHOUT COUNTRY

Archie Sinclair Says He Is Native of Canada, but Is Denied Admittance.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Temporarily at least, Archie Sinclair, one of the 100 I. W. W. convicts in Chicago and sent to Leavenworth in 1918, is a man without a country. He is out of jail but has no place to go.

If he is sent back to jail as is possible the total number of "political" prisoners must again be placed at 51.

Sinclair, who was serving a 10-year term for violation of the wartime espionage act, was released by executive order January 1 on condition that he be deported. He had testified at the Chicago trial and again before an immigration examiner that he was a British subject born at Ontario, Province of Ontario, Canada, in June, 1884.

Insted of being immediately sent out of the country after his release from Leavenworth, Sinclair was given permission under bail to remain till June 15.

On the eve of the expiration of this period of grace, according to a news article in the New York Call, Sinclair telegraphed the immigration office at Ellis Island, the jumping off place of deportees, that the Canadian authorities had declined to let him into Canada unless he could prove his Canadian citizenship.

The Call article did not tell from what city he telegraphed. British Embassy officials said today they had no record of Sinclair but that if he was born in Canada, that country had no right to refuse him entry. The view was added that it was up to Canada to prove that he was not a Canadian citizen.

The Joint Amnesty Committee which made inquiries, was assured at the Embassy that everything possible would be done to clear up any uncertainty over Sinclair's birthplace. A telegram was immediately sent by the committee to the Chief of Police of Ontario asking him to check Sinclair's testimony by birth records of that city.

Immigration officials of the Department of Labor said that nothing was farther from their desire than to send Sinclair back to jail. They hoped he would be able to prove his Canadian citizenship. Under the law, however, if Sinclair should prove to be a citizen of the United States after all, he would apparently have to go back to jail there to await the pleasure of the President.

DE VALERA'S VIEW OF ELECTION

No Chance of Fair Play for Republicans, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, June 16.—Eamonn de Valera in a statement today says the people of Ireland will not be called upon to decide between the Republic and the Free State at the coming elections, there being no chance of fair play for the Republicans. The Republican Government, the statement said, would issue no decree, but the Republican political party might present one candidate in each constituency to enable the people to demonstrate their choice. If elected, all such candidates would refuse to take the oath of allegiance to a foreign king.

POLICE SEEKING TO CONNECT AIRPLANE WITH HOLDUP PLOT

Machine Reported to Have Landed in Field Near Where Mail Messenger Was Kidnaped and Robbed of $4000.

FARMER TELLS OF TALKING TO PILOT

Name of St. Louis Gangster Said to Have Been Painted on Side; Theory That Robbers Used Craft.

St. Louis police are endeavoring to connct the presence of an airplane near Pocahontas, Ill., 42 miles northeast of St. Louis, Thursday and Friday, with the kidnaping of a mail messenger in that town in an automobile Friday, which was coupled with the theft of a registered mail pouch containing $4000 mine payroll money.

If the police theory of a connection between these events proves true, this, it is believed, will be the first record of aircraft in crime, in this part of the country.

The robbery was at 8:30 a. m. Friday. At 5 p. m. Thursday there landed on a farm two miles west of Pocahontas an airplane which hal painted on it a name which is that of a two-term ex-convict and member of the St. Louis "Egan's Rats" gang. The police recognize that an airman other than this gangster may possess this name.

Another Plane Lands.

The aviator told the farmer that engine trouble had forced him down, that he would have to get another plane. Friday afternoon, the aviator, whose description is similar to that of the gangster, returned with a companion in another plane. After tinkering a while with the first craft, both were flown away. The theory is that it may have been planned to use the flying machine for a "getaway" after the robbery, or that the object was to assist in preparing some sort of an "alibi."

James Ganor, a private detective, informed the police yesterday that he had learned that the gangster whose name was painted on the airplane had been renting part of a garage in University City for several months and kept various automobiles there, the last one, during the last few days, being a Cadillac, which was the make of car used in the Pocahontas robbery. This man, Ganor was informed, lived at 6311A North Drive, University City, the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, who is known to the police.

Garage Man Identifies Car.

The garage owner identified the car used in the robbery as the Cadillac this man had kept in his place. At 7 p. m. Acting Chief of Police Nally, postoffice inspectors and Marshal Ward of University City went to the Campbell flat, but were denied admittance. They got in shortly before 11 p. m. when a woman living downstairs came home and opened the single door to both flats. Mail addressed to the gangster in question was found in the Campbell flat. Mrs. Campbell, a woman named I. B. Hopkins, known to the police; a woman who said she was 21 years old and lived in Edwardsville, and a fourth woman, who said she lived at the North drive address, were arrested.

The plane which landed near Pocahontas Thursdey had the name of an aircraft company dimly visible on it, as well as the other name. The head of this company told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that he had sold a plane to a man of the name this machine bore, four or five months ago, and that this man had been flying the plane. A general description he gave of the man tallied with a police description of the gangster of the same name, including the point that he was a neat dresser.

Ray Renard, 24 years old, 2818 North Eleventh street, an Egan gangster, who is under two convictions for crime, has been identified by seven persons as having been seen among a number of men abandoning near Venice Friday the automobile which was used in the actual "getaway," and among those who were seen afterwards being rowed across the Mississippi River from Venice to the foot of Bremen street in a small boat.

Arrested at His Home.

Renard had been arrested at his home at 6 a. m. yesterday by Night Chief of Police Maupin on a description of one of these men, furnished the police. Renard was convicted in Federal Court Dec. 22, 1920, of complicity in a freight car theft, and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, but an appeal is pending. He was convicted in Circuit Court April

GERMANY SENDS NOTE TO POWERS PROTESTING AGAINST FRENCH ACTS

Communication Declares Efforts of Berlin Government to Tranquilize People Cannot Be Successful in the Face of "Franco-Belgian Terrorism."

5 MINE DIRECTORS ARE SENT TO PRISON

Occupational Headquarters Announces Plan to Take Control of Coal and Raw Materials of All Factories in the Ruhr District.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 16.—The German Government has sent a note of protest to the powers not participating in the Ruhr occupation, calling attention to the continued acts of "Franco-Belgian terrorism" and the pronouncement of death sentences upon German citizens at a time when France is putting forward demands for cessation of the passive resistance and despite Germany's recent overtures and sincere readiness for negotiations.

The note declares that the attitude of the occupying powers renders illusory the Government's efforts to tranquilize the population and creates the danger of acts of desperate recklessness, the effects of which may extend far beyond the occupied territory.

Five German mining directors were found guilty of refusing to deliver coal to the occupational authorities by a French court martial at Werden today, according to messages received here and were sentenced to five years' imprisonment each and ordered to pay fines aggregating 1,431,000,000,000 marks (about $14,310,000).

The convicted men, none of whom was present at the trial, each represented a different mine in the Ruhr.

Virtual State of Seige Said to Exist in Brandenburg.

By the Associated Press.

BRANDENBURG, June 16.—A limited state of seige has been proclaimed here because of the fear that disorders may follow the strike of the metal workers. The police today dispersed several demonstrations in one instance they fired a volley in the air before order was restored.

The Association of Catholic officials has appealed to the Pope, asking that his holiness help in calling attention to the deportations from the Ruhr of officials who have remained loyal to the German Government.

French Plan to Take Over Supplies of Factories.

By the Associated Press.

DUSSELDORF, June 16.—Plans to take control of the coal and coke and raw material supplies of all the factories in the Ruhr were announced today at the French headquarters here. The occupation authorities decided to adopt this method to enforce payment of the coal tax.

Gen. Degoutte, the commander-in chief, issued a decree announcing the military's intention to take charge of all overhead conveyers and all rail lines leading from the coal mines to the factories. The Krupp works at Essen employing 52,000 men and the Stinnes works at Muelheim with 40,000 men will be among the establishments affected.

U. S. NAVY FLYER SETS ENDURANCE RECORD FOR SINGLE MOTOR SEAPLANE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.

LIEUT. M. A. SCHUR, United States Navy, established a new world's endurance record for a single motored seaplane at San Diego, Cal., Wednesday, by flying 11 hours and 16 minutes.

This was announced today by the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department.

A week before, Lieut. Schur established a record of 10 hours and 31 minutes. The purpose of Wednesday's flight was to better this record. He flew a DT-2 (Douglas Torpedo) plane, which had been developed to carry and launch torpedoes from the air.

SECRETARY MELLON TO SAIL SOON FOR EUROPE

Head of Treasury to Spend Two Months Abroad as Private Tourist.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary Mellon will leave next week for a trip to Europe, intending to seek rest after more than two years of virtually unbroken work at his desk, but official Washington is speculating over the possibility of the vacation assuming international significance.

Mellon intends to keep it as quiet and free from politics as he possibly can. His close friends admit he may be drawn into discussions of the European economic and financial situation and ultimately the indebtedness of Europe to the United States. He has made no engagements, no itinerary and no vacation plans, desiring to be entirely free during the two months he will be away from the Treasury.

Plans to Sail Saturday.

Tentatively, Mellon has decided to sail next Saturday on the Baron Berengaria, stopping for a short time in England and then going across the Continent. He will visit France and may go into Germany, but it was said at the Treasury that it is hardly likely he will get to Rome. He will be accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ailsa, and his son, Paul, who has been in school at Phillips Exeter.

The Secretary showed some annoyance at published reports that he would devote part of his time to a study of conditions in order to be better acquainted with international financial affairs during the rest of his term.

Despite Mellon's personal desires, the trip is being compared with the recent visit of Premier Stanley Baldwin, then Chancellor of the British Exchequer, to the United States, which was the occasion for official courtesies by the Government. Mellon's visit at least will give opportunity for officials of the European Powers to learn informally but directly the position of this Government on debt cancellation and it may dispose of that question completely.

His aversion to any scaling down of the indebtedness would prevent him from holding out any hope to the Europeans, should they renew the suggestion while he is there.

Nothing Important Pending.

The secretary will leave Washington when nothing will be pending before the Debt Refunding Commission, it being expected that the British negotiations will be concluded by that time. The Czechoslovakian Commission is adjusting its accounts with the War Department and Shipping Board and Treasury officials do not believe it will be ready to discuss refunding of its complete debt for several weeks. It was said at the Treasury nothing is pending with France, Italy or the other debtor powers.

The Treasury made clear the secretary is not going to Europe with the intention of taking up the debt question or pressing for other settlements along the line of the British agreement. A theory that he might seek conferences with Treasury heads of other nations was exploded at the department, where it was reiterated Mellon merely desired recreation with his family.

Under Secretary Gilbert will be in charge at the Treasury during the summer.

INCOME RETURNS UP TO MARK

Treasury Officials Report June 15 Collections at About $375,000,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16—Treasury officials stated late today reports of income tax collections due June 15 were coming in about as expected which indicates the June collections will run between $350,000,000 and $375,000,000. This compares with $463,000,000 for the income tax payment period of March 15, the March collections normally being the largest because of many full year payments at that time. It was stated that the total of the June collections will not be compiled for several days. The June collections of 1922 approximated $288,000,000.

MAN DECLARES HE WITNESSED BURIAL AT EVANSTON PIER

Story of B. H. Rouw, Clifton, Ariz., to Be Investigated as Possible Clew in Mount Case.

"CAN IDENTIFY 4," MESSAGE ASSERTS

Boys Said to Have Been Seen Lowering Body Into Rock-Filled Interior of Lake Pier.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 16. — Assistant State's Attorney Wharton left Chicago tonight for Clifton, Ariz., to investigate the report of B. H. Rouw there that he was an eye-witness to what police believe was the burial of Leighton Mount, Northwestern University student, under a pier in Evanston.

Rouw reported to State's Attorney Crowe in a message received here today that he saw four boys lower a body into the rock filled interior of a pier in Evanston the night Mount disappeared after a class rush and that several others "with funny looking caps" were standing about. He could identify at least four of them, he said.

Regarded as Strong Clew.

This message coming shortly after a coroner's jury had found that Mount "came to his death at the hands of some person or persons unknown" and a grand jury had investigated the mysterious disappearance of the student without results, is believed by members of the State's Attorney's office to be one of the srtongest clews unearthed since the investigation was started after a skeleton, believed to be that of Mount, was found under a pier several weeks ago.

"We traced Rouw to Arizona," Wharton said before he left, "and told authorities to communicate with him and have him tell the State's Attorney's office whether he knew anything about the Mount case. The message today was our first response.

"His statement that he can identify at least four persons involved would make it appear he was an eye-witness to the death or burial of Mount."

Rouw was not a student at Northwestern, but a visitor in Evanston at the time, he said, adding that he did not know he was wanted in the Mount case until informed by the local sheriff.

State's Attorney Crowe said the case will be reopened if Rouw's story stands up under investigation.

Text of Message.

The telegram received from Rouw read as follows:

"Did not know that I was sought in Leighton Mount case until informed by local Sheriff. I was a witness of the affair at the Evanston pier in September, 1921, and can identify at least four of those involved. Have good information and will assist all that I can. If presence desired, wire transportation and expense fund."

Information that Rouw claimed to be an eyewitness to hazing on the Evanston pier first was received at the State's Attorney's office in a letter mailed from Miami, Ariz., and signed by "Martingale."

Instructed by Authorities Not to Talk, Rouw Says.

By the Associated Press.

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 16.—Chicago authorities have instructed B. H. Rouw not to talk regarding his knowledge of the Mount killing mystery, according to a statement made to the Associated Press by Rouw by telephone from Clifton, Ariz., this afternoon. Rouw is not under arrest, as erroneously reported today.

Republican and Democratic Journals Join in Condemning Costly Cruise for 600 Personally-Invited Guests.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, June 16. The New York World tomorrow will print a page of editorial comment from newspapers all over the country on the "Million Dollar Joy Ride" of the Leviathan. Following are extracts from some of the editorials.

Boston Transcript—Mr. Lasker is gallant. Ladies can have invitations to the Leviathan trip to be kept as souvenirs of the voyage on which they were not permitted to go. No; it is not a junket that the Leviathan is going on—merely a quiet little sail on Volstead pond.

Boston Globe—Is Representative Madden, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who says he is going on the Leviathan junket to judge for himself of the necessity for the trip and to get some idea of its cost, taking the position of the man who studied vice in order to avoid it. Mr. Lasker's declaration, after a talk with Mr. Harding, that the President would never forgive him if he should cancel the invitations for the Leviathan junket trip, indicates that Mr. Harding is not going to try to shirk the responsibility.

Columbia, S. C. State—They that go down to the sea in Chairman Lasker's junket may live to regret their joy-ride.

Rochester Herald—With the Leviathan newly painted and renovated, and with the assurance of a big bucket of whitewash to await his return from the "million-dollar joy-ride," Mr. Lasker cheerily says "Let's Go!"

Baltimore Sun—The reasons advanced for Mr. Lasker's Leviathan junket are as wonderful as the ship itself. At first the purpose of this joy-ride was to "train the stewards," but that was insufficient for the retort that in this case the exclusion of ladies seems peculiar. Now it is the "circulating system" of the vessel which needs a trial, and the possibility of "minor mishaps" explains why the party is stag. If report is true the stewards and the "circulating system" will be trained together, and "minor mishaps" are not only possible but almost certain.

Houston Post.—The New York World says Chairman Lasker's stag party of 600 to make the trial trip on the Leviathan will cost the public from $200,000 to $1,000,000. We don't believe it. A properly arranged kitty system might collect enough out of 600 "stags" to pay all the expenses and then some.

Raleigh News and Observer.—The New York World figures that the junket on the Leviathan, on which 600 prominent editors and others have been invited, will cost nearly a million dollars. If a trip is necessary it suggests that Mr. Lasker invite the crippled soldiers who would be helped by a sea voyage.

Springfield Republican.—Ultimate responsibility for the Leviathan junket is evidently to be cast upon the experts who decreed that a trial trip was necessary. Having no political future at stake, they can stand it.

Chicago News.—It is not at all clear that this proposed trip is either necessary or desirable. The Leviathan has had one trial trip and is understood to be ready to enter the trans-Atlantic service. If a second trial trip is advisable why not invite sick and partially disabled ex-service men to be the guests of the Government instead of inviting politicians by the hundred? Even if the Democratic committee has wilfully overestimated the cost of the trip, the cost is certain to be considerable. The insurgents and aggressive Democrats in the Congress that will meet in December may be expected to improve every opportunity to attack the Harding administration and its policies. The projected sea junket would give them a rich topic for oratory. It should be abandoned for the sake of economy and as a concession to the anti-noise crusade.

Dallas Dispatch.—Al Lasker, retiring head of the United States Shipping Board, "world's greatest salesman," is going out of office in a blaze of glory. In fact, Al's "swan song" bids fair to rank with the most costly peace-time luxuries ever charged to the public purse of any people. One way and another, Al has been a mighty costly luxury to the plain people of his country. We don't know how much the total deficits of the Shipping Board have been because we haven't discovered any two accountants who can agree, but it runs into the hundred millions—everybody, even Al, admits that much.

Ohio State Journal.—Columbus would be fine if the New York World's vigorously critical comments on the junket planned by Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board for himself and 600 guests aboard the newly outfitted Leviathan should result in the abandonment of the grafting enterprise. The cost of the proposed junket is variously estimated, the lowest figure being $200,000 and the highest $1,000,000. But the amount of the cost in dollars is not the distressing thing. The distressing thing is that we have high in the public service men whose sense of honor and whose idea of the fitness of things are such that they can see no wrong, no faithlessness to their trust, no bad taste even, in spending any sum whatsoever of the public money in their charge on having a good time and entertaining their friends. Mr. Lasker, we fear, is only a particularly glaring example of a common type.

Illinois State Register, Springfield—Give Mr. Lasker of the United States Shipping Board an abundance of credit for one thing. He doesn't believe in petty larceny participation in expenditure of public funds to gratify official desire for pleasure. If the vernacular may be excused—"he's no piker." Give Mr. Lasker credit for being a "plunger." His generosity with public funds is tremendous. He has planned a trial trip and junket de luxe with the great ship—the Leviathan. No afternoon jaunt for him with a few friends and officials to test the engine! Not much! * * * And the people—the generous, indulgent people who love "Normalcy" and high taxes, who are so accustomed to seeing public office converted into a Christmas tree of free gifts, will at least congratulate Mr. Lasker upon his gall. They will be surprised if he doesn't decide to present the big ship to himself as a reward for perpetrating the prize joke of the present administration.

Pittsburg Post—The plans of Chairman Lasker of the United States Shipping Board to make the trial trip of the reconditioned Leviathan in Cuban waters a junket for some 600 of his political and social friends have brought suggestions from throughout the country that if the vessel needs such a test journey the guests on the Government-paid jaunt should be disabled veterans of the World War. * * * Let Lasker entertain his private friends at his own expense. In this case when the public money is being used let the guests on the trial trip—assuming that such a trip is necessary—be those to whom the public owes its best.

Louisville Courier Journal—Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board has heard the call of the sea, and none of the opposition to his million-dollar joy-ride will deter him one bit. He will sail away to the Islands of the Gulf, and with him will go a thousand or so junketers, who will take no thought of expense because Uncle Sam will pay the bill. He declares that the members of his party will agree with him after the lark that the test was absolutely necessary even if it cost nearly a million dollars. If the Leviathan could be put into service at this time it could reap the benefits of the heavy ocean travel now at its height. To delay this for the junket will be at the expense of hundreds of thousands of dollars, while the trip itself, it is estimated, will cost two-thirds of a transatlantic voyage, which for a vessel of the type of the Leviathan would be $400,000.

Chicago Tribune—When Chairman Lasker of the United States Shipping Board invites 600 guests for a si-day cruise on the Leviathan, the board's giant liner, before it starts its ocean schedule July 4, there is an explosion in politics and the Democratic National Committee calls it a million dollar joy ride." There is the inherent trouble with Government operation. You never can be sure what the motive is. * * * Even if the service on the Leviathan's first trip were bad, there would not be any political kick back in it, but teh kick back in Mr. Lasker's party will be as big as the ship itself. It is a party which a wise politican would not have. Mr. Lasker is retiring from office, but the responsibility will remain with the administration.

World-Herald, Omaha—Albert D. Lasker, retiring chairman of the United States Shipping Board, is going to demonstrate that the steamship Leviathan is a huge success. To inspire confidence in the public or for some equally good reason, Mr. Lasker and his friends are going to take the Leviathan on a trial trip to Cuba. Before the Leviathan is to be regularly commissioned for transatlantic voyage, Mr. Lasker and his 600 guests will risk their lives on the reconditioned vessel. It was not enough that an official test of the Leviathan's machinery was made on a trip from Newport News to Boston just recently. Other ships of the class of the Leviathan have been put into service with less extended trials than th Leviathan already has had, according to shipping men without the fold of the Shipping Board. But Mr. Lasker wants to give the vessel a trial with 600 of his personally chosen friends.

Kansas City Star—The New York World is trying to spoil Chairman Laskers Leviathan party. It reveals that he is going to spend at least $200,000 and perhaps a great deal more to take 600 invited guests on an ocean joy-ride aboard the reconditioned flagship of the United States Shipping Board—the largest, fastest and costliest liner afloat. It isn't a trial trip, the world insists. The Leviathan has had all such tests and has been approved for passenger service, and might now be reaping rich profits in carrying Americans to Europe but for these other plans of the Shipping Board chairman. Such is the World's cry to heaven and it wants to know what the taxpayers think about it. Well, it does look like an expensive party—or would if it were being given by a private citizen. But the World ought perhaps to reflect that looked at as a Government function it doesn't seem so unusual, and in point of expense is rather cheap than otherwise. It's the Government that's spending it, isn't it? Mr. Lasker is a Government official, isn't he?. More than that, he's a retiring Government official, and as such certainly is entitled to a farewell blowout. Making things pleasant for public officials is one of the first charges on Government.

NEGOTIATIONS ON FOR "LEAGUE OF BALTIC NATIONS"

Dragging of Russia and Germany Into League of Nations by Back Door One of Official Reasons Given.

By Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1923.)

BERLIN, June 2. — News that negotiations are now on for a "league of Baltic nations" leaked out today. A new shift in the balance of power in Europe, the dragging of Germany and Russia in through the back door of the League of Nations and a powerful Russo-German-Baltic-Scandinavian alliance for maintaining peace are the official reasons given.

However, neither Russia nor Germany are represented and both regard it as a cunning allied intrigue aimed at Berlin and Moscow under the pretense of aiding them.

At conferences at Helsingfore, Reval and Warsaw it was decided that all the nations to whom the Baltic Sea is vital for commercial purposes shall unite to develop trade and insure peace. The countries suggested were Germany, Russia, Poland, Esthonia, Lithdania, Latvia, Finland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

Neither Germany nor Russia participated officially or unofficially but invitations will go to them as soon as plans are developed.

The program of the preliminary conferences was that the new Baltic League send delegates to the League of Nations. The delegates would be sent from those countries now members of the League of Nations but instead of merely representing their own Governments they would also look after the interests of Russia and Germany—the only two not members at Geneva.

It is provided that in all matters in which members of the Baltic League are commonly interested, the Geneva delegates shall no longer receive instructions from their own capitals but from the directors of the Baltic League. The preliminary platform states that the Russo-German interests will be thus guarded until these two nations are members of the League of Nations.

Other planks in the proposed platform include neutralization of the Baltic and exclusion of warships from those waters. As a special concession Russia is to be given free harbor zones in Baltic ports. Provision is made for the eliminations, as far as possible, of customs and boundaries so as to facilitate trade.

WOMAN SUSPECTS INJURED MINISTER IS A HIGHWAYMAN

She Refuses to Let Him Ride in Auto and He Remains All Night on Pike's Peak.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., June 16.—The Rev. O. B. Sears, a minister of Bosworth, Mo., was refused passage on the last automobile leaving the summit of Pike's Peak last night, because a woman feared he would rob the party. She refused to take cognizance of the fact that he was suffering from severe sprains sustained when he fell fifty feet down the mountainside.

The Rev. Mr. Sears was found by an automobile party. When the party was ready to start the return trip one of the women took the chauffeur aside. "That man is a dangerous character," she whispered. "I've got a large sum of money with me, and I'm afraid."

She said he was faking his sprains and bruises and refused to return in the same car with him. No amount of argument could convince her that she had any duty toward an injured man and since she had the car rented there was nothing for him to do but remain on the summit for the night without medical care.

The Rev. Mr. Sears has a degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Virginia and for 26 years was a professor of Psychology in southern college for women.

CHAIRMAN ADAMS 'UNABLE TO GO' ON LEVIATHAN CRUISE

Likewise Secretary Lockwood of Republican National Committee Will Not Have Time to Make Trip.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—More prominent Republicans are suddenly discovering that they will be unable to be present on "The Million Dollar Joy Ride," which Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board is providing (at public expense) on the Leviathan. Chairman John T. Adams of the Republican National Committee, and George L. Lockwood, its secretary, announced today that they had declined Lasker's invitations.

Adams said he had recently been on a long sea trip and business matters had arisen which compelled him to forego joining the Leviathan junket. Lockwood explained that he had found he "could not spare the time." Both remarked that the countrywide disapproval of the "trial trip" had nothing to do with their refusals and both gave out assurances of their "full sympathy" with the junket.

Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican whip, likewise let it be known that he had turned down an invitation, and added that he did not "care to discuss it." and Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, former Republican floor leader in the House, said he found that "pressing business" of the War Finance Corporation would prevent his going along.

Madden Plans to Go.

Representative Madden of Illinois, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is one Republican who will be a passenger. He called on the President today and observed afterward that he would go on the Leviathan excursion in his official capacity, his committee having sanctioned the expense for "a trial trip." Madden avoided specific indorsement of the Lasker junket, however, confining himself to saying he believed "a trial trip" necessary to determine the ship's fitness for service.

"It will be impossible for me to get away from Washington," Adams said. "In view of the regional conferences we are holding, I found I could not leave, but I am in full sympathy with the purposes of the trip." He added that he considered the criticism unjustified and thought Lasker deserved commendation for getting "the Leviathan more advertising than any ship since Noah's Ark."

These declinations, nothwithstanding the carefully worded excuses, are wearing on Chairman Lasker's nerves. He exhibited signs of much irritability when requests were renewed today for his "personally conducted" passenger list. It will not be given out, he said with emphasis, until after the travelers board the ship at Bostbn and sign the register. Thereafter it will be available for the public's information, he declared, adding that this is the customary practice regarding passenger lists.

Efforts to find out on what he bases his attempt to shift the blame for the junket to the Democratic administration of the board under John Barton Payne met with the same silence that has characterized the board since the storm broke over the Leviathan cruise. But Democrats and Republicans alike who are indignant over the junket and are bent on congressional investigation, propose to nail this charge with finality.

Records Disprove Charge.

All the records indicate that such a trip as the Lasker junket was never mentioned until Lasker came into office. As Payne had resigned the chairmanship of the board nearly two years before the contract for reconditioning the ship was let, the Lasker critics cannot understand how Payne could have been responsible for the "trial ship" program which Lasker on several occasions has declared came under this contract.

The only proposals concerning the Leviathan during Payne's regime had to do with offers of the United States Mail and International Mercantile Marine, both of which wanted to buy the ship outright from the Government for $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 and then recondition and "trial trip" her, if necessary, themselves.

It was the Emergency Fleet Corporation, under Lasker, which awarded the reconditioning contract to the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., with President Harding's approval, on Feb. 15, 1922, and according to Lasker's own declarations this was the contract under which his "trial trip" was prescribed.

It was the leasing of the work to the Newport News concern that meant defeat for Senator Lodge of Massachusetts in the hot battle he waged in and out of the Senate to secure the contract for the Boston Navy Yard. Admiral Benson of the Shipping Board recently admitted that the Leviathan could have been put into final shape at Newport News, and thereby he indirectly confirmed the charges of citizens of that community who alleged that the only reason for Lasker's moving the ship to the Boston Navy Yard for drydocking and hull painting was as "a sop to Lodge and the old guard of Massachusetts."

Whether that "sop" has sufficiently appeased Senator Lodge to lead him to accept one of the junket bids is not known, Lasker refuses to say, but it is certain that scores of prominent Republicans who were asked to go are not going, and that resentment at Lasker's past acts, and fear for the future—with a congressional investigation looming—are not subordinate motives behind the studied declinations.

BROKERAGE FIRM, IN WALL STREET 70 YEARS, FAILS

House of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, With Strong German Connections, Forced Into Receivership.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Wall street, in the midst of a many-sided "clean-up" campaign directed primarily at bucket shops, was hit today by another failure—that of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, a member of the New York Stock Exchange and of the New York Curb Market.

Boasting a record of 70 years in the street, 28 of them as members of the Stock Exchange, the house, with strong German connections, was forced into a receivership with $11,000,000 liabilities. A statement of the firm, however, said its assets were ample to meet its obligations, provided they were administered wisely, although it was admitted that a large portion of them were "slow."

The failure was the first involving a Stock Exchange house in more than six months, although there have been a string of curb and Consolidated Exchange failures.

Dealt in German Marks.

Unlike most of the recent failures, there appeared no suspicion on the part of the authorities that Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne had bucketed orders. Their failure, it was indicated, was due primarily to unsuccessful oil promotions, and in a lesser degree of the falling market for German marks, in which they were the most extensive dealers in America.

Besides stock broking and dealing in foreign exchange, the firm did a large international banking business and it was this angle of the failure that appeared to give Stock Exchange members great concern. It was admitted that a number of travelers abroad had put their funds into letters of credit issued by the company and it was feared these travelers would find themselves embarrassed for funds and European banks no longer would honor the letters.

District Attorney Banton sent three of his staff to the firm as soon as news of the filing of a bankruptcy petition reached him and they obtained assurances from M. S. Borland, receiver, that he would make no stipulations with the firm that would prevent disclosure of their books. The firm issued a statement declaring they would welcome such scrutiny.

New Capital Obtained.

Knauth, Nachon & Kuhne, according to the Bishop Information Service, were involved with the Government during the war under the trading with the enemy act. Four members living in Germany were compelled to sever their connections, after which the firm was permitted to continue its business.

Last summer, it was said, the firm faced a serious crisis because of losses in foreign exchange. This situation was said to have been met by the introduction into the firm of new interests, who provided $4,000,000 additional capital.

In July, 1916, the firm's name appeared on a blacklist announced by the Foreign Trade Department of the British Foreign Office. All persons living in Great Britain were prohibited from doing business with it.

When a Federal grand jury investigated in 1916 the attempt to blow up the Welland Canal in September, 1914, it was found that many checks drawn by Capt. Fritz von Papen, former military attache of the German Embassy here, bore the name of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne.

Failure of Los Angeles Broker Laid to New York Crash.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 16.—Failure of A. W. Coote, Los Angeles stock broker, and member of the Chicago Board of Trade, the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and the San Francisco Stock Exchange, was announced today. The failure was attributed to the financial difficulties of Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne, members of the New York Stock Exchange.

Coste said tonight that his firm probably would be able to resume business as usual Monday morning.

TURKS DELAY DRY ENFORCEMENT

Aug. 1, Now Set as Date for Inaugurating Prohibition.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—On the eve of the data for the long postponed prohibition law finally going into effect, set for today, it was announced that there had been another postponement of beginning of the dry regime, this time to Aug. 1.

It is understood the difficulties of enforcement, due to the presence of foreign forces in the city and insistence of the Allies that places where alcoholic drinks might be obtained be kept open for these forces, actuated the Turkish Government in deciding upon the further delay.

AMERICAN LEGATION REPORTS IN DEATH OF STAMBOULISKY

Former Bulgarian Premier Slaying When Trying to Escape From Captors, Message States.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The new Bulgarian Government "is rapidly consolidating its position," according to an announcement at the State Department today based on a cablegram from the American legation at Sofia.

The message contained an official report of the death of former Premier Stamboulisky, saying he "was killed while attempting to escape when the military guard which captured him on June 14 was attacked en route to Sofia by a small band of agrarian sympathizers."

Special Cable to the Manchester Guardian, the Post-Dispatch and New York World. (Copyright, 1923.)

VIENNA, June 16.—The death of former Premier Stamboulisky strengthens considerably the position of Premier Zankoff's Government in Bulgaria. Reports come from Belgrade about fighting between the Bulgarian peasants and Government troops; it is said that Sofia is surrounded and isolated by the peasants. The Bulgarian Minister at Vienna today received a telegram from Foreign Secretary Kaloff denying these statements and declaring that perfect order reigns in Bulgaria.

The Tribuna, the organ of the radicals in Belgrade, declares that the Little Entente probably will be forced to restore order in Bulgaria and that "the Little Entente must follow its own interests."

SENATOR PEPPER BROADENS AMNESTY RECOMMENDATION

been set out previously in these dispatches as the conclusion of amnesty supporters—namely, that the Sacramento prisoners should be placed in the same category for the purpose of executive review of their cases as the Wichita and Chicago prisoners.

It is incontrovertible that the two last-named groups, since two separate Appellate courts threw out the counts charging them with acts of violence, are in jail only for the expression of opinion. The Sacramento case, like the others, was appealed, but the court sustained all the counts. This fact has been cited by Department of Justice officials as cancelling the claim that the Sacramento prisoners are "political" prisoners confined only for expression of opinion. They have some times been referred to vaguely as "murderers" and "dynamiters" though neither the charge of murder nor dynamiting figures in the "overt acts" alleged against them.

To say merely that the Court of Appeals affirmed the conviction of the Sacramento defendants leaves out the equally important fact that the court, owing to a delay in the filing of the bill of exceptions, did not have the evidence before it. The decision, therefore, was merely on the validity of the indictment. This fact has previously been noted, and Senator Pepper emphasized it again in his discussion of the case.

"Controling Precedent."

It is Senator Pepper's opinion that, when the appellate courts in the Wichita and Chicago cases, in the latter of which the full trial record was reviewed, reversed the conviction of the defendants on the "sabotage" counts, they established a "controlling precedent" which would have governed in the Sacramento case if the evidence had been reviewed.

The "sabotage" charge was the same in all three cases. Pepper holds, therefore, that, while there is a technical difference between the legal status of the Wichita and Chicago cases on the one hand and the Sacramento case on the other, there is no moral difference.

Pepper notes also in his summary of evidence prepared for the Department of Justice, that 42 of the 46 defendants at Sacramento, believing that prejudice against the I. W. W. made a fair trial impossible, offered no defense. In considering the cases Pepper announced that, if a defense had been made, the same points that were brought out for the defense in the Wichita and Chicago trials would have been developed at Sacramento.

A significant circumstance which Pepper does not overlook is that the chief witnesses for the Government at Sacramento were two members of the I. W. W., who got immunity for turning against their former associates and, according to the I. W. W., have since become professional witnesses against that organization.

Alleged Overt Acts.

Finally, Pepper has laid before the department the opinion that "overt acts" alleged to have been committed on one count of an indictment should not prejudice the case of a prisoner after that count has been thrown out and his imprisonment rests on a wholly different count not involving the use of violence.

Pepper holds, in short, that the "overt acts" cited against the Sacramento defendants, acts which, on analysis of the evidence, simmer down from the horrendous and mythical "dynamiting of bridges," to the alleged burning of haystacks, overturning of raisin trays, and so on, in various parts of California—have nothing whatever to do with the case. This is the incapable legal and moral fact, which holds even if, as is doubtful, the evidence warranted conviction.

Such is the view of a very distinguished constitutional lawyer.

MEXICAN RECOGNITION FORMULA OVERDUE

American Envoys Consider Sufficient Time for Definite Proposals Has Been Given.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, June 16.—The Mexican delegates were still unprepared to present their Government's proposals for a solution of the difficulties which prevent recognition by the United States and, after a brief session this morning, the mixed conference adjourned until Monday.

John Barton Payne, and Charles B. Warren, the American delegates disclaim any intention to hurry the presentation of the Mexican formula for making recognition possible but make plain that they consider sufficient time has been consumed in discussions during the last four weeks and the time has now arrived for the presentation of definite proposals. They assume that both the Mexican people and the Government desire recognition by the United States and it is up to the Government to advance concrete proposals that will make this possible.

Results of Failure Intimated.

Failure of the conference, it is intimated, would mean new political and finalcial difficulties for Mexico.

The prolonged discussion of the Mexican delegates with President Obregon relative to the concrete proposals which the Americans are awaiting is due, it is authoritatively stated, to the difficulty of evolving a method for granting the guarantees expected by the United States without discriminating against the rights of the Mexican citizens and provoking domestic opposition.

The points at issue have been narrowed down to the question of guarantees for American owned petroleum lands acquired under the Constitution of 1857, the alleged retroactive interpretation of the Constitution of 1917, and just compensation for American owned lands expropriated under the existing agrarian law.

Viewpoint of the U. S.

The viewpoint of the United States, which was presented with the request for definite proposals, consisted exclusively of extracts from documents which the Mexican delegates read in the minutes; these documents, comprising statements from the president, the foreign secretary and other executive officials together with Supreme Court rulings, bear out the contentions of the United States.

It is expected if the Mexicans reply is favorable that the conference will adjourn before the end of the coming week, with the commissioners reported immediately to the governments; but if the reply is unfavorable the conference may break up much sooner.

TWO NEGROES SHOT TO DEATH AFTER MARSHAL IS SLAIN

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., June 16.—The body of a negro, believed to be Ras Gaines, suspected of being involved in the slaying yesterday of Marshal Charles R. Bryant at Homestead, was found this morning half a mile south of Homestead and within 25 feet of the highway. It was covered with gunshot wounds and partially hidden in a hole.

William "Grey Ele" Simmons, a negro, yesterday was shot to death by a posse within an hour after it was learned the Marshal had been killed. Before his death Simmons is alleged to have told the posse that Gaines fired the shots that killed the Marshal.

Marshal Bryant was shot to death in a poolroom in the negro section of Homestead, when he attempted to make a liquor raid.

ROTARIANS BEGIN COMING INTO CITY FOR CONVENTION

Streets Bedecked With Flags and Emblems of Organization Which Will Bring 10,000 Visitors Here.

AUTOS TO BE LENT TO CARRY DELEGATES

About 2000 Owners Place Cars at Disposal of Visitors; Herman Spoehrer in Welcome Address Monday

Special and regular trains as early as yesterday began unloading into St. Louis for the fourteenth annual convention of the International Rotary Clubs, which will convene tomorrow in the Coliseum and continue through Friday.

Reservations in hotels and homes have been made for 9,500 Rotarians who in advance signified their intention of coming and the number of unannounced is expected to swell the attendance beyond the 10,000 mark. The visitors will include delegates from clubs in 22 different countries.

The city yesterday put on gala dress, downtown streets being overhung with flags of the nations and Rotary banners. Merchants began to deck their building and show windows with the flags and the Rotary emblem. Perhaps, the most unique feature of the reception of the visitors is that the St. Louis Rotary Club has persuaded 2,000 owners of automobiles to place their car at disposal of the visitors for whatever purpose they desire. These cars will carry windshield placards, with the invitation—"Rotarians, hop in."

Cars to Be at Station.

A large number of these cars will be parked about Union Station today and tomorrow prepared to carry incoming visitors to wherever they have made reservations for their stay in the city. Throughout the convention the cars will take stand at various points in the downtown district, prepared to answer the beckon of any one wearing the white badge of the convention.

The convention proper will be composed of about 1800 accredited delegates from the various clubs of which there are 1489 in 29 countries with a total membership of about 90,000. The first session will be tomorrow night at 8 p. m. in the Coliseum, given over chiefly to the ceremonies of welcome. The hospitality of St. Louis will be vouchsafed by President Herman Spoehrer of the St. Louis Club and Crawford C. McCullough of Fort Williams, Ont., who was president of the International Rotary last year, will make response.

Walter W. Head of Omaha, vice president of the American Bankers' Association, will deliver an address on "Patriotism," and a pageant conceived by Otto LeBron, a Rotarian of Chattanooga, Tenn., and staged by Joseph Solari of St. Louis, entitled "Rotary Garden of Nations" will be presented. It will consume about 20 minutes.

Business Begins Tuesday.

The convention will be brought to order for business Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock by President Raymond M. Havens of Kansas City, who will deliver the president's annual address, and give a memorial for Rotarians who have died during the year. A message from Paul P. Harris, who founded the idea of Rotary, will be given at this session.

Most of the programs are given over to matters of immediate interest in Rotary and the convention will conform to that order at its morning and afternoon sessions each day through Friday.

A few speeches having a broader interest are scattered through the proceedings. Chief among these will be that on "Citizenship," to be given Friday morning by the Right Honorable Arthur Meighan, member of Parliament and former Prime Minister of Canada; that to be given Thursday morning on "The Responsibilities of the Press," by K. James T. Williams, editor of the Boston Transcript; that on Wednesday morning on "The Employer-Employe Relationship in Great Britain and Ireland," by Sydney W. Pascall of London, and that also on Wednesday morning on "The First Contact in Business," by Sherman Rogers of New York.

The absorbing business interests of the convention are the annual election of officers and the adoption of resolutions which upon adoption become part of Rotary law. The nomination of officers will occur Thursday afternoon. A rule of Rotary is that there shall be no nominating "speeches." Candidates are presented simply by announcement of his name and the office with which his friends aspire to honor him. Election is by secret ballot, the polls remaining open until Friday afternoon, when tellers make known the result.

Changes Coming Up.

The presentation of resolutions comes on Thursday forenoon and action is taken immediately. Several fundamental changes in the organization of Rotary are contained in resolutions already framed for presentation.

Rotary makes the well-being of boys one of its chief concerns, and one program—that on Thursday afternoon—has such topics as these: "Dental and Health Clinics"; "Cooperation With Juvenile Courts"; "Block Programs"; "Educational Loan Funds"; "The Unprivileged Boy."

Specialized interests within Rotary will get attention at breakfast and dinner meetings. The District Governors will assemble each morning at breakfast and on various days of the week club presidents and club secretaries will hold conferences at breakfast. Other subjects to be considered at group assemblies are education, club programs and crippled children. Many group dinners among delegates gathering by territorial will be held about hotels during the evenings of convention week.

The entertainment features are arranged so as not to conflict with business sessions, except those arranged for approximately 2000 women expected to accompany the heads of their families.

River Excursion Tuesday.

The entertainment program will be begun Tuesday morning with a boat excursion on the Mississippi for the women and wives of St. Louis Rotary Club members. The Municipal Theater has been entirely reserved for visiting Rotarians on Tuesday night when "The Prince of Pilsen" will be given. Clubs several months ago chose this opera in a referendum. No person without the official white badge of the convention or the blue badge of its officers will be admitted to the theater on that night.

An organ recital by Charles Galloway will be given Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. in the Third Baptist church, Grand and Washington boulevards and will be followed by a reception and tea for the women at Strauss' Studio, Grand and Franklin avenue. Wednesday afternoon there will be no session of the convention, to permit conversion of the Coliseum for dancing at the President's ball in the evening. As a note on this ball, President Havens sent out a message to all clubs: "The President will leave his dress clothes at home." Visitors will be given choice of several events on that afternoon. There will be an automobile trip to Scott Field, where a program of flying stunts will be given. Other events are a visit to the plant of the Illinois Glass Co. at Alton and an entertainment and lunch by the Alton Rotary Club, automobile rides through the industrial section of the city, the Rotarian golf tournament at the Westwood Country Club and a ball game between the Cardinals and Giants for which 3,000 seats have been reserved.

Thursday's entertainment will be a visit to the Missouri Botanical Garden and the Forest Park Zoo for the women during the morning, a musicale and tea at Hotel Chase in the afternoon and a visit to Forest Park highlands at night. None except badge wearers will be admitted to that amusement park and no charge will be made for anything within.

Will Be "Rotary Week."

Mayor Kiel has formally designated the week as Rotary Week and has called upon St. Louisans to sustain their reputation for warmth of greeting of visitors. These visitors will not be distinguishable by any form of uniform, as Rotary discourages that convention procedure. However, some clubs evade just a little. The Chicago men will be conspicuous by reason of pink hats. Chicago was Rotary Club No. 1 and thereby gains the privilege of pink hats, as well as white trousers, blue coats, white shoes and canes.

Members of the St. Louis Rotary Club will wear blue and white striped hat bands and blue and white striped neckties.

A telephone exchange "Rotary" has been set up by the Bell Telephone Co. for the week. A call for "Rotary" will get a switchboard to which all telephones in the Coliseum and other central points of convention activity run.

There will be nine visiting bands made up of boys at the convention. They will be housed in the Municipal Lodging House on Twelfth street, which has been renovated and freshened up for them. The oldest and largest of the bands is the band of 110 pieces from Independence, Kan.

Golf and attendance trophies will be competed for by the visiting Rotarians. The attendance prize takes into consideration the number of delegates and the distance traveled. The golf trophy is being brought by the Scotch delegation which has won it in each competition since it was offered.

YOUTH, SHOT IN FIGHT WITH POLICEMAN, DIES

Roy D. C. Musgrave, 18, Fired at an Officer Who Had Halted Him on Street.

Roy D. C. Musgrave, 18 years old, of 207 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, died at city hospital at 5:30 p. m. yesterday from six bullet wounds inflicted by policemen during a revolver fight at Sixteenth street and Clark avenue early in the day. He had been listed as "Roy Mason" on the hospital books, but shortly before his death he told a nurse his real name and said his mother lived in Evansville, Ind.

When Musgrave and a companion, John S. Smith, 24 years old, of the same address in East St. Louis, were halted by Patrolmen Slezak and Moriaty for questioning, the former resisted. According to the officers' version of the affray, Musgrave fired one shot at Slazek, who returned his fire. Moriaty then ran up and shot five times at Musgrave. All six bullets took effect.

Smith said at Police Headquarters that he and Musgrave were broke and had come to St. Louis to steal an automobile. Failing to discover a prospect, at midnight Friday they started to the railroad yards to hold up trainmen. Smith said he was not armed.

FLOOD MAKES RIVER PLACID

Backwater From Missouri Stops Current in the Mississippi.

The Mississippi River, between the mouth of the Missouri and the mouth of the Illinois, has been practically at a standstill for the past several days. Back water from the Missouri, which is at flood, has stopped the Mississippi current and made the surface as placid as a lake. Stoppage of the current was aided by a falling stage in the Illinois. Out of the channel, where the current is normally sluggish, driftwood may be observed floating upstream.

NURSING AND TEACHER CENTER GETS $23,000

A fund of approximately $23,000 bequeathed by Miss Jennie Hildenbrandt for a charitable purpose will be turned over to the South Side Nursing and Teacher Center, Broadway and Lami street, by Mrs. Fannie Lachmund, an instructor at the Harris Teachers' College, who was named in the donor's will as trustee.

The center was organized for the purpose of teaching mothers how to make better homes and also to give them instruction in the care of children, but it has been in need of money to carry on the work. Mrs. Lachmund decided yesterday to permit the income from the bequest to be used to pay the salary of a woman worker. She appointed as cotrustees George S. Mepham, president of the oragnization, and Dr. George R. Dodson, pastor of the Church of the Unity, and C. O. Baxter, other officers.

Miss Hildenbrandt, who died Nov. 28, 1921, was a teacher in the St. Louis public schools for 17 years. The bequest left in charge of Mrs. Lachmund was a memorial to Miss Hildebrandt's mother, Mrs. Lena D. Hildebrandt. The will suggested that the fund be used to establish a domestic science school here but Mrs. Lachmund said there was not sufficient for this purpose.

The remainder of the estate, amounting to about $31,000, was left to the city for the benefit of the Bellefontaine Industrial School in memory of the late E. A. Hildebrandt, a real estate dealer, who was a brother of the teacher.

REVOLVERS FOUND ON YOUTHS

Three 17-Year-Old Boys Already Under Charges Arrested.

Three youths, against whom there are now charges in the court of criminal correction on weapon violations, were arrested yesterday at Academy avenue and the Suburban tracks by police who found revolvers in their possession. They are Tony Bova, of 1437 North Ninth street and Ben Cusamano and James Mercurio, both of 1420 Blair avenue. All gave their ages as 17.

The police found a loaded revolver in Cusamano's pocket and another one in Mercurio's pocket that was not loaded but in Mercurio's coat pocket were found five cartridges to fit the revolver. Warrants were issued charging them with carrying concealed weapons.

MISSOURI WOMAN CLAIMS SHE WAS "MRS. GUY MARONE" said, was corroborated by documentary evidence.

Mrs. Croker Taught Expression in Cisco, Tex., in 1911.

By the Associated Press.
ABILENE, Tex., June 16.—Mrs. Bula Croker, taught expression in the Britton training school at Cisco, Tex., in 1911, according to information received here, and was living in Cisco at the time witnesses testified at Dublin, Ireland, that she was living in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Henry Benham of Cisco received a cablegram from Mrs. Croker during the trial asking the name of the school in which Mrs. Croker taught. Mrs. Benham is supposed to have in her possession a letter from Mrs. Croker, dated Muskogee, Ok., March 29, 1911, telling of her situation in the Oklahoma city. She was known in Cisco is Miss Bula Benton Edmonson, it is stated.

By the Associated Press.
DALLAS, Tex., June 16.—Mrs. Bula Croker, or Bula Benton Edmonson, as she was known when teaching in Cisco, Tex., could not have been in Northampton, Mass., in October, 1911, according to Pat C. Miller, of Dallas, who was teaching in Cisco at the same time. She came to the Britton Training School at Cisco in September, 1911, and was teaching in Cisco until January, 1912, he said.

Witnesses Identified Mrs. Croker in Court as "Mrs. Marone."

Eight witnesses were taken to Dublin for the trial of the Croker will case. They testified they had known Mrs. Croker as Mrs. Marone. On the stand the widow denied she had ever been married to Marone or anyone else but Croker.

Richard Croker of Northampton, Mass., identified Mrs. Croker in court as the woman he had known as the wife of a tailor, who, he said, had lived in his house. The couple lived there, he said, for three years, except for brief periods each summer. Davies said Marone was an Italian about 30 years old.

Davies' wife also identified Mrs. Croker as the woman she had known as Mrs. Marone. Marone and his wife left her home, she said, when she gave them notice to vacate because "Mrs. Marone was a troublesome woman."

Charles W. Swift of Northampton testified he had employed Marone as a ladies' tailor and identified Mrs. Croker as his wife.

Charles Addis, an attorney of Northampton, testified he met Marone and his wife while they lived near his residence in Northampton. He positively identifed Mrs. Croker as the woman he knew as Marone's wife. She told him, he said, she was an Indian Princess of royal descent, and named the tribe from which she sprang.

Addis' wife also identified Mrs. Croker as the wife of Marone. She was often at the Addis home in the months of May and June of 1912, she said.

Mrs. Margaret McDonald of Moncton, N. B., testified she had employed Marone in her tailoring establishment in the spring of 1913 and had often seen his wife during that period. She identified Mrs. Croker as the woman.

Early in September, 1913, Mrs. McDonald said Mrs. Marone called to express her sympathy following the death of Mrs. McDonald's husband. The next time she saw her she was with Croker at Saratoga Springs. In 1915, the witness said, she was shown by a friend a newspaper picture of Mrs. Croker as an "Indian Princess" and remarked she was a Indian Princess, but the wife of her Italian tailor.

Mrs. Elroy, a woman employed by Mrs. McDonald, identified Mrs. Croker as the woman she had known as the wife of the Italian tailor, Marone.

Mrs. Croker denied that she was the wife of Marone when she was married to Croker. She also denied that she had ever been in Northampton, and said she never heard of Marone until she read in a Boston newspaper of the charge against her regarding him.

NEW AIR SERVICE UNITS OF 35TH DIVISION FILLED

Five Days of Recruiting Suffice to Provide Minimum Personnel of 101 Men, Most of Them Veterans.

INTEREST SPURRED BY COMING AIR RACES

Enlistment Papers to Be Checked Up Soon and Men Mustered Into Federal Service.

Five days of recruiting, ending yesterday, sufficed to provide the minimum personnel of 101 men for the new Air Service units of the Thirty-fifth Division (Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska of the National Guard to be stationed at St. Louis Field. The majority of the men who enlisted had experience in the air service of the United States, Great Britain or France during the World War.

Interest in the National Air Meet and Pulitzer race, to be held here in October, is believed to have contributed to the speed of making up the new units, which were awarded to St. Louis last Monday by Brigadier-General W. A. Raupp of the National Guard of Missouri. Allocation of the divisional aerial militia to Missouri had been obtained at Washington previously by a committee of the St. Louis Air Board, headed by Louis P. Aloe.

Will Elect 14 Officers

Enlistment papers will be checked up soon and the men mustered into Federal service, then they will elect 14 officers to be commissioned and these 14 will elect a Major to command them, under the administrative supervision of Col. C. S. Thornton of the 138th Infantry. There will be two captains, six First Lieutenants, five Second Lieutenants and a medical captain or First Lieutenant.

The recruiting office in the Chamber of Commerce Building will be kept open a few days longer, William B. Robertson, in charge, announced, to insure the filling of possible vacancies and to supply several positions requiring technical knowledge.

Must Have Technical Training.

Most of the noncommissioned officers and enlisted men must have technical training of some kind. For instance, the Observation Squadron, containing 54 men, will include flight chief, master mechanic, armorer, electrician, airplane and engine mechanics, radio, mess and truckmaster mechanics, all of whom will be Sergeants. The list of privates will include a blacksmith, bugler, cabinetmaker, chauffeurs, clerk, cooks, coppersmith, electrician, fabric worker, instrument repair man, metal worker, motorcyclists, radio operator, painter, vulcanizer, and gas welder. The Photo Section, in command of a First Lieutenant, who will serve as pilot observer, will include camera repair men and operators, chauffeurs, chemical mixer, developer, draftsmen, motorcyclists and printers, a total of five officers and 15 privates. The Intelligence Section will consist of a First Lieutenant, two Sergeants, two Corporals, and one private. The medical detachment will have one commissioned officer, or flight surgean, one sergeant, and three privates.

Members of the Flying Club of St. Louis who are to serve on various committees and officials of the National Air Meet will be named at a dinner meeting at the University Club at 7 p. m. tomorrow. The positions to be filled are 42 judges, 30 assistant starters, 10 assistant timers and seven members each of the Technical and Contest Committees. Members will be allowed to indicate their choice of service.

B. Russell Shaw, executive vice chairman of the Contest Committee of the National Aeronautic Association; B. F. Bush, director-general of the St. Louis Aeronautic Corporation, and Arthur B. Birge, general manager, will be guests.

Lists of Alleged Klansmen Distributed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
PARIS, Ill., June 16.—Thousands of leaflets purporting to give the names of members of the Paris Klu Klux Klan are being circulated here. These names are alleged to have been taken by a man who was arrested in Chicago and was held to the grand jury here on a charge of having stolen $310 from the klan treasury. The man had in his possession credentials said to be forgeries, from klan headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. He is alleged to have gained the confidence of the klan officials and to have copied the records supposedly for transmission to the imperial palace.

INDIAN WHO BROKE BACKS OF GERMANS OVER HIS KNEE DIES

Joe Younghawk Received Wounds After Three Years.

MANDAN, N. D., June 16.—Joe Younghawk, son of Young Hawk, one of the most famous of the old Indian scouts of Gen. George Custer, lost a four-year battle for life after he had been wounded and gassed while serving with the colors in France. He died at Bismarck, N. D., yesterday.

Younghawk underwent three operations, each time losing part of his right leg, but his condition had become complicated as a result of gas effects, and he failed to recover.

The wounds which contributed to Younghawk's death were suffered on the Soissons front when he was surrounded by five Germans and captured while on patrol duty. Awaiting a favorable moment, Younghawk turned on his captors, slew three with his hands, captured the other two and, although he himself was shot through both legs in the fight, marched them into camp.

Younghawk refused to discuss the fight with the Germans after his return other than to say that he broke their backs over his knee.

GIVES FLOUR TO ORPHANS

Two carloads of flour were shipped to Bremen, Germany, yesterday by F. P. Meyer, president of the Meyer Milling Co. here, as a donation in response to a recent request by the St. Boniface Society in Germany, a Catholic institution, which maintains an orphan's home in Bremen.

One of the cars is consigned to the German Red Cross and the other to the society. There are about 600 barrels in the two carloads altogether, valued at approximately $4000.

Wild Prairie Schooner in New York.

POLICE TRYING TO LEARN IF AIRPLANE FIGURED IN HOLDUP

10 last for carrying a concealed weapon and sentenced to nine months in jail, but again was set at liberty under an appeal.

Frank Morley, 22, a collector, 4452 Lexington avenue, for whom the police and Circuit Attorney have been looking for some time, and who was arrested at Taylor and Easton avenues Friday night, has been identified by one of the witnesses as being one of the men who were rowed across the river. On June 12, 1922, Morley and three other men were arrested in an automobile and later admitted perpetrating a series of holdups. Morley received immunity by testifying for the State once or twice, but failed to appear when wanted in another trial, hence was reindicted for robbery in the first degree, last December.

Six other men, some of them known as Eganites, were arrested in a general roundup Friday night. Two of them were found asleep in Maxwellton Inn, a St. Charles road roadhouse, which is conducted by William P. (Dinty) Colbeck, member of the Democratic City Committee and reputed leader of the Egan gang. One of them used as a pillow a bundle of newspapers in which was wrapped $447.90; nearby were two revolvers.

24 New $20 Bills on One.

Two of the others were arrested at Glasgow and Easton avenues. One of them had 24 new $20 bills which, he claimed, he had come by honestly. Two Eganites were arrested at their homes.

The automobile abandoned near Venice was identified as the property of L. E. Doerr, 6214 Washington boulevard, who reported it stolen June 9. Witnesses who saw the robbers speeding between Pocahontas and Collinsville after the robbery will be asked to look at the suspects under arrest. John Green, 63, the kidnaped mail messenger, who was ejected from the machine seven miles from Collinsville, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had been so excited that he thought he could not identify his assailants.

7 PLANES IN FLIGHT TO TEXAS LAND IN KANSAS

One of Machines Later Takes Air for Fort Sill, Ok.—Others Resume Trip Today.

By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURG, Kan., June 16.—The seven army planes in flight from Selfridge field, Mount Clemens, Mich., to San Antonio, Tex., reached here at 10:30 this morning and landed to take on gasoline and oil. One of the planes took the air at 2:40 this afternoon for Fort Sill, Ok. The other planes will leave here Sunday.

Flight Delayed When Planes Encounter Fog.

This squadron of seven Fokker monoplanes spent Friday night at Scott Field, and left there for Pittsburg, Kan., at 7:35 a. m. yesterday, a journey they made in about three hours. They had left Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, Mich., early Friday. Fog and severe rainstorms were encountered in a hop to Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., where the trip was delayed till afternoon waiting for the weather to clear up.

The primary purpose of the flight was to transfer the planes, which had served in the First Pursuit Group at Selfridge Field, to Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex., for advanced training use, but it had also been expected to demonstrate a theory that a group of military planes can be shifted readily between bases in one day. The route between Selfridge and Kelly fields is 1280 miles. On May 27 one plane flew from Houston, Tex., to Mount Clemens, between sunrise and sunset.

These monoplanes were built in the Fokker factory in Holland and are beauties of the air. The wings, of bright yellow-tan veneered wood, have a spread of about 35 feet. From propeller to rudder is about the same distance. The single seat has comfortable cushions and the pilot's vision ahead is beneath the wings, along the lines where two machine guns can be mounted. These weapons, when used, are synchronized to fire between the blades of the whirring propeller without striking them. There is provision to carry several light TNT bombs beneath the fuselage.

The motor is a 300-horsepower Hispano-Suiza, capable of developing speed of 145 miles an hour.

FORMER CASHIER ARRESTED IN CONNECTION WITH BANK ROBBERY

Three Men Accused of Complicity in Holdup of Mondovi (Wis.) Institution.

By the Associated Press.
EAU CLAIRE, Wis., June 16.—Three men, one a former cashier of the Mondovi State Bank, who were arrested yesterday on charges of complicity in the robbery of the institution, were held to the District Court on $7000 bail each following their preliminary hearings here last night. All pleaded not guilty. The men are George P. Orlady, city treasurer of Mondovi, former cashier of the bank; Ed Pericol, real estate dealer of Durand, and Arthur Cantrell of Downsville.

The information which led to the arrest of the three men came from Charles Bladd and Alfred Myers, who were arrested in the Twin Cities in May in connection with bank robberies. Bladd and Myers told authorities, it is alleged, that they were hired by Orlady, Pericol and Cantrell to commit certain robberies and that they had received $2000 for their part in the scheme. According to the alleged confession, Bladd and Myers robbed the Mondovi bank in December while Orlady was on duty. Robbery of the Downsville, Wis., bank last September also was attributed to Bladd and Myers.

INDICTED PRIEST FREED ON BOND

Father Grace Surrenders on Charge of Dry Law Violation.

By the Associated Press.
DENVER, June 16.—Father Walter A. Grace, pastor of a Catholic Church at Arvada, Colo., a suburb, indicted by the Federal grand jury at Pueblo on charges in connection with alleged violation of the prohibition laws, surrendered today and was released on $2500 bond.

Warrants for the arrest of Mrs. Katherine O'Connor, daughter of J. K. Mullen, wealthy Denver miller; and John R. Walsh, former Colorado ranger, and brother-in-law of Father Grace, also named in connection with alleged violation of the prohibition laws, were received at the office of the United States Marshal. Bond for Mrs. O'Connor and Walsh was set at $1000 each.

CODE CONVENTION IS NEARING CLOSE OF ITS BIG TASK

Members Predict That Delegates Will Complete Work on New Constitution Within Another Month.

JUDICIARY QUESTION YET TO BE PASSED ON

Redistricting Proposal Also Awaits Action; Committee on Phraseology and Arrangement Is Hardest Working Section.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 16.—The constitutional convention is nearing the close of its work. Members predict that its task will have been completed within another month.

That prediction may be a trifle optimistic, as much important work remains to be done. But the convention is working smoothly now and each day marks the accomplishment of progress toward the finish.

The first few weeks of the convention were devoted to the introduction of proposed amendments to the Constitution, 229 having been brought forward, many of them by delegates, others sent by outsiders and organizations. These were referred to 15 committees, each of which considered a separate portion of the Constitution. These committees brought in reports as they finished their deliberations, hundreds of hearings having been held during which the proponents and opponents of suggested changes were heard.

Reports Heard Separately.

Each report was taken up by the convention in committee of the whole for extended discussion and amendment without a record vote, all of the committee reports now having gone through that phase of the process. Committee of the whole is merely a term designating sessions of the entire convention during which propositions are discussed and tentative decisions reached, but without roll calls or other characteristics of formal sessions of the body.

As each committee report emerged from committee of the whole it was reported to the convention together with amendments adopted by committee of the whole. Another course of discussion, amending and decisions followed, this time with roll calls, however, whenever one-fifth of those present demanded.

As reports are disposed of by the convention proper, they go to the Phraseology Committee to have the language and punctuation carefully examined to the end that it means what it is intended to mean, then is returned with suggested changes to the convention for another discussion and vote before being sent to engrossment, which means the process of writing the first permanent record of the proposed changes in the Constitution.

After engrossment will come the final roll call section by section, at which time there can be no amendment nor debate, then organization of the entire work of the convention into the form of which it will be submitted to the people, after which the final draft and its accompanying "address to the people" will be signed and the convention will be through.

Status of Reports.

The reports of the various committees are in status as follows: that of Committee on Agriculture, Conservation and Industry has been rejected; those of Committees on Initiative and Referendum and on Preamble Boundaries and Bill of Rights have been ordered engrossed and printed; those of Committee on Suffrage and Elections and on Executive and Ministerial Department are pending for engrossment; that on Legislation is pending with suggestions of Phraseology Committee; those of Committees on State Officers and Salaries, on Public Health and Welfare, on Education, on Counties, Cities and Towns, on Taxation and Collections and Disbursement of Public Revenues and on Corporations are in the hands of Phraseology Committee; those on Military Affairs and Miscellaneous Provisions and on Judiciary are pending with amendments of Committee on the Whole.

Only one of the committee's charged with considering amendments to the Constitution has not yet reported to the convention, that on Senatorial Judicial and Congressional Redistricting, of which Henry P. Lay of Warsaw is chairman. Lay said that his committee can not report until the convention has determined what it will do with the judicial system of the State.

The temper of the committee and the convention is interpreted as unlikely to seek revision of the Democratic gerrymander of State Senatorial districts now in effect and which has been in effect for many years, although Republicans having a majority of one in the convention if Gov. Hyde ever fills the vacancies existing by resignation, probably could propose a revision if they determined to do so.

May Seek Redistricting.

There likely will be no effort either to interfere with the congressional districts, although they also constitute a Democratic gerrymander because of the doubt that the State can revise the districts without congressional permission.

Lay and several other members of the committee, however, are said to favor a judicial re-districting. The Republican Legislature in 1921 tried to redistrict the judicial circuits of the State so as to overturn the Democratic gerrymander and replace it with one of Republican persuasion, but the State Supreme Court held the enactments void, as it did the effort of Gov. Hyde, Secretary of State Becker and Attorney General Barrett to revise the State Senatorial Districts after the Legislature had purposely left that prerogative to the State officers who also are Republican.

The convention doubtless will dispose of the judiciary question this next week, after which the redistricting question speedily will be determined one way or another.

The hardest working section of the convention at this time, is the committee on phraseology and arrangement, which is toiling nightly over commas and phrases and the definitions of words. Its members are: George H. Williams, Webster Groves, chairman; R. E. Culver, St. Joseph; M. E. Benton, Neosho; A. M. Gossett, Kansas City, C. H. McClure, Warrensburg and Norman Cox, Joplin.

This committee like the remainder of the convention is striving to retain as much as possible of the present Constitution, and up to the present far more of the structure of that document has been retained than has been changed.

175 BABIES GRADUATED BY 10 CITY CLINICS

Each Youngster Presented With Diploma and Field Daisy—Short Program Given.

Graduation exercises for 175 babies about 2 years old who, in two years' attendance at the 10 child welfare clinics of the city, averaged between 75 and 100 per cent on regularity of attendance and healthfulness, were held yesterday afternoon at the Grand Avenue Community Center.

These babies so far have attended the clinics once or twice a month and will attend, if they remain as healthy, probably only four or five times a year until they enter school. Miss Josephine Goldsmith, superintendent of the Municipal Nurses, said that there were hundreds who failed to meet the rigid standards of graduation.

Two of the babies received a grade of 100 per cent, but it was explained that some of the physicians do not give a higher grade than 95, no matter how perfect the baby. Many of the lustiest of the lot were negro children.

The program was short. There was some music, Mrs. Frederick Roth, chairman of the nurses' board, made a short talk. Director of Public Welfare Cunliff said a few words, in which he emphasized that for better children we must "begin with the parents," and a diploma and a field daisy were presented to each graduate. There were no prizes.

WOMAN KILLED BY FALL AFTER WARNING SON ABOUT RAILING

Mrs. Mary Olsen Leaned Against Porch Banister That Had Not Been Nailed in Place.

Mrs. Mary N. Olsen, 47 years old, of 5212A South Compton avenue, was killed yesterday in a fall of twelve feet to a granitoid pavement beneath the back porch of her home.

Jacob L. Schaefer, owner of the property, who lives on the first floor of the flat, and who is a carpenter, was repairing the banister around the rear porch, and had set the new banister in position before nailing it. He left his work to get a drink of water. While he was gone Mrs. Olsen came out of her kitchen, leaned against the railing, which gave way and she fell to the pavement. Physicians were called, who pronounced her dead.

Her husband, Charles Olsen, told police that a few minutes prior to the accident, Mrs. Olsen had warned her son, Edgar, 19, about the banister.

SPENCER AND HARDING DISCUSS MISSOURI JOBS

Senator Still Thinks Garesche Will Be Appointed to Federal Bench.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—After conferring briefly with President Harding this afternoon on Missouri politics, Senator Spencer said that no appointment would be made to fill the vacant St. Louis Federal judgeship till after the opening of Congress in December. He added that he still believed former Circuit Judge Vital W. Garesche of St. Louis would be named. His support of Judge Garesche was so well understood, Spencer indicated, that additional recommendation on his part was unnecessary. He admitted, however, that the subject was discussed.

Spencer said that the matter of selecting a new Prohibition Director for Missouri to succeed W. H. Allen, who is ill, was touched on only casually. The President, he said, would apparently not take a very active part in filling of this office.

It develops that Senator Spencer is engaged in turn with E. Mott Reilly, former Governor of Porto Rico, and Jacob L. Babler, Republican National Committeeman for Missouri, over the prohibition directorship. Spencer has recommended B. F. Beazell of Chillicothe, now a special agent under Allen, while Reilly and Babler are urging the appointment of L. F. Dehart, an organization Republican of Mayesville, Mo. Both Reilly and Babler have been here in the interest of their candidate, and Reilly is still in town. Spencer said today that he thought an early decision would be given by Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair. He had indorsed Beazell, he said, largely because he thought it better to promote a man already in the prohibition organization than to bring in an outsider. However, he added, he had nothing against Dehart and thought he would fill the job capably if named. The same was true, in his opinion, of Gus O. Nations, St. Louis prohibition agent, who has also been put forward for the directorship. Though it was stated at prohibition headquarters yesterday that Allen had not resigned, all the Missouri politicians in the patronage scramble are going on the confident assumption that he is soon to be supplanted.

TRIO ACCUSED OF KILLING NEGRO

Men Alleged to Have Served On Coroner's Jury Returning Open Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

BRADENTOWN, Fla., June 16.—Sheriff Wingate had no trace today of John Sheffield, the third member of a trio alleged to have killed J. C. McMullen, aged negro, last month and then to have served as members of the coroner's jury which brought in a verdict that he "came to his death at the hands of parties unknown."

The other two, W. H. Grantham, formerly a deputy sheriff, and H. Robinson are being held without bail on a charge of murder pending a preliminary hearing. It became known today that Deputy Sheriff Bowdoin, who made the investigation that resulted in a hearing and arrest, based his inquiries on the fact that the negro had given him a tip on the location of a still near here. He destroyed the still but did not find the operators.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR LINCOLN FISCAL AGENCY

Millspaugh Placed Temporarily in Charge of Affairs of the Concern.

State Commissioner of Finance Frank C. Millspaugh yesterday was appointed by Circuit Judge Landwehr as temporary receiver of the Lincoln Fiscal Agency, selling agent for the Lincoln Housing Trust, for which Commissioner Millspaugh was appointed temporary receiver on June 12, last. The appointment was upon the commissioner's application.

This action was supplemental to the receivership of the housing trust, Commissioner Millspaugh said, as the business and conduct of the two concerns were inseparable. Attorneys for the agency said officers of the concern, who, with one exception, are trustees of the housing trust, had agreed to the receivership and believed it would expedite the reorganization of the housing trust into a building and loan company, now in progress.

The housing trust was thrown into a receivership on an order obtained by Millspaugh and his attorneys late last Tuesday night, to forestall a receivership suit filed by five contract holders. No immediate steps were taken to obtain a receivership order in the suit filed by the contract holders and Commissioner Millspaugh obtained the order himself by emergency action.

At that time reorganization of the company into a building and loan association was in progress, under supervision of Commissioner Millspaugh. The latter took charge of the company after the Supreme Court, on June 5, ruled the type of contract in use by most of the housing trusts in the State constituted a lottery. On May 4, last, Commissioner Millspaugh was named temporary receiver for 32 housing trusts in the State, suits being filed against them after the Legislature repealed the act under which they were formed.

The Lincoln Fiscal Agency is the active agent of the Lincoln Housing Trust, the petition filed yesterday, stated, and solicits and writes all contracts and conducts the business of the housing trust.

SISLER TO BE ATHLETIC ADVISOR AT NEW SCHOOL

Baseball Player Will Counsel Boys at John Burroughs Country Day Institute.

222D YALE COMMENCEMENT

Day Also Marks 150th Anniversary of Nathan Hale's Graduation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 16—The 222d Commencement at Yale University, which began tonight with the presentation of King Lear on the college campus by the Dramatic Association, marks the 150th anniversary of the graduation of Nathan Hale, patriot spy of the American revolution. In recognition of this event there will be a guard of honor at the Nathan Hale statue in front of Old Connecticut Hall on the college campus on Bacalaureate Sunday and on commencement day.

"MUNY" SWIMMING POOLS ARE OPENED

Small Boys Take Advantage of Opening Day at Marquette and Mullanphy.

Two of the four municipal swimming pools were opened yesterday, the Marquette at Osage street and Minnesota avenue and the Mullanphy at Eleventh and Mullanphy streets. Because of the increased heat in contrast to the comparative cold of the early part of the week, both pools were comfortably filled for all of the 40 minute shifts.

Less than five accidents marred the course of the day's dip and most of these, according to the guards, were small boys. The girls are few and give comparatively little trouble, as most of them are content to splash in the wading pool, although the more intrepid ones delight in going into the deep water and dive for each other's toes.

Youngsters in Form.

Remarkable form was displayed by even the smallest, boys in dashing from one side of the pool to the other. With little splashing they knifed their way through the water and the niceness and adeptness with which they dove from the highest and lowest rungs of the ladders gave the lie to the tradition that accords the country boy a superiority in natatorial pursuits.

Small boys in the rural "swimmin' holes are usually content to mud-crawl and play on the slippery slide while the larger youths brave the dangers of the deep water, but in the city pools, the smaller the boy the greater his intrepidity.

First in Everything.

Small boys dominate everything at the Marquette and the other pools They are first to dive from the bank and reach the deep water They are first to require the help of the life saver and first to sass him or poke fun at him if he happens to be fat. They are first to discover that the water is cold in one place and luke-warm in another spot. They are first to start games of tag and splash robed bystanders. They are first in almost everything, numbers, noise, scantiness of attire and badinage but last to leave the pool when the final bell rings. Then they have to be bodily pushed out by the army of guards who make the circuit of the pool, looking behind concrete piers to evict those who would stay in past the time limit.

Along Osage street in front of the dressing rooms the same scene is enacted everytime the closing bell rings for one period and another shift of humanity enters the pool. The pretzel and peanut man does a big business, for an hour in the water engenders an emptiness of the stomach such as only the swimmer knows.

COLLEGES DO NOT TRAIN MEN TO THINK, EDISON DECLARES

Something Wrong With the System, Inventor Says in Statement to Newspaper.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Although denying he opposes colleges, Thomas A. Edison declares that he is convinced that there is something wrong with the college system, in a statement today to the New York Tribune, in which he discusses the recent graduation of his youngest son, Theodore, from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He said he got some of his best men in the plant at West Orange, N. J., from colleges, but admitted that the 60 in his employ had been culled out of 2000.

"There is something wrong with the college system," he said, in explanation. "I do not know what the trouble is; that is not my line. I can only judge by the results. But there is one thing certain: The present system of education in the colleges does not train men to think. University presidents in criticising my questionnaires said that the college does not try to fill the students' mind with a lot of information, but teaches him where to find it. Yet, when we tried my questionnaire at one college, the students couldn't pass it because they didn't know where to find what they wanted.

"Culture is very nice, but it has nothing to do with the balance sheet. Most people seem to forget all their Latin as soon as they get out of school. Manufacturers and heads of industrial plants should get their men from the technical schools where men are taught to be accurate."

Major-General Neville to Speak Here.

A luncheon of particular interest to former service men is to be given at the Chamber of Commerce tomorrow, and tables will be set aside for their groups. Among those asked to speak are John G. Emery, past national commander of the American Legion, Major-General Wendell C. Neville of the Marine Corps of Washington, and United States Senators Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma and H. O. Bursum of New Mexico.

14-YEAR-OLD BOY DROWNED WHILE SWIMMING IN RIVER

Audrey Fortner Sinks in Mississippi When He Volunteered to Tow Log to Shore.

Audrey Fortner, 14 years old, son of Ashford L. Fortner, of 4383 Penrose street, was drowned in the Mississippi River, near Taylor avenue at 4 p. m. yesterday.

He had gone to the river with three companions. The boys played on a log some fifty feet from shore and then swam back to the bank. They noticed that the current was taking the log away and Fortner volunteered to swim out and tow it back. He sank within a few feet of the log. A reward of $100 is offered for the recovery of the body.

AVIATORS MADE TARGETS

Navy Department Says Fliers Are Being Shot at From Ground.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Officials of the Navy Department are greatly concerned over the practice of irresponsible persons in taking pot shots at airplanes and balloons in flight. The most recent case of this kind occurred a few days ago when a naval aeronaut was brought down while flying a free baloon over West Virginia. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt announced today that he is taking up the matter at once with Governor Morgan of West Virginia and urging his co-operation in putting a stop to the practice in that State.

"The Navy Department will do everything possible to stop this practice," said Col. Roosevelt. "It is only a question of time, if it continues, before loss of life results. Everp time an incident of this kind occurs in the future we will urge the Governor of the State to act. Apparently those responsible for this sort of thing fail to realize that it is just as serious an offense to take a shot at an airplane or balloon as it is to fire upon a passing automobile."

MUSIC FEDERATION ELECTION

Mrs. J F. Lyons Again Heads National Organization.

By the Associated Press.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 16.—John F. Lyons of Fort Worth, Texas; was re-elected president of the National Federation of Music Clubs at the session of the new executive board this afternoon. Mrs. Cecil Frankel of Los Angeles was elected vice-president, Mrs. Frances M. Clark, Camden, N. J., second vice-president, and Miss Nan Stephens, Atlanta, Ga., third vice-president.

Efforts will be made to interest Congress in the establishment of a National Conservatory of Music similar to those conducted in European countries, according to resolutions adopted this afternoon.

The federation adopted "America the Beautiful" as its official hymn.

PROTECTION IS URGED FOR WILD FLOWERS

Radio Speaker Says Thoughtless Destruction Endangers Many Native Plants.

Because of the thoughtless and in many cases the reckless destruction of the wild flowers of America, this country is in danger of losing many of her native plants, according to Lewis M. Dougan of St. Louis, an authority on the plant and bird life of North America, who spoke from radio station K S D last night. Already, Dougan said, some of the most valuable medicinal plants are almost exterminated because they have pretty flowers and attract the eye of the casual visitor to the country. In this vicinity bitter-sweet is very scarce, and in New England the trailing arbutus is becoming continually harder to find, for the same reason. Dougan urged his hearers to admire from afar for a while, until the plants can increase, or at least to cut rather than break or pull, thus injuring the entire plant.

Dougan's talk was one of two on last night's program. The other was an entertaining account of championship fishing given by James W. Jump, a former St. Louisan, who holds the world's record in light-tackle fishing. Jump is now living in Los Angeles, Cal.

The music of last night's program was given by Fred Sonnen's string orchestra and was of a very high order. Classical and popular numbers composed the program, which included several harmonica and 'cello soli played by Sonnen, a piano solo played by Miss Helen Moore, and a trio for flute, piano and 'cello in which Nicholas Wuenscher was the flutist.

PETITION FOR REMOVAL OF SWITCH TOWER AT CROSSING

Building Is Said to Obstruct View of Motorists Approaching Tracks

A petition for the removal of the switch-tower of the Illinois Terminal Railroad at the Ferguson avenue crossing in Wood River, Ill., where two St. Louis men recently were killed in an auto truck, was filed yesterday with the Illinois Commerce Commission by Mayor Nagel at the instance of the City Council. From time to time there has been agitation for the removal of the tower and it was once proposed by the Illinois Terminal that the company would not object if the city defrayed the expenses of moving the building. This offer the city declined.

The tower, erected at the crossing before the street was made, obstructs nearly half the width of the roadway! It is alleged the building obstructs the view of motorists and makes the crossing needlessly dangerous. The roads made defendants in the suit of the city are The Illinois Terminal, Big Four and Chicago and Alton.

DELIVERY TRUCK ROBBED

Two Armed Men Force Chauffeur to Drive Into Alley.

John Connors of 2806 Rutger street, a delivery chauffeur for Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney store, reported to the police that at 6 p. m. yesterday two men equipped with revolvers and a Ford halted him at 4208 Greer avenue.

One of the men forced him to drive his truck, loaded with packages, east to Warne avenue and thence to an alley where he took three bundles from the collection. The other followed in the automobile and both drove away with the bundles, he said.

NEW YORK BEATS BROWNS, 9 TO 4; CARDS WIN IN 12 INNINGS, 6 TO 5

Bob Shawkey Easily Wins Series Final

Yankees Pound Bayne and Wright for Big Lead — Meusel, Jacobson and Gerber Get Home Run Drives.

By G. W. Daley,
Baseball Writer, New York World.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Five games in four days against the Red Sox in Boston was a prospect that somewhat took the curse off a three out of four defeat at the hands of the New York Yankees for the Browns when they packed up tonight for the next move in their invasion of the East.

The Browns will engage in a double battle on Monday, Bunker Hill Day in the Hub. It's one of the baseball holidays of the year there. Its almost certain that they will have to face Jack Quinn, former Yankee, who has always given then considerable trouble, in one of the battles and probably George Murray in another. Shocker will be nominated for one struggle for the Browns and Dave Danforth for the second.

The fault of the Browns for the season so far, weak pitching, gave them practically no chance in the final battle with the Yankees. Unlike the game on Friday, when Pennock had them more or less looped, they peppered Bob Shawkey hard. They made ten good hits, and but for the weak sticking of Josh Billings, catching in place of the injured Severid and Collins, would have made several more runs. Billings hit into two double plays and completely spoiled two promising openings.

Bayne and Wright Falter.

But the pitching of Bill Bayne and Wayne Wright was a handicap that no ordinary hitting could overcome. Bill got by the first with flying colors when he struck out Babe Ruth and took Pipp's easy roller, after Witt had singled and gone to second on a passed ball by Billings. In the second he yielded a run that was directly traceable to an error by McManus. But there was no excuse for him in the third, and right there the ball game was lost. He passed a man, Witt, and after a double play had been missed by the narrowest of margins, he allowed Ruth, Pipp and Meusel to hit safely. Meusel's drive was a stinger into center. Jacobson should have had the ball, but he was fooled by a bad bound, the ball passed and the Yankee scorers gave Meusel a home run.

However, Meusel paid Jacobson in the sixth. With Tobin on second base, "Jake" lofted a fly to left. Meusel tried to back up for it instead of turning and running with the ball, and the pellet soared over his head and bounded into the bleachers. Ken Williams would have caught the ball easily. Meusel was a hefty hitter for the Yankees, but as an outfielder he was a liability.

Wright and his knuckle ball didn't prove to be the medicine needed to stop the Yankees. Wayne got by in the fourth, but in the fifth the Ruth-Meusel combination nicked him for a run and in the sixth he went to pieces altogether. He made an error on Shawkey's smack to the box and messed up Witt's crack to the same spot, and with Hofman's real double and Dugan's real single the Yanks got three runs.

Good Series Financially.

From a financial standpoint the Browns did very well on their stay in New York. They had three very big week day crowds on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and today about thirty thousand turned out, bringing the series total to about sixty thousand.

There is no truth in the report that Aaron Ward slid "with spikes flashing" at Pat Collins in Friday's game and intentionally spiked him. Miller Huggins received a wire from Phil Ball, owner of the Browns today, saying that such a story had been printed in St. Louis. The facts are that Ward really slid head first and that Collins in his anxiety to block the plate as every plucky catcher does, received a blow, over the eye as one of Ward's feet swung up—after the put out had been made. Collins and Ward joined in denying the story of any intentional spiking.

The Browns seem to be as badly off for catchers as the Yanks. Collins may be able to work on Monday. Severeid is coming around and hit in the ninth for Billings today and made a single. He may need a couple of days before going behind the bat regularly, however.

The Yankees have Schang on the hospital list. He may not catch for a week. In the meantime Freddy Hofmann is working with a torn finger nail on his throwing hand. The third string catcher, Bengough, can't hit, so the Yankee board of strategy keeps him out of the line-up.

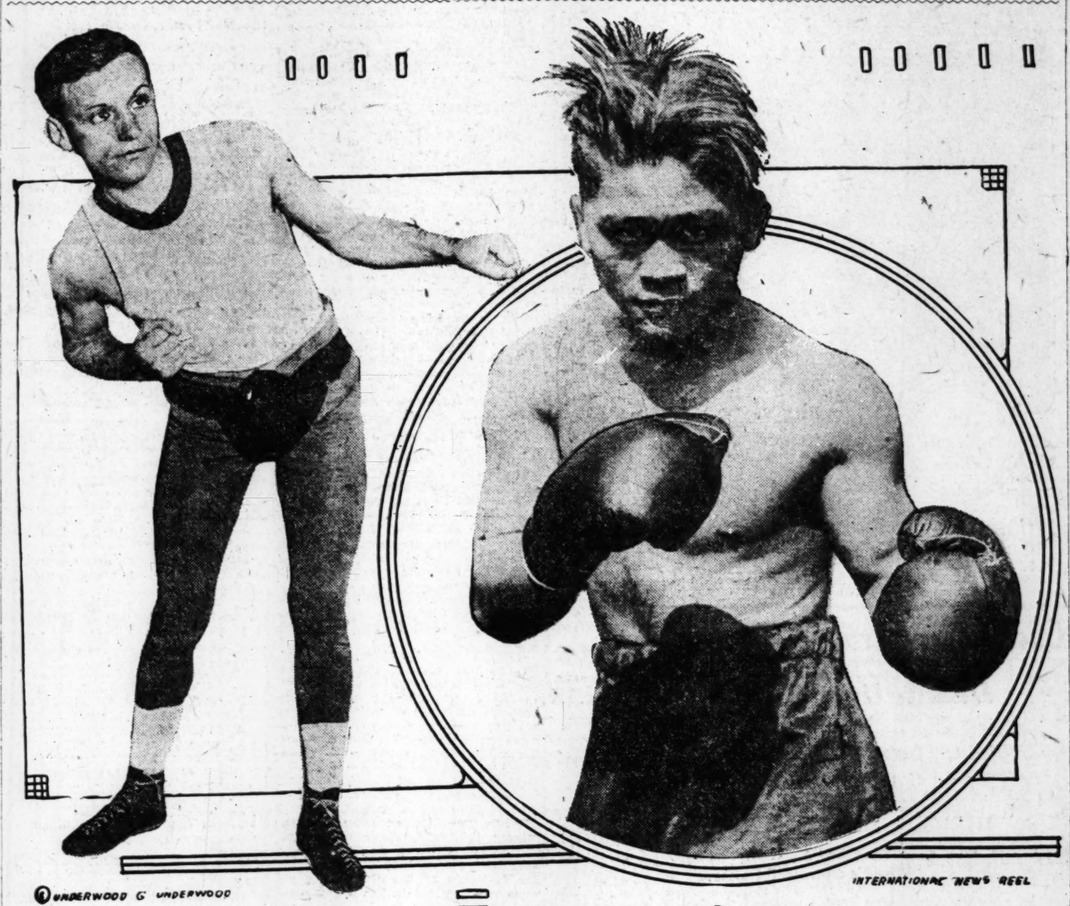
Briton and Filipino Who Battle for a World's Title Tomorrow



UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD — INTERNATIONAL NEWS REEL

JIMMY WILDE — PANCHO VILLA

Strange as it may seem, the "little brown man" of mixed race origin, is favored to beat the "Mighty Atom" esteemed the greatest fighter of his poundage the world ever knew, until Pete Herman knocked him out. The bout will be held at the Polo Grounds, New York, at night.

England's Last World's Title Menaced By Filipino Fighter; Jimmy Wilde Faces Hard Bout

Pancho Villa, Who Won and Lost the American Flyweight Championship, Has Youth and Aggressiveness to Match Against Briton's Craft and Long Experience.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch

No parades or brass bands met Jimmy Wilde, the pigmy fighter from Pontypridd, Wales, when he arrived from overseas to complete his training in America for his battle with Pancho Villa in defense of his title—a bout scheduled for tomorrow night. No ballyhoo men yawped about him and mighty few cameras clicked at him.

In fact, when you think of the fanfare that greeted Firpo, Mike McTigue and other momentary "wonders" of the ring world, it is natural to believe that Jimmy is just a nonentity and that the Firpos are the big luminaries of fistiana.

Quite the contrary is the case. Whereas Firpo is a big ham, while Mike McTigue could not get over $500 for his fights until he beat the wild-eyed, black clown Siki, Jimmy Wilde is not only a world's champion but the greatest little boxer that ever drew on a glove—pound for pound—and this bars nobody.

A great general, a scientific fighter who does not lay a glove on his foe except to wallop him, a game bird of the highest order is the little man, who won his title while weighing 100 pounds and who up to the present time has never fought a foe for his championship to whom he did not concede big weight.

Bout May Prove "Frost."

And yet, owning all the qualities that the big cheese department of fistiana lack, today finds him poorly heralded for his fight with the wildcat from the Philippines, Villa. It is possible that this fight, which takes place in the open air at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night, will, like the Criqui bout, be a financial fiasco.

Too bad if this should prove true, for it is a better match in every way, one with several dramatic aspects. Not least of these is the possibility that, for the first time in ring history, a man of a yellow race may rise to a world's championship. It is improbable, but by no means impossible, that this little nghting fool from Manila will beat the "Mighty Atom."

Villa is one imported star who made good, very good. He is not pure Moro and the slant eyes and yellow skin tells a story of mixed strains with the Mongolian predominating. No Chinese, Japanese or Malay has ever fought his way to the top, although Villa himself beat the sick and despondent Johnny Buff out of the American flyweight crown, shortly after Villa's advent to this country. He soon lost it on points to Frankie Genaro.

England's Last Hope Departs

Another angle is the fact that if Wilde is defeated, England, once the center of fistiana and the country that kept boxing alive through past centuries, will have lost its only remaining world's championship. The only man of near title class remaining in England would then be Roland Todd, a middelweight.

Still another unusual thing is the financial guarantee for Wilde, placed at $40,000 by far the greatest sum for which a man of his inches and poundage ever struggled. That's

Third $100,000 Ready Tuesday, Mike Collins Wires Post-Dispatch

PROMOTER MIKE COLLINS, one of the originators of the Shelby fight plan, answering a query from the Post-Dispatch today, wired that the seat sale reservation now warranted the expectation of an $800,000 gate for the Dempsey-Gibbons go. His telegram follows:

SHELBY, Mont., June 16.
J. E. Wray,
Sports Editor, Post-Dispatch.

Seat sale reservation now at $500,000 mark. Kearns can have his third $100,000 any time after Tuesday, when we will get money returns from Pacific Coast cities and Canada. Predict that receipts will go $800,000. Everything in arena is ready but the ring. That will be completed Tuesday when the Shelby bowl will be turned over by contractor.

THREE CONTESTS TODAY IN THE TROLLEY LEAGUE

With the opening games of the new schedule in the Trolley circuit having been postponed last week on account of rain, the six clubs will get started today.

At East St. Louis, the Tricity Packers, formerly the East St. Louis Grays, will meet the Chevolet Motors in the opening tilt. At Alton, Ill., the reorganized Alton Blues will tackle the Wales Chipmans of St. Louis. At Carlyle, Ill., the Boosters will make their debut in league baseball, opposing the Ben Millers of St. Louis.

POND GIVES FOUR HITS AND YALE WINS, 5-2

Reds Pound Nehf and Watson; Win From Giants, 9-1

Victory Is Ninth in Row for Moran's Men—Leaders Have Dropped Five Straight.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., June 16.—The Reds made a clean sweep of the four-game series with the champion Giants by winning today, 9 to 1. Nehf was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning, losing his second game of the series, and Watson, making his first appearance in a New York uniform, was pounded for six hits and six runs in the fifth.

Benton pitched airtight ball against his old teammates after the first inning, when Bancroft's double and Groh's single on the first two pitches, saved the champions from a shutout.

Hargrave hit over the left field fence for a home run in the fifth round.

It was the ninth straight victory for the Reds, breaking the season's record of eight straight held by the Giants. It was also the fifth straight defeat for New York.

Stock Ties Score in 10th With Single and Wins the Game in 12th

Bill Doak Forces In Two Runs With Bases on Balls in Ninth, Tying Count at 4-4—Rickeymen Pound Genewich and Barnes.

By Joseph F. Holland.

Milton Stock is one of the greatest pinch hitters in baseball. It will simplify matters to grant that at the outset. The grand stand managers and the men who have the second guess will stake their feeble reputations on his ability to drive in runs when runs are needed. In this connection it is certain that the final game of the series with the Braves yesterday is a case in point. Milton was up three times in the pinch and each time he hit. It followed that the Cardinals won 6 to 5 in 12 innings.

The victory enabled them to advance another step as the New York Giants dropped their fourth straight game to Cincinnati. Today New York opens a four-game series here with its pitching staff badly bent and the Cardinals only five games out of first place.

There were several times yesterday when the game was ready to desert to the Boston standard. But it so happened that Stock got a chance each time to save it and each time he came through. The climax occurred in the twelfth inning and may be dealt with first.

Flack dropped a single into left center with one out and sped to third when Toporcer crashed a single off McInnis' glove. With Bottomley, the leading hitter of the Cardinals at the plate, the Braves had cause for alarm and a conference. The conferees decided to pass Bottomley and take a chance on Stock, who is a right-handed hitter, and as such, is not to be regarded as dangerous as the southpaw swinger, Bottomley.

Stock There In the Pinch.

The patrons viewed the Boston course with acclaim.

"That's murder," said the grandstand manager.

"Merely contributory negligence," corrected the second guesser.

But regardless of the legal liability concerned, Stock hit the first ball pitched for a single to left and Flack scored with the deciding run.

That, of course, was the high light of the game. But the Cardinals came within one step of defeat in the tenth inning but the step Boston lacked gave that dangerous Stock person a chance to drive in the tieing run. Earl Smith drove a home run into the right field bleachers off Clyde Barfoot in the first half and apparently settled the issue.

Flack and Toporcer were infield outs in the Cardinal half when Bottomley crashed a long drive to deep left center. Nixon sprinted after the ball, turned, and threw up his gloved hand. The ball remained there for a fraction of a second and then fell to the turf. It was a two-base hit. Stock hit the first ball for a single to left, scoring Bottomley with the run that carried the game on until Milton had another chance to bat.

Stock the Whole Show.

There was one other occasion when Stock advanced to the plate with men on base. It was in the opening inning of the game with Joe Genewich, twice conqueror of the Giants, in the box. With Smith out, Flack singled to center and stopped at second on Toporcer's hit to the same territory. Bottomley forced Toporcer and Flack took third. Bottomley streaked for second on the next pitch and beat Earl Smith's throw. Stock then planted a single in left, scoring Flack and Bottomley, but was out at second trying to take advantage of a throw to the plate.

That completes the summary of Stock's offensive contribution. He drove in four runs, two of them when they had to be driven in, and he made four hits. One of the hits was wasted but the three that counted were sufficient.

Stock attained the hero stage only when Bill Doak blew up in the ninth inning with a 4—2 lead and passed two men with the bases filled to force in the tieing runs. But for this streak of wildness Stock would have played merely a steady instead of an exceptional and brilliant game.

Doak Falters in Ninth.

Doak pitched excellent ball for eight innings and Joe Genewich didn't do so bad. But Joe was los-

GUY MORTON SHUTS OUT MACKMEN WITH 3 HITS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—The Athletics were handed their first shutout of the season today when Cleveland won 8 to 0, in the third game of the series. Thirty thousand fans saw Morton hold the Mack sluggers to three hits, two of the scratch variety. Only four balls were hit to the outfield

Eddie Rommel was hit hard from the start by Speaker's hirelings. Thirteen safeties and seven runs were made off him during the eight innings he worked. Tris Speaker had three doubles and scored a pair of runs.

Wamby, at second, played a brilliant game for the winners accepting eleven chances without a miscue.

District Champion Manion Wins His Third State Golf Title by Beating Walter Kossman, 6 and 5

Forest Park Golfer's Slovenly Work With Putter Costs Him Several Holes and Gives Midland Valley Star an Easy Victory—Curran Wins Class A Cup.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, June 16.—There was no unexpected twist to the ending of the Missouri State Golf Tournament this afternoon at Milburn. What was anticipated came to pass and despite the warm support of the gallery for Walter Kossman, the Forest Park shooter, it was Jimmy Manion who, for the third time, annexed the championship.

The finish of the gruelling contest, made more difficult by the intense heat, came on the thirteenth green of the afternoon round. Here Kossman's crop of mishaps reached the crisis, for Manion won the hole and with it the match, 6 up and 5 to play.

The old, old story was rehashed in the play of the final match. The old struggle between the player who is sure, who is steady and a friend of the fairways, against the one who wastes his energies held true. Manion, recent winner of the St. Louis District Championship, profited by the mistakes made by Kossman, grinding out his shots with precision, and after the start of the last 18 there was little doubt as to the final outcome.

Kossman can blame his loss upon his putter for it was with this club that he showed up the poorest. The holes that he might have won easily by running short putts can't be counted upon the fingers of one hand. Whereas he finished the first nine of the morning two up he should have been five up. Fine, strong shots with his mashie, driven up to within two or three feet of the pin were thrown away with his lurid putting.

It was the same in the afternoon. On the very first hole he rimmed the cup on a two-foot putt, giving Manion a two-hole advantage. Later by brilliant playing he regained some of his lost ground but again the erratic streak cropped out and toward the finish he was playing in slovenly fashion.

Manion Plays Steadily.

Manion deserved the victory. He played heady golf, needed no more than two putts to the green, covered up his faults and looked at all times like the champion that he is. The sympathy of the gallery, which was not large but interested, plainly was with Kossman, who needed only a mediocre shot to bring hearty applause.

In each one of his matches in the tournament Manion, at one time or other, was down to his opponent. Facing defeat has become a familiar sight to the little champion and so to trail Kossman on the first nine of the morning had no effect whatever upon his shooting. Had Kossman holed the three putts then the lead might have cut some figure in Manion's reckoning but he didn't mind the two-hole advantage in the least and proceeded to wipe it out before the eighteenth had been finished.

Kossman Makes a Spectacular Shot, Hopping a Stymie to Hole a Putt

On the ninth green occurred a putt that set the gallery to gasping and it typified the earnestness of the contestants. Both were on the green with their thirds with Manion away. The champion laid his opponent a perfect stymie with Kossman some six feet from the cup.

Very deliberately the challenger pondered over the situation. Finally he chose a mashie, chipped the ball neatly over Manion's and into the cup. Feats as this are so rare, particularly in championship play, that the response from the gallery was particularly loud and long.

Starting the afternoon round one down Kossman then helped his opponent by missing a ridiculously easy putt on the nineteenth. On the twentieth he lay on the edge of the green with his third yet required three putts to sink the ball. Manion was down in a par four and held a three-hole lead.

The next two holes were halved and on the short fifth and sixth holes Kossman recovered two. On the fifth Manion's tee shot landed in the woods to the back of the green. A difficult stance here made his second shot require such maneuvering but he brought applause by running the ball into the green. However, Kossman was down in three and so won the hole.

Kossman Rallies.

On the sixth the challenger laid his tee shot within six feet of the cup. Manion was short of the green and pitched to within eight feet, sinking the putt. Kossman was not expected to sink his putt but he did, cutting down the advantage to one hole.

In the morning at the seventh tee Kossman had topped his drive into the rough about fifty yards away and a very similar shot in the afternoon cost him the hole. The eighth was halved but again weak putting sapped Kossman's chance on the ninth and the two turned with Manion again three in the lead.

There is very little left to tell. The eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth went to the champion, who played par golf. Kossman was through and knew it. On two of those holes his work on the green ruined his chances. On the eleventh his drive landed in a ditch, otherwise he might have halved the hole.

It was the second time Manion had won a state title over a Kansas City course. Two years ago at Hillcrest the little champion won from Ray Ouimet, winning as he did yesterday, with steady, consistent golf.

Ray Watson, Blue Hills shooter, captured the consolations flight honors from Thomas Malley of St. Louis, 3 up and 2 to play. In class A, J. B. Curran of St. Louis defeated E. R. McClelland of Mission, 6 and 5; B. R. C. Berrien, Milburn, defeated R. H. Ford, Jr., Swope Park, 2 and 1; in C, Oscar Borgquist, Milburn, defeated T. J. Moss, St. Louis Country Club, 8 and 6.

PIRATES VICTORS OVER TAILEND PHILS, 4 TO 1

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, June 16.—The Pirates won the deciding game of the series from the Phillies, 4 to 1. It was a pitchers' battle between Cooper and Weinert. Although the visitors outhit the Corsairs, Cooper was effective with men on bases, and would have scored a shutout but for Traynor's wild heave. Weinert allowed five hits, but three of them came in the third when the Pirates scored three runs. Carey and Bigbee both had triples and they figured in the scoring.

Champion Sarazen Explains in Detail Use of Mid-Iron Club

Advises Moderate Back Swing, Compact Stroke, and the Taking of a Bit of Turf as Helpful Points — Discourages Pronounced Pivoting.

By Gene Sarazen,
World's Champion Golfer.

(Copyright, 1923.)

In playing a mid-iron shot I address the ball with a slightly open stance. The distance between my feet is approximately 20 inches. From the right toe to the ball the distance measures about 24 inches, and from the left toe to the ball the distance is 26 inches.

Those are the approximate figures for the stance on this shot and if you will adopt them for your own use I am sure you will find this stance quite comfortable when you are addressing the ball with a mid-iron.

Of course, I am rather short in stature and others may find a wider stance better. But in any event be sure your stance is comfortable.

In taking the club back you follow principally the same line and directions as you would in driving. But, first of all, you must grip the club more firmly than you would the driver or brassie, with the right hand well on top of the shaft and the right forefinger and thumb doing most of the gripping.

The wrists should start the backswing, as they do with the driver. Take the club back slowly and along an inside arc, but remember to keep the right elbow down and in close to the body. To keep the stroke compact and to hit your irons firmly, you must swing from the inside.

The moment you swing the club outside or away from the body, you will cut across the ball and a bad slice will result. Therefore, throughout the stroke, remember to keep the arms in close to the body.

As you take the club back the left foot pivots and the left knee is turned in towards the ball in the same manner as when driving. But no matter how long the distance is to the hole, never bring the hands back higher than the right shoulder on the back swing, nor the club beyond the horizontal.

The horizontal is that line directly above and across the shoulders. If you swing the club back further than that you lose control; you are then swinging loosely and blindly, so to speak.

Takes a Little Turf.

The idea is to keep the stroke as compact as possible, so as to have perfect control of the club at all times. You will find, too, that you get a better punch into the shot if you do not swing back too far. If you feel you cannot make the required distance with your iron, take the wood, but never try to press the shot, for that kind invariably results in a miss. Remember, when in doubt use the longer club.

In my last article I said that an iron shot was different from the drive in that it was a direct hit rather than a sweep. That does not means you are to bring the club down on top of the ball, as you use an ax.

You swing the club in the same arc the driver follows, but instead of sweeping you strike directly at the ball and at the moment of impact the wrists tighten more than with the wood.

Now in making a direct hit, as I have just described, do not stab at the ball or stop the clubhead abruptly when it comes in contact with the ball and turf. Keep in mind the fact that you must always hit through the shot.

Therefore, it is essential that you take a little turf in order to avoid topping the ball and to keep the shot firm, and on a line. The finish of the stroke will depend mainly on the backswing and will be approximately the same.

When you address the ball the weight should be more on the left foot than on the right. Also the hands are held slightly forward of the clubhead and are kept down and in close to the body. You have undoubtedly seen many players in addressing the ball with their irons, hold the hands well out in front so that the shaft of the club is almost perpendicular from the hands to the ball. That is wrong. Keep the hands well down and make the backswing a little more flat than upright.

Throughout the swing the forearms and wrists must be kept stiff and the left arm especially is kept practically straight—not rigid, however—from the start to finish.

Try Hitting Through.

Although I have stated that the left foot and left knee are turned in towards the ball on the backswing, it is well to avoid pivoting too much. On the backswing the right knee stiffens and on the down swing the hands lead the club up to the moment of impact.

After you strike the ball, in following through try to keep the clubhead as close to the ground as possible following the flight of the ball. This will help you to stay down to the shot and to avoid toping. And, of course, the head must always be kept down with the eyes on the ball.

In hitting the ball with an iron don't try to jerk the ball off the ground. Swing the club evenly and firmly, the easier the better. Do not swing viciously and with all your strength. Think of hitting through the ball with an even swing and you will be surprised at the distance you get.

At the finish of the stroke the weight of the body should have been transferred entirely to the left leg, which receives the shock of the blow with the right foot on its toe and as in the case of most other full shots, the right shoulder and body should be turned so that the player is facing the hole.

Four St. Louisans Eligible for U. S. Golf Tournament

Wolff, Manion, Bockenkamp and Held Among 204 on Official List.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—An official eligible list 2 of 204 golfers for the 1923 national amateur championship, to be held, beginning Sept. 10 at the Flossmoor Country Club, near Chicago, was made public today by the Eligibility List Committee of the United States Golf Association. The list is headed by the present national titleholder, Jess W. Sweetser of the Siwanoy Club, Mount Vernon, N. Y., and an honor roll of 15 former amateur kings.

While this year's list is about the same size as in 1922, the committee in charge of it, headed by James D. Standish Jr., of Detroit, has scrutinized more closely than in the past records of the leading golfers, as a result of a decision by the U. S. G. A. several months ago, which, in effect, abolished the former system of determining eligibles by their handicap ratings. The committee's ratings, instead, have been based upon tournament records and personal knowledge of the players' ability. The U. S. G. A. explained that the change was made because of the great variation in handicap standards throughout the country.

List Open Until Aug. 25.

However, Standish pointed out, the fact that a golfer's name is not on the eligibility list does not necessarily bar him from competing in the amateur title event. Any amateur golfer who belongs to a member club of the U. S. G. A. may submit his entry to the Eligibility List Committee on or before Aug. 25. The ability of all such entrants will be investigated and the player notified as to his acceptance or refusal at least one week before the championship. No exception will be made, it was emphasized, on applications which are not filed by the date fixed.

The list includes the names of George Von Elm, of the Salt Lake City Country Club, who was banned in 1922 from amateur competition because of his connection with a sporting goods firm. Last April, however, the Executive Committee of the U. S. G. A. voted to lift Von Elm's suspension, effective Sept. 1, 1923, so that he will be able to enter the national championship.

Hunter Not Barred.

While the names of Willie Hunter, former British amateur champion, and Captain Ernest Carter, prominent Irish golfer, both of whom now are residents of the United States, were not included in the list, it was explained that no barrier has been raised against their entry. It was felt that they are not yet established in American amateur ranks sufficiently to warrant putting them on the list, but should either desire to compete in the national championship, their applications will be considered on the same basis as others not rated.

St. Louis golfers who are eligible for the tournament are Richard E. Bockenkamp and Jimmy Manion of Midland Valley; Eddie Held of Algonquin and Clarence Wolff of Sunset Hill.

(A complete list of the golfers eligible for the championship will be printed in this evening's special edition of the Post-Dispatch.)

IF VILLA DEFEATS WILDE, ENGLAND'S LAST TITLE GOES

about $5,000 more than "his weight in gold" would be worth, figured at $20 a Troy ounce.

As to the encounter from a fistic standpoint, spectators will see a tip-snorting affair, with the "little typhon from the Far East tearing in against a dead-shot left hand and a knockout right.

Descriptions of Villa's methods indicate that he is a fighter of the whirlwind type, who believes that a good attack obviates need of defense.

So it will—against all but a man like Wilde, a sharp shooter and thinker in the ring. If Wilde is himself Villa is as good as beaten now. But Wilde, reports say, is not the Wilde of old. He retired from the ring when knocked out by Pete Herman, who outweighed him 9 pounds, and was only lured back from a soft life by the big financial offer. He weighs about 110 pounds, whereas he formerly never defended his crown weighing over 108 pounds. The extra weight, his 31 years and his long rest may work against him in favor of the Little Brown Man.

Still, we think Jimmy is good enough to carry on, despite the handicaps. If he wins, we hope he does what only one or two champions in the past have done—retire unbeaten. Wilde is rich and does not need the money. Certainly he will not, after he brings home the bacon tomorrow.

St. Louis to Enter U. S. Title Soccer Series Again Next Fall

Local Elevens Must Strengthen to Compete Against East, Says President Barker — Rule Changes Made at Recent National Meeting Will Help.

By Herman Wecke,

Although the soccer season in St. Louis is not scheduled to open until next October, there are already signs of life as far as the St. Louis Soccer League, the local professional organization, is concerned. Officers for the coming year have been re-elected even at this early date, and henceforth there will be work for all concerned.

Much has to do with the 1923-24 competition for the United States championship. Some means of strengthening the local elevens for the competition to compete with the Eastern aggregations will have to be found.

The East at present holds the national trophy because the Scullins, St. Louis representatives in the final, were forced to forfeit, Tate Brady contending he would be unable to get an eleven fit to put up a real battle, following the tie clash with Paterson. The championship was definitely awarded the Eastern eleven at the recent meeting in Cleveland.

Local Eleven Will Enter.

St. Louis will again be represented in the competition, it was announced by President Winton E. Barker. However, it has not been decided whether only one or all four teams will try for the title. This will be decided at a later date.

"We will be represented," said President Barker, "but we must find some way whereby we will be able to strengthen our team to compete against the East. From all reports, the Easterners are again strengthening up as much as possible with just one idea in mind—that of defeating St. Louis. For that reason we must take some steps to counteract these activities in the East."

While the St. Louis proposition to play a series of best two out of three games for the national championship was voted down at the recent U. S. F. A. meeting, several rules were passed which will help St. Louis. One of these had it been left the way it was put through at the previous gathering would have worked a decided hardship on the St. Louisans.

Neutral Ground Law Changed.

The rule in question was the one which stated that the championship clash must be played on a neutral ground. Hereafter (unless another change is made at the next meeting) the game need not be played on a neutral field, but can be played on the home grounds of one of the contending teams. Under the old law, the game could not be played at High School Field with a local eleven as a finalist. Now, however it can.

Another change, which should help St. Louis as well as other soccer centers, is the law which permits an eleven to carry 22 players on its roster instead of only 18, as has been the case in previous campaigns.

Municipal League Is No Longer Member of Missouri Soccer Body

THE Municipal Soccer Association, since it has been given separate recognition by the United States Football Association, will no longer be identified with the Missouri State Division, it was announced by Winton Barker.

At the annual meeting, the Municipal Association was given one vote for 25 teams, and one for every additional 30 elevens.

As a result of this, the Municipal Association will handle its own affairs as regards cup contests, and will be answerable only to the national body.

A change also was made in the matter of registering athletes to have them eligible for the final. Heretofore, a player had to be signed prior to the game preceding the semifinal to be able to play in the title battle. Now, however, it will be possible to sign him a day before the semifinal contest.

To Sign Players Early.

President Barker, re-elected at a recent meeting of the St. Louis Soccer League, made the announcement that he would make an effort to have the four managers get all of their players in line by Sept. 15 the coming season, instead of waiting until the last minute to sign them.

The league will open its season probably the second Sunday in October and will again play its contests at High School Field, which has been the home of the circuit for the past few campaigns.

As a result of this, Barker will make an effort to have the managers get the athletes who are not playing baseball, in condition for the opening, so that the fans will be treated to real soccer the first clash of the year.

Barker will appoint committees to handle the various affairs of the circuit within the next few days.

Other officers of the league who were re-elected were J. G. Barrett, vice president; Phil Riley, treasurer; Sid C. Keener, corresponding secretary, and Charles Bartley, recording secretary.

At the last meeting nothing was decided regarding referees for the coming year. Last season the league introduced the double referee system, and also numbered its players for the late games of the campaign.

HAGEN ANNOUNCES HE WILL TRY AGAIN FOR BRITISH OPEN TITLE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TROON, Scotland, June 16.—"I'll be back again," declared Walter Hagen, the 1922 British open champion, as he sailed for the United States on the Berengaria today after a vain but courageous attempt to again win the open championship. With him asiled Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Leeo Diegel and Charlie Hoffner.

Hagen missed out winning by the narrow margin of one stroke, Arthur Gladstone Havers, a youthful British professional, bringing the classic back to England with a score of 295.

"I can't blame the weather," Hagen said, "but it was a factor against us. We got frightfully cold waiting to drive off."

WINN EQUALS RECORD ESTABLISHED BY MATTY

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Portsiders usually are said to be notorious for lack of control, but George Winn, a left-handed pitcher, recently sent to the New Orleans Southern Association club by Cleveland, threw only 68 balls to the 30 Nashville batters to face him here yesterday and equalled Christy Mathewson's control record of a decade ago, according to fans inclined to statistics.

Winn held the Volunteers to two hits and had pitched a perfect game until Foss, at third base, made a bad throw of Perritt's grounder in the sixth. Of the three Nashville men to get on the paths, one scored, one was cut down in a double play and the other was left on base. Only three of the visitors went to strike-out route.

JOE BECKETT UNABLE TO BOX CARPENTIER JULY 4

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, June 16.—Joe Beckett, British heavyweight, announced today that he would be unable to fight Georges Carpentier, the former French champion, July 4, in London, as scheduled.

Beckett's left hand, which he injured in his fight with Dick Smith last month, has not healed sufficiently to permit of another ring battle so soon, he said.

STOCK TIES SCORE IN TENTH; HIS HIT WINS GAME IN 12TH

ing by two runs when Earl Smith opened the ninth with a single. Doak fanned Pinch Hitter Bagwell and then Pinch Hitter Gibson beat out a tap that Bottomley missed after a hard try. Bill then struck out Pinch Hitter Felix but Nixon beat out a little tap down the third base line and the bases were filled.

It was at this point that Doak passed Powell and Southworth, forcing in Earl Smith and Gibson with the runs that prolonged the issue three innings.

Haines or Sherdel Today.

Jess Haines or Bill Sherdel will pitch against the Giants in the pending game of the series today. Jack Bentley, or John Scott, who recently recovered from a badly split finger on his pitching hand, will attempt to terminate the string of New York defeats.

Most of the reserved seats are sold, but a block of them will be placed on sale at the park this morning. The attendance is likely to run into the overflow stage for the first time since the memorable 1922 series between the Yanks and Browns.

Harry McCurdy, the Cardinal catcher, narrowly escaped serious injury in the eighth inning when he tripped while chasing Powell's foul and lunged into the concrete base of the stand. He lost consciousness for a minute but resumed play when he was revived. It was a courageous attempt to get the ball and again raises the question of how far a player must go to get foul balls close to the hard fences.

Earl Smith is certainly a prize. Regardless of his behavior off the field he is a great batter and a great catcher, with plenty of aggressiveness and a winning spirit, on the field. He made three hits yesterday, including a homer, and drove in two runs.

Fagen Gives Five Hits.

"Buck" Hagen, former St. Louis U. High School star, pitching for Kampsville, Ill., gained a 9—3 victory over Pearl, Ill., in his last out, wielding only five hits and striking out 10 batters. He walked but two men. Allen, another St. Louis boy, is playing short for Kampsville.

Siki Disqualified In Sixth Round of Morelle Contest

Battle Even Up to Time of Foul—Senegalese Refuses to Weigh In.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 16.—Battling Siki was disqualified in the sixth round of his match with Morelle here tonight. Morelle was fouled, being carried from the ring unconscious.

Siki was penalized for hitting low the belt and Morelle, although writhing in agony in his corner, was declared the winner, much to the mystification of his Senegalese opponent.

For the first five rounds the men fought evenly; then in the sixth Siki landed a blow which crumpled Morelle up. He sank limply on the floor. The timekeeper immediately announced time out and the referee made no motion to count. The judges hastily conferred and unanimously decided that Siki had fouled.

Prior to the beginning of the fight, the officials at the ringside announced that no title was at stake as the Senegalese had refused to weight in, notwithstanding his appearance for that purpose in the afternoon.

Morelle Forces Fighting.

While the judges conferred over Siki's blow in the sixth, the Senegalese stood nonchalantly in his corner in an attitude of complete satisfaction that he had won by a knockout. Surveying the crowd of fight fans, many of whom were in evening dress, the Battler bowed theatrically to mingled shouts of derision and applause, apparently assuming that the "booes" were almost drowned out the cheers, was not for him.

When the judges announced that the black fighter had been disqualified the applause of approval rose above the shouts of derision. At this time Siki himself was convinced that he had not won as he climbed reluctantly from the ring. Morelle in the meantime was carried from the ring half unconscious on the shoulders of his trainers, unknowing or caring about the result.

Morelle, who holds the middleweight championship of France, from the very beginning forced the fighting, and seemed to have no fear whatever of the Senegalese. The latter, who did not train seriously for the bout, was nevertheless as hard as nails and Morelle's blows which were delivered repeatedly caused little damage.

DEPOSITIONS TAKEN IN COAST LEAGUE WRANGLE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 16.—The taking of depositions before a commissioner of the Federal District Court in the action to compel William H. McCarthy, president of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, to recognize Charles Lockard as a director of the Seattle club was resumed here today.

After Lockard had filed a bill in the court in San Francisco McCarthy obtained an order in the court here to have depositions taken of Lockard, Wade Killefer and others. Robert Killefer, a cousin of Wade Killefer, one of the owners of the Seattle club, testified he, on March 14, endorsed a 33-day note for $125,000 signed by Wade Killefer and Lockard. He said Wade Killefer explained he wanted the money to complete the purchase of stock in the Seattle club.

He said the stock was to be deposited as collateral and the note could then be paid. This was done, he testified, and the canceled note was admitted in evidence.

Michigan Wins National Title Meet; Brookins Sets New World's Record; Anderwert Places, but Bier Fails

Wolverines Run Up 31 Points to Gain Victory — Hawkeye Star Negotiates 220 Low Hurdles Around Turn in 23.9 —Six Other Mar ks Are Shattered.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Seventeen men from the University of Michigan nailed the leader's flag to their mast-head today by winning the championship track and field games of the National Collegiate Athletic Association from a fighting array of picked men from sixty-two institutions representing every section of America.

The Wolverine stars, with 31 points, far outdistanced the field, often leaving dust in the eyes of competitors with teams twice her size pitted against her. Leland Stanford, with another band of seventeen masters, followed Michigan in the scramble for points with 14 1-2, taking second position by a slim margin of half a point.

The University of Iowa and Johns Hopkins tied for third place with 14 each. Pennsylvania State College was next with 13 1-2. The University of Illinois and Mississippi A. & M., tied for sixth place with 13 each, and the University of Southern California was number eight with twelve. Ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth, were Chicago, Kansas State Agricultural College, the University of Kansas and Wabash College with 11 1-10, 8 1-2, 8 and 8 in points.

Brookins Sets World Record.

A new world record and six new marks for the N. C. A. A. games came out of the meet. Walter Brookins, star hurdler of the University of Iowa, set a new world's record of 23.9 seconds for the 220 yard low hurdles around one turn, bettering by three-tenths of a second his own world mark of 24.2 seconds. Within a half hour, the brilliant Hawkeye slipped another three-tenths from the best time, negotiating the finals in 23.6 seconds, but the mark will not be recognized, because one of the barriers was upset.

The national collegiate games records which fell were in the board jump, pole vault, hammer throw, shot put, half-mile run, and 220 low hurdles.

De Hart Hubbard, Michigan's negro point-maker, set a new record of 25 feet 2 inches in the broad jump, bettering by 13 inches the old mark made by Le Gendre of Georgetown in the 1922 meet. The new N. C. A. A. mark is within one inch of the world's record of E. O. Gourdin, of Harvard, in 1921, and is a half-inch better than the best distance this year in the Eastern collegiate, Western conference, Missouri Valley, or Drake meets. It is nine and one-half inches better than the Eastern collegiate record made by Kraenzlein of the University of Pennsylvania, in 1899.

McKown and Brooker Tie.

McKown of the Kansas State Teachers' College ad Brooker of Michigan shared honors in setting a new record for the N. C. A. A. pole vault. The pair tied at 13 feet, just six inches above the old mark, established joihtly in 1922 by Norris of California and Landowski of Michigan.

Although failing short of his own intercollegiate record of 181 feet 6 1-2 inches in the hammer throw, Fred Tootell of Bowdoin set a new record for the games at 175 feet one inch, which is 13 feet 9 inches better than was made last year by Merchant of California. Tootell threw the hammer time after time, battering the record with each attempt.

Norman Anderson of the University of Southern California made the new record in the shot put with a throw of 46 feet 8 inches, a foot 3¼ inches better than the former record made by Pope of the University of Washington in 1921.

Clarke Ties Dash Record.

The only track record to fall besides the 220-hurdles was the half-mile which was won in grand style by Helffrich of Penn State in 1m. 56 5-10s. 9-10 of a second faster than the mak by Eby of the University of Pennsylvania in 1921., Enck of Penn State finished third in the half-mile after having previously taken first place in the mile run.

One of the surprises of the meet was the showing made by Johns Hopkins University, which tied with Iowa for third place. The school had only two entrants. L. Clarke, individual point winner of the competition, who tied the N. C. A. A. record in the 100-yard dash, running it in 9.9 seconds, was largely responsible for the showing of the Baltimore squad. He won the century, and a half hour later placed second in the 220-yard dash for a total of 9 points. Booth added another 5 to Clarke's markers by winning the 2-mile run after he had been pushed by Crippen of Northwestern in the last 100 yards.

The 440-yard run was a thrilling race, with the finish so close that some difficulty was experienced by the judges in determining the standings. Cochran of Mississippi A. and M. won. He was far in front of the field for mosct of the time, but his start was too fast, and in the last quarter he was hard pressed by Smith of Kalamazoo State Normal.

Hubbard's win in the broad jump was the only first place taken by the Michigan team.

Anderwert, representing Washington University of St. Louis, placed in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, but Bier, who qualified in the quarter-mile yesterday, failed to get in among the first six in today's final.

Michigan's championship was earned by places in 10 or 15 events. Standford was second in spite of her failure to take a single first. The Californians, however, placed men in seven contests. Thirty-give schools placed in the point column.

"Boots" Lever Sets World's Records for 65 and 75 Yard Runs

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.

HAROLD "Boots" Lever, of the University of Pennsylvania, 100 yards intercollegiate champion, broke the 65-yard and the 75-yard world records today on Franklin Field.

His time for the shorter distance was 6 8-10 seconds, or one-fifth second better than the previous record held by his coach, Lawson Robertson. In the 75-yard dash, Lever covered the distance in 7 5-10 seconds, one-tenth of a second under the old mark. The previous record for 75 yards was held by Howard Drew. Robertson's record has stood for 15 years.

Lever ran with Kehoe of the Enterprise A. C., Philadelphia; Shattuck and McHugh of the Pennsylvania team. Shattuck finished second and Kehoe third.

Louis Goldsmith, A. A. U. representative in the Middle Atlantic district, who was in charge, after verifying the times, announced that they would be presented to the A. A. U. for official approval.

Yale Track Team Defeats Harvard

Three Records Shattered — Eli Gains 11 Firsts to Only Four for Crimson.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 16.—Yale easily defeated Harvard in their thirty-first annual dual track and field meet at Yale field today. Yale scored 11 first places in the 15 events, piling up 89½ points, while Harvard gathered a total of 45¼ points. Yale had eight second places, while the Crimson was first in four events and second in seven.

Three Yale-Harvard dual meet records were broken.

Charlie Eastman, track and football star of Harvard, tossed the 16-pound weight 46 feet, breaking the dual meet mark of 45 feet 9½ inches, which was made by Lemoyne of Harvard at Cambridge in 1904.

In the javelin throw, C. H. Storrs of Yale set a new mark of 181 feet 10¼ inches. The old dual record was 161 feet 11½ inches, made by Greenidge of Harvard last year. C. C. Carpenter of Harvard won the discus throw with a mark of 135 feet. The old record was 124 feet 8¼ inches, made by Jordan of Yale last year.

The summaries:

ONE MILE RUN—Douglas, Yale, first; Burke, Harvard, second; Couch, Yale, third. Time, 4 minutes 23 seconds.

440-YARD RUN—Chapman, Yale, first; Gale, Yale, second; Gellfuss, Yale, third. Time, 49 4-5 seconds.

DISCUS THROW—Carpenter, Harvard, first, distance, 135 feet; Steffanson, Yale, second, 127 feet 3½ inches; Miller, Harvard, third, 126 feet 10 inches.

POLE VAULT—Schlipp, Yale, first, height 12 feet; D. D. Reiddy, Harvard, second, 11 feet; Friedman and Martindale, Harvard, and Carpenter and Locke, Yale, tied for third place at 10 feet 6 inches.

220-YARD HURDLES—Durant, Yale, first; Hulman, Yale, second; R. F. Thayer, Harvard, third. Time, 24 4-5 seconds.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Rusnak, Yale; Gellfuss, Yale, second; Chapin, Harvard, third. Time, 21 3-5 seconds.

HAMMER THROW—Won by Earl, Yale, distance 139 feet; Cruikshank, Yale, second, 137 feet 6 inches; Marshall, Harvard, third, 135 feet 10 inches.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Hyatt, Harvard, height 5 feet 10 inches; Morse, Harvard, Gerroid, Harvard; Phillips, Harvard, and Reeves, Yale, tied for second place; height not given.

120-YARD HURDLES—Won by Hulman, Yale; Milliken, Yale, second; Hart, Yale, third. Time, 15 3-5 seconds.

100-YARD DASH—Won by Comins, Yale; Rusnak, Yale, second; Locke, Yale, third. Time, 10 seconds.

TWO-MILE RUN—Won by Cutcheon, Harvard; Lutz, Harvard, second; Trew, Yale, third. Time, 9 minutes 56 4-5 seconds.

SHOTPUT—Won by Eastman, Harvard; distance, 46 feet, making a new dual record. The old record was 45 feet 9½ inches, made by Lemoyne, Harvard, at Cambridge, May 13, 1904. Dunker, Harvard, second, 41 feet 1¾ inches; Jordan, Yale, third, 41 feet 10 inches.

880-YARD RUN—Won by Campbell, Yale; Burke, Harvard, second; Roddy, Yale, third. Time, 1 minute 58 seconds.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by Storrs, Yale, distance 181 feet 10¼ inches; breaking the existing dual record of 161 feet 11½ inches, made by Greenidge, Harvard, at Cambridge, May 18, 1922; Kerman, Harvard, second, 175 feet 2 inches; Bench, Yale, third, 170 feet 8 inches.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Comins, Yale, distance 23 feet 7¾ inches; Cheney, Yale, second, 22 feet 10¾ inches; Goodwine, Yale, third, 22 feet 1 inch.

WILLARD EXPECTS TO BEAT FIRPO, JULY 12

KANSAS CITY, June 16.—Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion, and his manager, Ray Archer, were in Kansas City yesterday on their way to New York. They left last night.

Willard will train in New York for his scheduled 12-round battle with Luis Angel Firpo in New Jersey, July 12. Willard figures he has a hard fight on his hands with Firpo, but said:

"I will beat the Argentine boxer because of my experience, and then I will get Dempsey. That means the restoration of the title to me."

PLAYERS ARE ORDERED TO TAKE A FOOTBALL ON VACATION TRIPS

NEW YORK.—The Columbia football candidates have all been ordered to take footballs with them on their summer vacations. This plan constitutes one of the greatest drives ever organized against fumbling. The candidates must practice handling the ball and kicking.

Columbia's opponents in the past have been able to obtain the ball on numerous occasions when the Columbia players fumbled.

Columbia is going to have two gridirons ready in the fall. Percy Haughton's work as coach at Columbia is already showing much originality in the way of training the football team.

Hoover Designs New Shell, Lighter and Shorter Than Old One

AMERICAN ingenuity may startle the sporting world again soon. Walter Hoover, winner of the English Henley Diamond Sculls, is building a hitherto unheard of type of shell. Hoover's craft will be shorter and lighter than his other boats, the same being conducive to greater speed, in the opinion of the champion sculler.

The new shell will measure 24 feet, with an approximate weight of 30 pounds. This is three feet shorter, also three pounds lighter than his old shell. The bark will be narrower as well, with a fuller bow and deeper body. Hoover estimates a saving of 7 per cent skin friction in the latest design.

The English ridiculed Hoover's "unorthodox" style of rowing before he won the Diamond Sculls last summer. European rowing experts of the old school claimed the Duluth sculler violated every known principle of "correct" rowing by sitting too low in his boat. The criticism didn't annoy Hoover in the least. He sculled in his own peculiar way, won Britain's classic event, and ultimately British admiration.

WILDE TO FACE 10-YEAR AGE HANDICAP, IN HIS TITLE BOUT WITH VILLA

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Experts who have watched the training of both boxers were loath tonight to venture prediction of the winner of the bout Monday night in which Jimmy Wilde of England will defend his title of world's champion flyweight against Pancho Villa, of the Philippines.

Except for a 10-year difference in age—Wilde being 31 and Villa 21—the men are about evenly matched physically and will go into the ring within one pound of each other's weight and neither above 112 pounds, the flyweight limit.

It is the third big fistic battle of the outdoor season in which an old, experienced ringster had met a young, ambitious novice. In the first, Jess Willard, typifying age, defeated Floyd Johnson, and in the second, Eugene Criqui, of France, knocked out the ancient featherweight title holder, Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland.

One of the biggest fistic crowds of the season is expected to be seated in the Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants, when the bout starts at 10 o'clock Monday night.

BROWN SETS RECORD FOR 500-METER RUN

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Larry Brown, captain of the 1922 Pennsylvania track team, set a world record when he ran the 500 meters in 1 minute 3 8-10 seconds. The former mark was 1 minute 5 5-10 seconds, made by Svend Laungren of Stockholm, Sweden, in 1922.

Cuban Stars Win, 7-0.

The Cuban Stars defeated the St. Louis Stars, 7 to 0, in the first game of the series at Stars Park yesterday. Padrone, the visiting purier, held the local team to seven scattered hits. The teams will play the second game of the series this afternoon.

Yachts to Finish Today.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, June 16.—Up to 5 o'clock this afternoon nothing had been heard from any of the yachts which left New London, Conn., last Tuesday morning in the United States to Bermuda race. Virtually every craft in Bermuda, including ocean going tugs and steamers, will be at the finish line tomorrow as it is believed the first arrival may be expected then. The wind today has [illegible]rable.

Ehmke Gives Five Hits and Sox Win

Manager Ty Cobb Gets Into Argument With Catcher Devormer of Boston.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, June 16.—Howard Ehmke, former Tiger, defeated Detroit here this afternoon, 9 to 1. A 15,000 crowd including several posts of the Veterans of Foreign War, attended.

Ehmke held his 1922 mates to five hits. The Tigers' run came in the fourth on doubles by Cobb and Manush.

Umpires rushed between Cobb and Devormer in the eighth to prevent a personal encounter between the two.

Pillette was driven from the mound in the fourth. He was relieved by Collins, last year with Red Rox, and when the inning was over the Sox had piled up seven runs.

In the seventh Joe Harris hit one of Bert Cole's slow offerings over the left-center field fence for a home run. It was the only hit off Cole. Wells, a big southpaw from Bethany College, pitched the eighth against the Sox. He was slapped for two hits and a run.

The Tigers took the series, 2 to 1.

Villa, Firpo, Dempsey, Are Betting Favorites In Coming Title Bouts

NEW YORK, June 16.

IF you are in a betting mood and want to wager a little money on the outcome of several of the big boxing bouts to come, here are the market figures:

Pancho Villa has been made an 8 to 5 favorite over Jimmy Wilde in their bout at the Polo Grounds on Monday night. Several large wagers were placed at those figures in Wall Street yesterday.

Those who believe that Wilde will be there at the end of 15 rounds are wagering 2 to 1 that Villa does not stop the champion.

Luis Angel Firpo has been made the choice over Jess Willard in their bout at Boyle's Thirty Acres on July 12 at odds of 2 to 1 on.

Jack Dempsey, who is to defend his title against Tom Gibbons at Shelby on July 4, is a 1 to 5 shot.

MICKEY O'NEIL QUITS BRAVES AND BASEBALL AND IS SUSPENDED

George "Mickey" O'Niel, the St. Louis boy catching for the Boston Braves, quit his team just before yesterday's game and remained here when the Braves departed for Pittsburg last night.

"My father's recent death left my mother alone during the entire baseball season and I believe I should be here with her," Mickey said in explanation of his act. "I had no quarrel with anyone, but I believe my place is here. I do not intend to play ball at all hereafter. I have just retired from the game. I am going into the drug business here."

"O'Neil certainly surprised me," Fred Mitchell, Boston manager, said after the game. "I thought he was kidding at first and I was pretty mad when he told me it was serious. However, there has been a great deal of illness at his home and I suppose he believes he ought to stay here. Unless it is serious illness, I believe he made a mistake. His short notice to me was hardly fair. He has been suspended and positively will not be traded or sold."

CONSPIRACY CHARGES AGAINST OFFICIALS OF SOX ARE STRICKEN OUT

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, June 16.—Conspiracy charges against officials of the Chicago American league baseball club contained in the $400,000 damage suits of Charles Risberg and Oscar Felsch were ordered stricken today by Circuit Judge John J. Gregory.

The court recently sustained demurrers to these charges. The Felsch Risberg actions are now for back pay and bonus and for $100,000 damages each, alleging slander and ruin of good names and reputations.

The conspiracy allegations charged that the deposed players were kept out of major league baseball. The suits arose out of the baseball scandal of 1920, when White Sox players were accused of deliberately losing games in the 1919 world series contest to the Cincinnati National league club.

Heisner Named to Referee Flanagan and Kaiser Fight

Business Men's Athletic Club Announces Program for First Open-Air Show.

Walter Heisner, who with Harry Sharpe has divided local ring referee honors for several years, last night was named referee for the Patsy Flanagan-Pewee Kaiser ten-round boxing event which will be held at the Battery A drill yard, next Thursday.

This bout, which has been sought by local promoters for two years without success, will take place under the auspices of the Business Men's Athletic Club, operated by Harry Cook and James Solari. The event will be the first outdoor ring show of the year, here.

Delay in naming the referee was due to Kaiser's unwillingness to accept Harry Sharpe as the third man in the ring. Sharpe some weeks ago disqualified Kaiser for disobeying his orders and warnings in a bout with Frankie Osner at the Armory. Keiser felt that he could not do his best under Sharpe and held out for some other official, Heisner preferred. Flanagan wanted Sharpe but waived the choice in order to let the match go forward.

Weight to Be 124 Pounds.

Both of these lads have trained hard for this bout. Kaiser has been working out in camp on the Mermmec, at the Tenuvus Club, with Leo Jullus and other boxers. His mother has been keeping camp for him. Peewee looks better than for many weeks and is husky and strong. The boys will weigh 124 pounds, which is within two pounds of the feather-weight maximum, although both boys are supposed to be bantam-weights.

Flanagan is due in St. Louis today to finish his training work. Flanagan in the last year has gained considerable reputation in Chicago and several thousand dollars with it. He is fighting better than at any time in his life.

The bout will surely be of the best and Referee Heisner already has made it plain that he will expect strict obedience in the ring. Heisner made it conditional on acceptance of the refereeship that the fighters must not look to him for leniency and that the rules must be lived up to. Disobedience of orders and disregard of warnings, he said, would result in disqualification of the offender.

Bernstein Bout Set Back.

Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan yesterday stated that the Bernstein-Kabakoff match was not off, but had been set back to July 10 owing to a confusion regarding the date.

Sullivan had announced that the meeting between the junior champion and Kabakoff would take place July 2, but failed to get the commission's authority before making the announcement. The commission rules do not permit two bouts here in the same week and as a July 4 date already had been allotted the boxing body turned down Sullivan. He probably will be granted the July 10 date.

HORSESHOE PITCHERS TO COMPETE IN TWIN BILL

The first double-header in the Municipal Horse Shoe Pitchers League to be held in two years will be played this morning at Fairground Park when the six teams of the league will start their regular scheduled game at 9 o'clock. The games postponed last Sunday by rain will be played immediately afterwards.

The first games scheduled bring the Avcocks against the Lucky Ringers, while Numethods will meet the Lenhardt and Clarks and the Buster Browns will play the Fairgrounds.

The second games will schedule the Buster Browns against the Aycocks. The Numethods play the Lucky Ringers and the Lenhardt and Clarks oppose Fairgrounds.

Standing of the teams:

BILL MEHLHORN, ST. LOUIS HOPE IN NATIONAL OPEN, SHOOTS GLEN ECHO IN 70

Bill Mehlhorn, North Hills professional, who has been nominated to represent the West in the intersectional team match which will be a feature of the national open golf championship, was in good stroke yesterday afternoon when he shot the Glen Echo course in 70, three over the course record of 67, held by himself. Mehlhorn was playing with A. S. Martin, Claude Smith and Frank Phelan and every putt was holed out, they will attest. Bill went out in 36, taking five strokes on the short fifth when his tee shot went in a stand trap and his second was over the green into another trap. He came back in 34. His card out was 4 3 4 5 5 3 4 5 3—36 and in was 4 4 3 4 4 3 3 4—70.

Mehlhorn will leave St. Louis for New York June 28 to begin practice for the National Open Tournament at the Inwood Country Club. He is by far the best golfer St. Louis has had since Jim Barnes left the Sunset Hill Club, and will be among the favorites in the Inwood competition.

Cherry Tree, Paying $31.70 to $2 Wins Feature at Latonia

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., June 16.

CHERRY TREE, 3-year-old Broomstick-Cerise colt, running in the colors of Moses Goldblatt, won the Enquirer handicap, $5000 added, the feature event of today's card.

The time was 1:52 3-5 for a distance of 1 1-16 miles. Fair Phantom was second, while Prince K. came in third.

Cherry Tree paid $31.70 straight, $11.70 place and $7.10 show.

From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 16.—It is an axiom of the turf that after a lapse, though it be years, horses will run back to their best form. J. S. Cosden's Dunlin, winner of the Hopeful Stakes last year, ran back to that form in the Carlton Stakes at one mile at Aqueduct today and beat the Rancocas stables' Rigel and four other three-year-olds, among them the newly acquired Bluemont, which ran in the "Cherry and Black" for the first time.

Last fall Dunlin went into winter quarters rated well up among the leading two-year-olds. He came to the races in Maryland this spring a colt of high promise on his early trials but showed so disappointingly in three starts that his sportsman owner, who had hopes of winning the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby, and who backed him heavily for the latter event, was keenly disappointed. After a long rest, Billy Garth, his trainer, brought Dunlin back to the races at Belmont Park and he beat Lanius and some others and about a week later finished a matter of noses behind Bluemont, Miss Star and Little Celt, to which he was conceding weight. He has come back to his last year's form.

In the Carlton stakes today Lang raced him cleverly half a length off the pace of Rigel to the stretch and then came away easily from inside the three-sixteenth pole.

Dunlin Looked Good.

The paddock inspection revealed Dunlin as a gentleman in appearance and a fine specimen of the trainer's art. Dunlin's time was 1:37 4-5. It was not a particularly fast run race, but everything but the first three were done at the three-sixteenths pole. Rigel was quick to go to the front and did the right thing in view of his seven pounds pull in the colt's turn of speed. Even half way around the turn from the back stretch it looked as though Rigel would never be caught, but Lang was content to wait in second position while Bluemont seemed ready to come on when they reached the stretch.

Fator, on Rigel, was hard at work long before Lang called on Dunlin as they neared the three-sixteenths pole and from there home the long sweeping strides of the son of Fairplay-Donna Roca carried him to the winning post a length and a half in front. Rigel ran gamely to the end and beat Untidy, which ran over the tired Bluemont and Cyclops, three-lengths or more for the place.

The Carlton Stakes, one of the old classics transferred from the old Gravesend course, was worth $6650 to the winners. Had the Rancocas stable won the race its winning total for the season would have passed the $200,000 mark.

Joie Ray Winner In One-Mile Run

By the Associated Press.

ERIE BEACH, Ont., June 16.—Joie Ray, running under the colors of the Illinois A. C., won the mile handicap from scratch in the annual Buffalo Police games here today. His time was 4:22 4-5. Ray Watson of the Chicago A. A., and Walter Higgins of New York A. C., both starting from scratch, took Ray's dust for the entire race. Watson was second and Higgins third at the finish. Willie Ritola, Finnish Americas A. C., won fourth place with a handicap allowance of 25 yards.

CHARLES PADDOCK.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Charles Paddock, champion sprinter, who returned from Europe yesterday after having competed in an inter-collegiate track meet in Paris in defiance of an Amateur Athletic Union ruling, declared today that he felt his disqualification by the union was unjust and that he expected to be restored to good standing.

"If I have automatically disqualified myself as an amateur within the jurisdiction of the A. A. U. by participating in an international inter-collegiate track and field meet abroad," said Paddock, "I am prepared to turn in my A. A. U. registration and avoid A. A. U. competition in the future."

"I certainly hope to try for the American Olympic team next year," Paddock added. "If I run well enough to make it and the A. A. U. offers opposition to my selection because of the fact that I competed in the meet at Paris, I can only look for support from the University of California, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, of which it is a member, the National Amateur Athletic Federation and perhaps the Southern Pacific Association of the A. A. U.

"I believe, however, that the the American Olympic Committee will give me a full and fair deal."

FOUR RUNS IN FIRST ENABLE CUBS TO WIN

CHICAGO, June 16.—The Cubs beat the Dodgers today 7 to 3. The Cubs stepped out with four runs in the first inning and after that Brooklyn had no chance. The game was the occasion of lifting the city championship flag, which the Cubs won last fall from the Sox. One of the featurfes of the game was a home run by Fournier.

WM. H. SHELLEY QUITS KENTUCKY JOCKEY CLUB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LATONIA, Ky., June 16.—Racing Secretary William H. Shelley, one of the most competent officials connected with the American turf, resigned his position with the Kentucky Jockey Club late Friday and departed for his home in Louisville, Ky. The following statement was issued by the Kentucky Jockey Club in connection with his resignation:

"The Kentucky State Racing Commission under its rules requires that all handicap weights and program books must be submitted by the handicapper and racing secretary to the manager of the racing associations, who in turn must submit them to the stewards and no weights or race conditions may be announced until approved by the track managers and stewards. Acting under this rule the stewards suggested to Racing Secretary Shelley that he change the condition of several races. He declined to do so and resigned his position."

Lloyd George Says "Get Back to Business" on Reparations

"Once the Parties—All of the Parties—Sit Around a Table, I Feel Assured That the Common Sense of Most Will in the End Prevail."

LONDON, June 16.

THE Germans have tried another note. Inasmuch as all the allied press, without exception, is agreed in describing it as a great improvement over the first, it is hardly worth while taking up time and space to demonstrate how the essentials of this more favored document were contained in its reprobated predecessor. Psychologically, it is a decided advance on the first note. It is crisp and condensed, and does not indulge in irritating processes of argument. You should never attempt to argue with an angry man who is brandishing a bludgeon. The second German note avoids this provocation.

It also suggests a number of substantial guarantees for payment of loans to be raised for reparation purposes. I cannot pretend to assess the value that would be attached to these "gages" (pledges or securities) by prospective borrowers. I have no doubt they would add materially to the security of the investment. But this array of securities standing alone will not entice an investor to risk his money on a German reparation loan. He will look at Germany as a whole, and not in parts. He will want to know what is likely to happen to that great country during the coming years, and to its industry, its finance, its politics and its people. A railway which collects its rates and fares in a corrupt currency is of no use as security for any loan—a customs revenue collected in a fugitive coin is equally worthless.

The only reliable basis for a loan is a stable Germany. You can have no stable Germany until you settle reparations. That is, therefore, the first essential preliminary to all discussions on "gages," be they "productif" or otherwise.

Hence the propositions that really matter in the German note are not those which give a schedule of guarantee, but those which bear on the fixation of the amount which Germany is to be called upon to pay. On this question the note does not increase the sum which the first note estimated as the limit of German capacity. But it reaffirms the readiness of the German Government to submit consideration of the capacity of Germany to pay to an impartial tribunal. It offers to place at the disposal of this body all material which is necessary to enable it to arrive at a just conclusion.

Essentially Reasonable

It proceeds to suggest that all further discussion on the subjects at issue between the parties should take place at a conference rather than by interchange of notes. How can any unprejudiced person refuse to recognize the essential reasonableness of this part of the offer? It is common ground that the annuities imposed upon Germany in May, 1921, demanded modification. Even M. Poincare proceeds on that assumption. There is, therefore, a most important and highly difficult figure to be ascertained. What annuity can Germany pay? And when will she be in a position to pay?

Is it unreasonable to propose that this question, which involves most searching examination into German assets, should be referred to a tribunal which would be capable of giving it calm and judicial consideration? And what objection can there be to discussing the matter at a conference where Germany as well as all the allies would be represented? If this were a business or trade dispute, these two proposals would be regarded as eminently sensible and fair, and the party that rejected them would be condemned by public opinion.

What are the objections to an acceptance formulated by the French press? Up to the date of writing this article the French Government have not officially expressed their views on the German note. But one may safely assume from past experience that the Parisian journalists consulted Quai D'Orsay before writing their critical articles.

The first is that the French Government will discuss no proposals emanating from Germany until the latter withdraws its passive resistance to the French and Belgian exploitation of the Ruhr. What does this exactly mean? If it imports—as a preliminary condition to a conference or consideration of terms an acquiescence by Germany in the occupation and exploitation by France and Belgium of the Ruhr Valley until reparations are fully paid, then the position is hopeless.

Suggests an Armistice

A German Government may submit to such an occupation because it has no force at its command to offer resistance. But no German Government can give assent to such an invasion of its territories. A peace signed on such terms would be inevitably repudiated at the first favorable opportunity. Meanwhile, there would be constant friction and trouble in the Ruhr. I can hardly believe that this is what the French Government mean to insist upon, in spite of an article in Le Temps, which bears that interpretation. But they may only ask that whilst terms are being discussed, an armistice shall be concluded, the first condition of which will be that all obstacles now interposed in the way of supplying France, Belgium and Italy with reparation coal and coke shall be withdrawn. An armistice on those terms ought not to be difficult to arrange, especially if the French and Belgian authorities withdraw the ban they have placed on export of Ruhr products to unoccupied parts of Germany.

Unless the terms are mutually accommodating, I surmise that the German Government will experience insurmountable difficulty in persuading the stubborn miners and railway operatives of the Ruhr to assist in furnishing to France the products of their labor which are denied to their own fellow countrymen. It is too readily taken for granted that the Ruhr workmen will obey any behest that comes from Berlin. Governments in Germany have ceased to receive that kind of obedience.

It is one of the indirect consequences of great disaster that the decrees of Wilhelmstrasse no longer command the respect which was attached to them in prewar days. Still, a conference at which all the interests concerned were represented would experience no difficulty in fixing up stipulations which would make it possible for France to enter a conference on reparations without any suspicion being attached to her ministers that they had lowered the national flag in entering the room. I trust that good sense will prevail over temper and exaggerated pride—on both sides.

Should this preliminary point of honor be disposed of, then what remains? This fixation of annuities and guarantees for their payment. What are the objections to accepting the method put forward in the German note for these two questions? It is not the German method—it is the American method adopted by the German Government; a conference with an impartial tribunal. If the conference fails, I know of no other way except to resort to blind force.

Objections to Conference

It is objected that the treaty of Versailles has already provided such a tribunal in the Reparations Commission for the specific purpose of adjudicating upon Germany's liability and Germany's capacity, and that to set up another for exactly the same purpose would be to supersede that treaty. There are two answers to this contention:

The first is that the Reparations Commission as at present constituted is not the body to which Germany agreed to refer these questions so vital to her existence. It is not the body which Britain and the other allies contemplated. The withdrawal of America from the commission—after Germany had already signed the treaty—has completely changed the balance, and therefore the character of this tribunal. No man in his senses can pretend that in its mutilated form it is either impartial in its composition or judicial in its methods. M. Poincare does not conceal the fact that the French Government issues orders to its representatives on that "judicial" body. The chairman is an eminent French Deputy who has played, and still plays, a conspicuous and influential part in French politics, and is looking forward to pursuing his career as a politician, whithersoever it may lead. Ever since he has been chairman he has delivered speeches in public denouncing the party of whose case he is suuposed to be the chief judge. All his colleagues represent Powers who have a direct pecuniary interest in the result of their decisions.

The only disinterested Power has retired from the commission. The American proposal is very moderate. It implies restoration of the treaty by reintroducing America to the body that settles reparations. If France objects to the appointment of a separate commission, why should it not be agreed between the allies that their representatives shall be the men who now constitute the Reparations Commission? To these the American Government should add their nominee.

Right to Present Case

Germany has the right under the treaty to present her case. The whole question of capacity could then be gone into in the light of experience acquired during the last four years, and a settlement could thus be effected on a sound basis. Such a settlement would have a much better chance of being workable, and therefore more durable, than terms imposed by force on people who only accept under duress.

But whatever the French view may be of the suggested annuities or guarantees, or of an impartial commission, it is inconceivable that they should reject a conference. It is the surest road to reparation. At Spa the method of pelting a bewildered Reich with demand notes was for a time abandoned and that of a conference at the same table was substituted. The results were admirable. The process of disarmament made immediate strides towards satisfactory completion, and coal deliveries became fuller and steadier.

At Cannes last year the allies once more started to confer with the German Ministers. All those who were present at those discussions—without exception—admit that satisfactory progress was being made towards a comprehensive settlement when the conferees were scattered by a bomb. It is too early yet to estimate the loss which inured to Europe through that explosion. But all idea of discussion between parties has since been loftily and petulantly dismissed as an exhibition of pernicious weakness. What has been substituted for it? For 12 months we had a rather ridiculous display of feather rattling about the farmyard to inspire terror. Threatening speeches full of ominous hints of impending action were delivered at intervals in different parts of France. These produced nothing but increased confusion and incapacity to pay. Every speech cost France milliards in postponed

"Allies Must Retrace Their Steps and Get Back to the Conference"

"A DEBTOR (Germany) on whose restored health and nerve payment entirely depends has been violently pushed down several flights of stairs. It will take him a long time to recover from the bruises, shake and loss of blood. What an achievement in scientific debt collecting!"

"If reparations are ever to be paid, the Allies must retrace their steps and get back to the conference. Once the parties—all of the parties—sit around a table, I feel assured that the common sense of most will, in the end, prevail. We shall never get back what has been lost during 1922-23, but we shall get something that will help. It will take some time to set up tackle for hoisting the mark out of the crevasse, and some to do winding. But the sooner a start is made the less winding there will be to do.

"SO, FOR EVERYBODY'S SAKE, STOP THE STRUTTING AND GET BACK TO BUSINESS."

The Case of Our Mexican 'Political' Prisoners

One Released by Death, Other Is Still Held

Conviction the Result of a "Foolish" Manifesto

Article Printed in U. S. in Spanish by Magon and Rivera, Who Had Long Fought the Diaz Autocracy, Led to Prison on Charge of War Obstruction.

Mexico Continues Effort to Obtain Release of Rivera From Prison, After Giving Magon, Who Died in Jail, a Great Public Funeral in Mexico City.

By Charles G. Ross.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The dragnet put out by the Government in 1918 for those who voiced unpopular opinions about the war caught two Mexican revolutionists who had fought against the Diaz autocracy and had come to this country as a haven where they might work, according to their lights, for the submerged masses of Mexico.

One of them has been released by death; the other is still in the Leavenworth penitentiary, under a 15-year sentence—one of the remaining 50 political prisoners, for whom President Harding is being petitioned to grant amnesty.

The two Mexicans, Ricardo Flores Magon, now dead, and Librado Rivera, published a little newspaper at Los Angeles. It was called Regeneracion and was printed in Spanish. On March 6, 1918, they issued in this paper, over their two signatures, a "manifesto"—a general, rather bombastic, statement predicting the "death of the bourgeoisie society," but saying not a word about the war of the United States and the allies against Germany.

For this publication they were arrested two weeks later, were tried under the Espionage Act and sentenced to long prison terms for obstructing the war. Magon was given the maximum, 20 years. He had served about four years when he died last November.

Translation of Manifesto.

In an editorial after Magon's death, the Baltimore Sun said that the "manifesto" in Spanish which he and Rivera signed was about as much calculated to discourage recruiting as a Dutch edition of the New Testament. Anyone who cares to look it up may find a translation of the "manifesto," used in the prosecution of Magon and his colleague, in the Congressional Record for Dec. 14, 1922. A reading of it, I believe, will convince nine persons out of 10 that the judgment of the Sun editorial writer is correct.

The article is headed "Magon's Manifesto—The Assembly of Organization of the Mexican Liberal Party."

It is addressed to "the Members of the Party, the Anarchists of the Whole World, and the Workingmen in General."

The following, from the opening paragraphs, is a fair sample of the whole:

"Companions: The clock of history will soon point with its hands inexorable the instant producing death to this society, already agonizing. The death of the old society is close at hand; it will not delay much longer, and only those will deny the fact whom its continuation interests; those that profit by the injustice in which it is based; those that see with horror the approach of the revolution, for they know that on the following day they will have to work side by side with their former slaves."

Huddleston's Comment.

In a speech in the House of Representatives condemning the continued confinement of men convicted under defunct war laws, Representative George Huddleston, Democrat, of Alabama, had this to say of the "manifesto":

"The article was perhaps a foolish article. It may have been a wicked article. The man (Magon) was tried. He was convicted of violating the Espionage Act. How anybody could imagine that that article could have had any effect whatsoever toward obstructing our war operations is beyond my comprehension . . . .

"Perhaps its most objectionable passages are those which speak of the workingman being conscious 'that the country is not his property, but is the property of the rich,' and the criticism of Government in general: 'It is tyranny, because it is not an institution created for the protection of the weak, but to support the strong. Also, I note the condemnation of war by reference to the young man 'torn from the bosom of his family to face, gun in hand, another youngster who, like himself, was the enchantment of his home, and whom he does not hate and can not hate, for he even does not know him.'

"There is not a word of criticism of the United States, nor of our Government, nor of any official action in particular."

"Philosophical Anarchist."

Magon had lately died in jail, and the Alabama representative, known as one of the "liberal" group in Congress, was taking issue with some Congressmen who had defended the policy of the Department of Justice toward the "political" prisoners.

"What I most resent," said Huddleston "is the misleading references to Magon's belief in anarchism and the implication that he was an advocate of murder, bombing and forcible resistance of Government. From the information I get, he never believed in or advocated any such thing. He was a believer in the doctrines of Proudhon and Tolstoi—in a world ruled by good will, co-operation and brotherhood, instead of policemen's clubs and bayonets—what is called a 'philosophical anarchist.' The reference to Magon as an anarchist is a mere smoke screen. He was not convicted of being an anarchist, for there is no law against it, and the reference is merely to mislead and to prejudice the case."

Memorable Challenge.

Huddleston's speech on this occasion was a memorable challenge to those who have forgotten or chosen to ignore the free-speech clause of the Constitution. He felt impelled to discuss the subject of the "political" prisoners, he said, because of the feeling that the situation was "a disgrace to our country."

"I feel," he continued, "that it is a situation which demands the attention of Congress. I am disturbed by the thought that we have too long been silent and that perhaps I myself have failed in my duty in not before demanding here upon this floor that these prisoners be released. It is perhaps not upon me more as a member of Congress than as a citizen.

"There is, of course, the consideration that it may injure me politically to speak. Demagogues and reactionaries are quick to hound any advocate of liberal opinion. But that very fact is one of the best reasons why I should take my stand for real Americanism and the American Bill of Rights. I can no longer retain my self-respect if I allow this situation to continue without my protest when in my heart I do so bitterly condemn it. . . .

Belief Is No Crime.

"Let me say that it is no crime under the laws of the United States for a man to be an I. W. W., a communist, an atheist, or to hold to any other belief, no matter how wild and subversive it may be, nor is it a crime to belong to an organization, no matter what purpose it may have. Our laws are aimed at men's actions, not at a frame of mind or a belief. Men may be convicted as criminals only for deeds and not for thoughts. It is no more a crime to be a communist than to be a Morman or an agnostic. It is only when a man is guilty of some overt act or of conspiracy coupled with an overt act that he violates the law.

"Never at any time has it been unlawful in this country for a man to express his beliefs and to propagate his ideas, except during the World War. These 'political' prisoners were convicted for words spoken and not for deeds done. They violated the Espionage Act by expressions against the war or in opposition to conscription or other war measures. They were not guilty of spying, nor of sabotage, nor of actively aiding the enemy, nor of anything other than the expression of opinions which men may sincerely hold.

"They did not incite to murder nor destruction of property nor injury to human beings, but obstructed the draft or criticised public officials or preached against wars in general or other matter of that kind.

"Yet we find that the Department of Justice delights to obscure the facts by reckless insinuations and by prejudicing the public against these prisoners with charges that they were communists, anarchists, and so forth."

Magon's Defense of Article.

Magon himself declared that the article which he and Rivera signed could not be construed by "any sensible person" as seditious.

"In reality," he said, "the manifesto is only an exposition of facts and a fair warning to all mankind of the evil those facts might produce. . . . The manifesto does not refer in the least to the policies of the American Government in the last war, nor give aid and comfort to its enemies. It is neither pro-German nor pro-Allied, and does not single out the United States in its brief review of the world conditions. It was enough, however, to secure for me a life term behind prison bars. . . . My poor wife Maria was incarcerated during five months."

Repeated efforts were made to get Magon released on the ground that he was going blind in both eyes from cataracts and was near death from consumption. Attorney-General Daugherty was unmoved. He wrote that he had taken up the matter with the President and that they were agreed executive clemency should not be granted.

"He (Magon) regards his prosecution by the Government as a persecution," said the Attorney-General, "and makes it appear that he is a martyr. He in no manner evinces any evidence of repentance, but on the contrary rather prides himself on his defiance of the law."

Mexico Sought Release.

Mexico, however, unlike the United States, was willing to take a chance. Not merely that, but the Mexican Government asked for the release of both Magon and Rivera, and the Embassy here, acting for the Government, is continuing its efforts in behalf of Rivera. The Embassy today confirmed a statement made before the House Judiciary Committee, March 16, 1922, by Harry Weinberger, a New York lawyer, that the Mexican Congress voted the prisoners $2 a day while they were in jail, which they refused to accept. After Magon's death in jail, the rostrum of the Chamber of Deputies was draped in black. He was given a great public funeral in Mexico City and the Congress voted a pension to his widow.

Those who inquire at the Department of State about Rivera's case receive the uniform reply that the matter is in the hands of the Department of Justice. When amnesty workers suggest to officials of the latter department that Rivera be deported, like other aliens who have received commutation of sentence, they are given to understand, they say, that the department makes a distinction between deportation to the adjoining country of Mexico and deportation overseas. The department, it seems, is unwilling to turn loose a "dangerous radical" who would remain so near to the United States.

Morse and Magon.

It was a circumstance much commented on at the time of Magon's death that the Attorney-General who opposed clemency for Magon, in the face of statements that his death was near, was the same Harry Daugherty who, as a practicing attorney, procured the release of the banker Charles W. Morse on the ground that Morse was about to die. In fairness to Daugherty, it ought to be said that he had reports from the prison physician that Magon's health was satisfactory, just as he had medical reports, when attorney for Morse, that the banker was in the last stages of Bright's disease.

Both Morse and Magon upset the doctors' expectations. Morse got well—vigorously well—and Daugherty, as Attorney-General, is now trying to send him back to jail on another charge. Death came to Magon, to give him the freedom that neither the Mexican Government nor American champions of free speech had been able to get for him.

From the Morse and Magon cases—and the continued confinement of Magon's associates—one may draw any sort of moral one pleases.

"A Disgrace to Our Country"

IN a speech in the House of Representatives condemning the continued holding of men convicted under war laws, Congressman Huddleston of Alabama denounced the situation as "a disgrace to our country." At one point he said:

"Never at any time has it been unlawful in this country for a man to express his beliefs and to propagate his ideas, except during the World War. These 'political' prisoners were convicted for words spoken and not for deeds done. They violated the espionage act by expressions against the war or in opposition to conscription or other war measures. LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

THE POLITICAL PRISONERS.

The Buck Private and the I. W. W.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I SAW a letter in your Sunday paper from an ex-service man, Duke Frederick, opposing your campaign in behalf of clemency for the political prisoners, in which he conveys the impression that he is expressing the views of men who fought in the war.

I want to say that he doesn't express mine. I spent 13 months in France, and got a wound on Oct. 18, while advancing in the Argonne Forest, that has left me disabled. If I had my way, these men would be released from those prison walls tomorrow. If I speak plainly it is from the heart. I believe that there are men in this country, some of them in Washington, who did a good deal more to deserve prison sentences than these poor I. W. W.'s. What about the fellows who grafted millions on army contracts? What about the "Hard-Boiled" Smiths who slugged sick soldiers? What about the shavetails who sat on courtsmartial and gave 20-year sentences to poor buddies, who got too much cognac brandy on leave?

I know a lot of men who were in France and saw hard fighting. I know a good many that stopped German scrap iron. I never saw or heard one of them that talked like Duke Frederick or the other officers of the American Legion, unless it was a commissioned officer. We know that these poor devils didn't try to injure us. Us fellows that were in the ranks know that men like Debs and Chaplin were trying to get us out of the trenches. Nobody who was against war was the buck private's enemy. Everybody who was against war was the buck private's friend, for the buck private was the fellow that got lead in his gizzard in war—like I did.

Go to it, Post-Dispatch; the real soldiers are with you. C. E. CEAS.

Punished Enough.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I READ with much interest today your second chapter on the subject of the political prisoners at Leavenworth, Kan. I am heartily in favor of the work you have undertaken in behalf of these unfortunate men.

I am frank to admit during the war period I was very much against the attitude taken by the I. W. W.'s, but feel that this is a free country, and every one is entitled to his own opinion. I know of many people who made very rash statements about our entry in the war, etc., and just because they did not happen to be caught did not suffer the consequences thereof.

I feel these men have been deprived of their liberty long enough, and it is an injustice to keep them in prison. They should by all means be set free without delay. JANE F. O'CONNOR.

A Soldier on the Political Prisoners.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

JUST a compliment on your wonderful write-ups on the martyrs of the espionage law. I don't understand why the people are hollering about red Russia, when we have worse than that here in this country. I served 18 months in France and have four bullet marks for beauty's sake, and if you or anybody else can tell me why we were over there I will buy you a good smoke. I know I will have to suffer, for I will be a knocker on the next war. Please take these thanks on behalf of his Majesty the Warden at Leavenworth.

Give me red Russia any day in comparison to the crazy laws our hick Congress passed in the last 10 years. I sure wish you would have heart enough to publish this, as I know there are a million more farmer boys going into the I. W. W. or something like it. Hoping to see a few more editorials and maybe when Harding has a day off from his golf he will pardon these poor 100 per cent Americans.

FOUR BEAUTY MARKS OF GERMAN GUNS.

Shall Opinion Be Punished?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR fight for freedom of political prisoners should not end until every man is free and citizenships restored. Our Constitution was framed for the purpose of affording freedom of opinion, because our ancestors fled to escape persecution for opinion. Now, America, with its flag as a symbol of justice, created and formed a law to sentence men for opinion honestly held on war. It should not be. Shame, Shame!

Our cry of justice is marred if these men are not released and citizenship restored. Men like Duke Frederick should not prevail. He should be convinced of his error, that these men are not pro-German, disloyal, or anything else, but purely against war at all times and are willing to become martyrs for their opinion and therefore lack cowardice as is sometimes claimed. A man that stands by his opinion is a man.

Erase the blot of injustice and act like humans, not beasts in a jungle with cruel motives in mind and action. Every liberty, justice and humanity loving citizen of this country should assert themselves and demand action. My deepest regret is that America has not another Lincoln. We have no Lincoln, but we have got a Post-Dispatch. On with the fight! LOUIS LAHM.

JUSTICE AND SELF-RESPECT.

Chief Justice Taft recently delivered an address at the unveiling of a monument to a former Chief Justice, Salmon P. Chase, in which he pointed out the recurrent antagonism between the Supreme Court and the nation. The period following the Civil War, he showed, was parallel to the present time as regards discontent, criticism and proposals for curbing the court's power.

The case of especial interest discussed by Mr. Taft was the Milligan case. Milligan, a resident of Indiana, was tried in October, 1864, by one of the military tribunals established by President Lincoln on the charge of conspiring against the Government, giving aid and comfort to the rebels, initiating insurrection and violating the laws of war. He was found guilty and sentenced to be hanged.

By way of writs and appeals the case finally reached the Supreme Court, which held that neither Lincoln nor Congress had the power to set up military tribunals where civil courts were functioning, and declared the tribunal illegal. The decision caused an uproar. Meantime Milligan's sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment and after the Supreme Court's decision he was released. The conclusion of Mr. Taft's comment on this case is peculiarly pertinent. He said:

The Milligan case laid down the principle of the maintenance of constitutional rights during war for which we are now all grateful.

Grateful, indeed, we should be for such a sound principle, but unfortunately the principle is subject to suspension. It was suspended during the World War. The maintenance of constitutional rights during war is a theory, not a condition. Were it a condition, many of the war-time measures would not have been passed. Were it a condition, we should not have the problem of 51 political prisoners who are in durance for violating a law now defunct and which the Supreme Court had declared unconstitutional more than half a century before it was enacted.

The argument for the liberation of those prisoners, however, should not turn upon legal niceties, or court rulings and traditions. The question should be viewed in the broad light of justice and human rights. Let us reflect that war is hell—a wider, uglier hell than Sherman visioned. Sherman had in mind, presumably, the butcheries of battle and the brutalities of conquest. But the poison of war contaminates all life. It looses all the vicious passions, particularly those of greed and cruelty. It undermines our sense of values, corrodes judgment, palsies fairness. Probably it always will.

The thing, therefore, for a free, just, democratic people that has been plunged into war to do is to get back to sanity when war ends by quickly burying the hatreds born of war and repairing the tragic blunders promptly and as far as practicable. Our political prisoners are victims of a state of mind inseparable from war. But no such state of mind can competently be pleaded now for their further punishment. As a matter of justice and for our own self-respect amnesty should be proclaimed.

Mr. Bedford of Standard Oil might not be so enthusiastic about the Government's noninterference with business if he had his laundry done in St. Louis.

NATURE'S ART REVEALED.

When the scientists at Pittsfield produced an electric flash at a tension of a million and a half volts the other day they were merely seeking a safe and practical way of transporting and using the electric current at high voltage. But the camera caught the triangular flash between points nine feet apart—and a new and undreamed wonder developed.

As shown in the picture of this flash, reproduced in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Rotogravure Section, the electric fire that played between the points for a fraction of a second, too short for the eye to pick out any pattern, was made up of the most beautiful, delicate and perfect tracery.

In the snow crystal, in the veinery of leaves, in the texture of wood, in the wing of a butterfly, in the nervous system of an insect and in countless other natural forms, lovely tracery is to be found. But all these are the product of growth, often slow growth. In this electric flash, however, beauty arose in all its perfection instantaneously and as quickly disappeared.

And it is such beauty as to offer charming suggestions to the weaver and the lace maker. Here, again, he may follow nature, painfully and afar, but with good results. He can never hope to match her wondrous powers.

INDIAN RELIGIOUS DANCES.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is trying to stop dances by the aborigines which they claim to be part of their religion. In this he is backed up by the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which says that the dances tend to immorality.

If immorality is actually found at these dances, it should be stopped, just as in the case of other dances. But it is doubtful if the Indians would be benefited by a general prohibition of their characteristic and ancient dances, which certainly have a religious basis. Speaking of the religion of the Indians, Lewis Morgan, the Great American ethnologist, said it consisted of "set dances, each with its own name, songs, steps and costume." Each tribe had its own religious dances, and every dance had a meaning, being, like a prayer, addressed to what the Indian felt were the Higher Powers.

It has been so, more or less, in all religions. "What do you dance?" is the greeting of one tribe to another among the Bantus of Africa, for, as Havelock Ellis says in his recent work, "The Dance of Life," "a savage does not preach his religion, he dances it." And, he adds, "among primitive people, religion being so large a part of life, the dance inevitably becomes of supreme religious importance. To dance was at once both to worship and to pray."

All this must sound extremely shocking to persons of Puritanic instinct or training. But the ancient Hebrews danced before the Ark, and the Christian Fathers, Eusebius, Basil and others, referred to sacred dances then in vogue as a regular part of the services. Chrysostom only objected to drunken excesses that sometimes disgraced what was otherwise sacred and beautiful.

If the Indians are debarred from their dances might they not turn to something less profitable, less inspiring, or even harmful? Would it be better for them to spend their time in movie shows or at poolrooms? Why not study the dances and try to prevent their degradation, instead of Volsteadizing them entirely?

To prohibit the free exercise of religion is forbidden by the Constitution. Under it the Indian has the same right to dance religiously as we have to kneel, stand, genuflect, sing or pray with the same object. As Paul says, "let everything be done decently and in order."

LOW WATER UP RIVER.

The first through passenger steamer to St. Paul in seven years has had to dock at Hastings, Minn., 25 miles below its destination, and return because of low water. This is a discouragement but does not indicate failure of the route. It is a curious fact that while St. Louis has had an abnormally wet May and June the northern country has been peculiarly dry. Forest fires have been rampant and lakes and streams have been low.

Normally steamers run through to St. Paul without difficulty and have ever since the upper valley has been inhabited. The present handicap is but a slight inconvenience as railroad service is close at hand at any point along the river. The upper river, however, presents a task for the Government in permanent channel improvement.

SCIENTIFIC MEDICINE.

Quite the finest thing about the Rockefeller Foundation's review of its work of 1922, which attacks the opponents of vaccination, is President George E. Vincent's redefinition of science with reference to medicine. The spirit of modern medicine, he says, is scientific. "Scientific medicine cannot accept ideas which are merely mystical, or imply unknown and unverifiable physical or chemical properties, or invoke supernatural intervention, or are in other ways clearly fantastic or beyond the reach of any available demonstration or experiment. • • • It does not hesitate to admit ignorance or to suspend judgment."

In the protection of public health certainly the state could proceed on no other basis. Nor could it leave unprotected the vast majority to gratify the mystical or doctrinaire minority. Individuals and cults are entitled to what benefit they may derive from their speculations. It may be that the medical profession neglects to give due weight to the mental forces which have an unquestionable, though unmeasurable, effect upon health. If medical science is true to the standard set for it by Dr. Vincent it will not neglect research in any line, mental or material, which may increase man's control over the forces of the human organism.

LASKER'S JOYRIDE.

(With the Appropriate Apologies.)

OUT to sea, for a trip,
Free of charge. Onward!
All in the Leviathan
Rode the Six Hundred!
"Forward, the Sight Brigade, Charge it to me," he said;
Into the Leviathan
Went the Six Hundred.

"Forward, my Right Brigade!"
Was there a man who stayed?
Not though they all should know
Lasker had blundered.
Theirs but to make reply,
Theirs but to tell him "Aye."
Theirs to give ships a try;
Into the Leviathan
Went the Six Hundred!

Critics to right of them,
Critics to left of them,
Critics in front of them,
Scorned them, and thundered;
Charges are made as well,
Boldly the news we'll tell,
Into a great big ship
On a vacation trip
Went the Six Hundred!

Flashed all their molars bare,
Flashed at the bill of fare;
Was there a wine list there?
Taxing the people, while
All the world wondered.
Pledged to A. D. L.'s stroke
Why is the Ship Board broke?
Wining and dining
Under A. Lasker's yoke
Trial trips are blundered.
They'll try the ship; why not?
Noble Six Hundred!

People to right of them,
People to left of them,
People behind them
Scanned them and wondered;
Stormed at with quips galore,
While the poor people swore,
They tried the ship once more;
Went on a pleasure cruise
(Out far enough there's booze),
Lasker would none excuse;
Noble Six Hundred!

When can remembrance fade?
What a trial trip they made!
All the world wondered!
When that the bills are paid,
Honor that Sight Brigade,
Noble Six Hundred!

PARAGRAPHS.

Looks as if the Balkans are getting back to normalcy. Two new wars are brewing there.

See where a cop was suspended for peddling hooch. Serves him right. He should have gone only just as far as the others.

After all, an old maid is merely a woman who has no socks to mend, pants to press or cigar ashes to clean up after a man.

See where Jack Dempsey is charging a half a buck for the privilege of seeing some second-rate boxers spread embroidery over his peepers.

An Alabama farmer's hen laid an egg that was seven and a half inches in circumference. Others could do the same, if they only could get the lay of it. THEODORE TRILSEY.

TALL TALES FROM THE HILLS.

Salem (Mo.) Post.

This time we are called upon to believe a tale told by Tom McSpadden and S. A. Dawson of the Butler-Vernon Mercantile Co. These gentlemen had occasion to make a trip to the country the last of the week and by the roadside stood a large steam road tractor, taking the ravishes of the weather. But this was not all. Hard at work on the tractor were three billy goats. One goat was up in the cab making a delicate meal on the engineer's cushioned seat. Another had climbed up to the whistle and was getting a few bites of solid brass, while the most hardy of the three animals was chewing away on the smokestack.

McSpadden and Dawson say they knew all along that goats devour tin cans and tin lizzies with a relish, but they never would have believed such a sight as this we are telling about.

I WONDER.

DO little doggies dream? I think they do
For in my dreams last night my doggie came,
To play with me, his little head askew,
Just as he does at home in every game.

Perhaps 'twas but a vision, only mine—
Which love has painted on my heart for him.
Maybe he's lonely, but he didn't pine
Last night; I hope the picture ne'er grows dim.

I'll soon be home again. I'm lonely now,
Because I feel my little doggie sighs
For me; then I can see his shiny brow,
And read his thoughts by looking in his eyes.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

HONESTY IN THE PULPIT.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

REV. H. E. FOSDICK, the eminent Baptist clergyman occupying a Presbyterian pulpit in New York, whose doctrines were censured by the Presbyterian General Assembly at Indianapolis, preached Sunday on the difficulty of being honest in the pulpit. • • • The example of the First Presbyterian Church in backing Dr. Fosdick may encourage other churches of the denomination to take an independent stand against the General Assembly when it assumes to pronounce verdicts that they do not approve. It will not directly help the minister who knows in his heart that he and his congregation are at odds on vital matters of belief, but who dare not forfeit the good will on which he is dependent for a livelihood. Yet the example of an individual church placing its support behind a preacher of progressive outlook may strengthen the shackled minister's hope that in time other churches will be similarly determined in upholding preachers who depart from orthodoxy, tradition or formulated creeds. With divergences of opinion so wide as those now found in the Presbyterian and Baptist ranks, central control over doctrinal teachings seems impossible and any rigorous attempt to impose uniformity in those denominations would probably result in further schism.

THE BURDEN OF TAXATION.

From the Indianapolis News.

WHAT the people want is, not more taxes, but to be rid of some of the taxes which they now pay. It seems very difficult for the Congress, State legislatures and city councils to get this point of view. Perhaps there are many of the people to whom it is not clear, as those who are all the while trying to devise a tax which others will have to pay but from which they will be exempt. Yet taxes are widely distributed, easily shifted and there are mighty few people who do not have to pay some even of those which seem to fall solely on others. Practically all of them fall on production, and the consumer pays the cost of production, in which, of course, the tax is an element, and a most important one. Counting in local, school, special, State and Federal taxes—to say nothing of the tax paid in tariff-increased prices—the American people are today carrying an enormous burden of taxation. The question is less one of redistributing the burden than of lightening it.

"PROGRESSIVE" IN POLITICS.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

"PROGRESSIVE" is one of the most popular words in the whole country, says the Charleston News and Courier. That's because it is such an elastic word, means nothing and covers a multitude of sins. "Direct democracy" was a reversion. Therefore it was "progressive." Years ago the Jeffersonians and "Old Republicans" were howling at the Supreme Court and "demanding" that Congress should have the power to reverse its decisions. Probably John Marshall never made a decision offensive to the anti-Federals without causing some patriot in Congress to propose this means of curbing the licentiousness of that bunch of despots. La Follette steals that old thunder; becomes a "reactionary," and is therefore a "progressive." Socialism or communism was a humbug and a failure in early Virginia and Plymouth. So anybody who will steal old clothes bellows for Government ownership of railroads, mines, and what not, and adorers worship the reviver of antiquity as a "progressive." A lovely word; mighty useful for chaps in the "progressive" line, but it's beginning to have an ancient and fishlike smell.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER CELEBRATION TODAY

Wisconsin and Iowa to Commemorate Discovery of Upper Course 250 Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., June 16.—Two French explorers 250 years ago today were paddling down the Wisconsin River on orders from Count Fontenac to discover the course of the Upper Mississippi River.

June 17, 1673, Jacques Marquette, a French missionary, and Louis Joliet, a French Canadian, came out upon the Mississippi near Prairie du Chien, the first white men to locate the upper course of America's greatest inland waterway. This event, which opened the trade route that led to development of Wisconsin and the Middle West, will be celebrated at Prairie du Chien tomorrow. The Governors of Wisconsin and Iowa are to participate in the celebration.

Campion College, in charge of the Jesuit order to which Father Jacques Marquette belonged, is sponsoring the celebration.

Historical aspects of the discovery are to be depicted in a pageant. Speakers will recount how Marquette and Joliet set out from Mackinaw on May 17, 1673, commissioned to find the Mississippi. They traveled with their party of seven in two large birch canoes. Arriving at Green Bay late in May, the explorers paddled up the Fox River, passing the rapids by portage, then forced their way on to the source of the stream, where guides were obtained from an Indian village.

Crossing to the Wisconsin, the party floated down that stream for a week, entering the Mississippi above Prairie du Chien on June 17.

They went down the river to a point below the mouth of the Arkansas and then, fearing the Spaniards, returned by way of the Illinois River and overland to Lake Michigan. Late in September, the party, after a four months' absence, arrived back in Green Bay, having traveled 2500 miles by canoe.

By his explorations, Marquette established the fact that the Mississippi River could be reached by way of the Great Lakes and was not connected with the Pacific Ocean, as was generally believed.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS GET BACK TO BUSINESS ON REPARATIONS

reparations. French opinion not unnaturally insisted on some action being taken. Hence this rash invasion.

(Lloyd George's references to an "explosion" is to the sudden and unexpected resignation of Premier Briand of France, while a member of the Cannes conference, Briand and President Millerand had clashed over a proposed Anglo-French agreement and there had been much criticism in French circles of Briand's course on the reparations issue.)

At Cannes a two-year moratorium would have been accepted as settlement. Already a year and a half of that period would by now have elapsed. German finances would, under strict allied supervision, which was conceded, by now have been restored to soundness—the mark would have been stabilized and a loan could have been negotiated which would have provided the allies with substantial sums toward lightening the burdens they are all bearing. Confidence would have been restored in Europe and for the first time there would have been real peace. One can see what the alternative has produced.

Health and Nerve Needed.

Whatever the final terms may be, Germany is not in a position to pay what she was able to offer then. These 18 months have been devoted to assiduously reducing German capacity to pay allied debts and the value of German security for such payment. At Cannes the mark stood at 770 to the pound sterling. It now stands at 400,000. Germany will need an extended moratorium to recover from the clumsy mishandling of the past year and a half. The mark has to be picked up out of the abyss into which it has been thrown by those whose interests it was to lift it out of the depression wherein it lay.

A debtor on whose restored health and nerve payment entirely depends has been violently pushed down several flights of stairs. It will take him a long time to recover from the bruises, shake and loss of blood. What an achievement in scientific debt collecting!

If reparations are ever to be paid, the allies must retrace their steps and get back to the conference. Once the parties—all of the parties—sit around a table, I feel assured that the common sense of most will in the end prevail. We shall never get back what has been lost during 1922-23, but we shall get something that will help. It will take some time to set up tackle for hoisting the mark out of the crevasse, and some to do winding. But the sooner a start is made the less winding there will be to do.

So, for everybody's sake, stop the strutting and get back to business.

Do Your Feet Hurt?

¶ Indeed, then, you'll appreciate the service of our foot relief department which is in charge of a graduate foot expert who knows feet and shoes. Here you can be provided with absolute relief from your foot troubles.

Relief Plus Style

Furthermore, to obtain relief, you do not have to sacrifice fashionable footwear such as the stylish shoe for the street, the dainty evening slipper, the sport or dress Oxford. Simply because this new-day method corrects the cause of your foot troubles. It does away with trimming of callouses, wearing of metal plates, and the like.

How? Simply Nature's way—the holding of the 26-bone structure of the foot in normal position with featherlight, all-leather devices which fit comfortably in the shoes. Instantly your feet are relieved. Freedom, ease and comfort are lasting in any shoe that fits you, style or otherwise.

No Charge for Advice

Prove to yourself, without obligation, how easy it is to have comfortable feet. There is no removal of hose. Merely an examination of the stockinged foot, without charge. No discomfort—no inconvenience—just complete relief from your foot troubles.

AUTO PARKING RULES FOR ROTARY MEETING

Space on Several Streets Reserved for Cars at Disposal of the Visitors.

Special parking spaces have been reserved for automobiles engaged in the courtesy of transporting visiting Rotarians next week.

For two days, today and Monday, when the visitors will be arriving, the following spaces will be reserved in proximity to Union Station: North side of Market street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets; both sides of Twentieth street between Chestnut and Market streets, and the west side between Market street and Clark avenue; south side of Market street between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets.

For the same two days, the following spaces will be reserved in the vicinity of the Overland building where registration will take place: West side of Twenty-third street between Olive and Locust streets and the south side of Locust street, between Twenty-third street and Jefferson avenue.

Other Spaces Reserved.

The following other spaces will be reserved beginning Monday through Friday:

Hotel Chase—Both sides of Lindell boulevard between Euclid avenue and King's Highway.

Moolah Temple—North side of Lindell boulevard from Spring to Vandeventer avenue; both sides of McPherson avenue from Vandeventer to Lindell boulevard.

Statler Hotel—North side of Washington avenue, between Eighth and Tenth streets; east side of Ninth street between Washington avenue and Locust street.

Twelfth Street—The entire center-of-the-street parking space between Washington avenue and Pine street.

Arrangements at Coliseum.

Coliseum—West side of Jefferson avenue, between Locust street and Washington avenue; north side of Locust street between Jefferson avenue and Bomont street; south side of Washington avenue from Jefferson to Leffingwell avenue; east side of Bomont street from Washington avenue to Locust street.

Hamilton Hotel—North side of Maple avenue between Goodfellow and Hodiamont avenues.

These spaces will be closed to all automobiles except those whose sign, "rotarians, hop in," indicate they are in service of the visitors.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION DO NOT CLASH, SAYS ARCHBISHOP

Most Rev. William Mundulein Says Catholics Have Never Had Dispute Over Issue.

CHICAGO, June 16.—There is no conflict between science and religion; they work hand in hand, the Most Rev. William Mundulein, Archbishop of Chicago, declared last night in an address at commencement exercises of De Paul University.

"Among scientists and churchmen of the Roman Catholic faith," he said, "there has never been a dispute regarding the merits of scientific discoveries as they affect religion. "Educated persons throughout the world have known this for years. It is only among the illiterate that the notion prevails that science and religion are in conflict."

VERDICT HOLDS AUTO DRIVER

A Coroner's verdict of criminal carelessness was returned yesterday against Edward Wirth, 32 years old, of 3351 Gravois avenue, in the death of Joseph H. Vilmar, 10, 1325 Dillon street, from injuries suffered when struck by a machine driven by Wirth on Wednesday.

The boy was knocked down and dragged several feet in the accident which occurred as he was crossing Park avenue just west of Dillon. Testimony showed Wirth to have been driving his machine west on the south side of Park avenue, which is the wrong side of the street.

CONVENTION VOTES TO DO AWAY WITH NEPOTISM IN STATE

Drastic Regulations Provide That Any Public Official Giving Relative Job Be Subject to Recall.

CONSTITUTIONAL BILL ALSO AFFECTS CITIES

Proposed Legislation Has Long Been Bone of Contention in Politics; Convention Takes Short Recess

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 16.—Nepotism in public office in Missouri yesterday was outlawed by the constitutional Convention. That body, meeting in committee of the whole, in consideration of the reports of the committee on military affairs of miscellaneous provisions, voted that any public officer or employe of the state or of any political subdivision thereof who shall appoint to office a reative within the fourth degree by consanguinity or affinity shall forfeit his office or employment.

The language of the proposed new section of the Constitution would reach not only state officers and members of the Legislature, who have been chronic offenders in putting members of the families on the payroll, but would apply to city, county, township and school district officials as well. It would mean that all members of families of department heads and elective officials in St. Louis also would have to look for new jobs.

The fight against nepotism long has been waged in Missouri by the metropolitan press and by others who fight for clean politics and the best in Government.

Time after time the measures to curb the evils have been presented to the Legislature, but nothing ever could be accomplished because usually a large number of representatives and Senators had wives, daughters, sons and other relatives attached to the payroll. Nor did the political complexion of the General Assembly seem to affect the matter. Nepotism was bi-partisan, Democrats and Republicans viewing the matter through much the same glasses.

Among the State officers the situation has been of a similar nature. John P. Gordon was freely criticised while State Auditor, through influence of the Democratic party, for having members of his family on the payroll. Gov. Hyde, a Republican, likewise has been censured because he appointed his brother, Ben S. Hyde, as State Superintendent of Insurance, and permitted the naming of his brother-in-law, Brown Glenn, of Columbia, to a lucrative position in the Board of Agriculture.

All this would be swept away if the provision tentatively adopted by the convention, at the instance of Norman A. Cox of Joplin is accepted by the people.

It reads as follows: "Any public officer or employe of this State or any political subdivision thereof who shall, by virtue of said office or employment, have the right to name or appoint any person to render service to the State or to any political subdivision thereof, and who shall name or appoint to such service any relative within the fourth degree, or by consanguinity or affinity, shall thereby forfeit his or her office or employment."

The convention is in recess until Monday afternoon.

Memorial to Rathenau.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 17.—Villa Haome in Gruenwald, which Walter Rathenau, had left only a few minutes before he was assassinated about a year ago, will becomes a national memorial to him on the anniversary of the death of the former foreign minister. It has been turned over to the Government by Frau Mathilde Rathenau, his mother.

INDECISION MARKS WEEK'S BUSINESS IN MOST MARKETS

Success of Austrian Loan and Increase in New York Central Dividend Rate Events of Period—Excess of Imports.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"Another week of indecision has passed in the markets. Production continues high, despite a slight slackening in steel on account of labor and weather conditions and some reports of curtailments in the textile industry. Meanwhile, copper has shown an improved tone, buying being resumed on a moderate basis. Looking at the matter broadly, it is apparent that the markets are still waiting for ndications with regard to the arrival and nature of new buying movements. And as such forward buying cannot be hurried, the markets probably must continue to wait until preparations for fall business are further advanced. Taking a more restricted view, the speculative attitude has registered disappointment—disappointment that favorable incidents have not had a greater effect on prices. Many traders apparently exepected the success of the Austrian loan and the increase in the New York Central dividend also galvanized stocks into action and strength. Uncertainty as to much more fundamental conditions is, however, at the bottom of existing stagnation.

Excess of Imports.

"Foreign trade figures for May show an excess of imports amounting to $57,000,000. For the three months beginning with March, when imports first exceeded exports, the excess totals $147,000,000. Thus the economic prophecy to the effect that becoming a creditor nation would reverse our trade balance has been fulfilled. Meanwhile, another consequence of our non-cooperative foreign policy is making itself increasingly felt. Despite abundant industrial and urban prosperity, the prices of farm products remain most unsatisfactory. July wheat at Chicago is fluctuatling in the neighborhood of 01.10, and hogs are selling at the lowest price since 1912. Last year, with corn too plentiful and cheap, farmers sought to find relief by feeding this grain to hogs. Now the surplus supply of corn has been worked off and corn prices are better. But the glut in hogs has demoralized prices. There is thus no real escape from the adverse factor of subnormal foreign markets. In vain to come in prosperably will be a source of wonder that an Administration which was so anxious to propititate the farmer should have so stubbornly refused to adopt the one policy which would really have helped him—that is, co-operation for the improvement of his foreign markets.

"But what our Government neglects to do is being begun in a modest way by private business. The most important aspect of the new Austrian loan is presented by its being a first successful step in applying world capital to the rehabilitation of war-torn Europe. Austria, happily, is applying herself industriously to internal reforms and has made such progress and shown such a disposition that a well-conceived loan has met with enormous success. Both at London and New York the new offering has been heavily oversubscribed and sells at a substantial premium. Small investors, furthermore, have been conspicuous applicents. The operation demonstrates that, given a sound setup, ample capital is available to restore Europe's torn financial fabric.

The Reparation Problem.

"Development in the reparations situation, meanwhile, are not discouraging. Granting that serious differences exist as between French and British aims and political needs, the fact stands out that neither party has taken precipitate action and that conversations have continued in an effort to find a common basis for creating the latest German offer. While it would be still optimistic to expect an early agreement, conditions manifestly are growing more favorable to a settlement. A formula to cover the Ruhr occupation and resistance difficulty probably could be found. An agreement on Germany's ability to pay could be reached. There would remain the troublesome matetr of international debts, to which we distinctly are a party.

"Failure this morning of a 70-year-old New York stock exchange house had little effect apparently upon the markets, it having been understood for some days that one of the larger houses was in difficulties. Extreme dullness pervaded the market in stocks and during the short session of today small changes only were made from last night's closing levels; if anything, prices in general were irregularly lower. A majority of the industrial and railroad leaders held within a fraction of Friday's prices, although in many issues only a few or single transactions were recorded by the tape. Turning to the bond market, dullness prevailed in almost equal degree. Even the new Austrian bonds which during the week have enjoyed an active market, setting a new high record on yesterday, remained relatively quiet. Compilations completed today revealed a large volume of capital offerings for the week, $198,597,000, the largest since early in January. However, bond values remained steady in view of the good demand which has appeared for the recent flotations.

"The cotton market was fairly active, and apparently very little attention was paid by traders to favorable weather reports and news of further curtailment of output by the textile mills. The trading was dominated by the July options, which are now in a highly speculative position, and buying of July carried the last price to 28 cents, with a net gain of 6 points on the day. The wheat market again relaxed after yesterday's showing of some strength. Trading was quiet and there were no important speculative developments.

Packard Single-Eight Touring Car

Announcing the PACKARD SINGLE-EIGHT

Packard Motor Car Company announces the Single-Eight to succeed the famous Twin-Six.

The Single-Eight is presented in the sincere belief that it not only satisfies but exceeds the extreme requirements of those who found only in the Twin-Six their ideal of ultra-fine motoring.

It emphatically surpasses, we believe, any car on the market, either American or Continental, in speed, acceleration, braking, steering, smoothness of operation, ease of control, riding qualities, and beauty and distinction of appearance.

Packard Single-Eight accomplishes these superiorities over all previous motor car practices—

First, by beauty and dominance of appearance which unmistakably forecast exceptional brilliance of performance.

Second, by the complete elimination in the Single-Eight motor of the lack of balance and consequent vibration inherent in previous eight-cylinder motor practice.

Third, by the embodiment in the Single-Eight motor of new engineering principles which result in a wealth of flexible power heretofore unknown in a motor car.

Fourth, by the provision of braking, steering and control mechanisms of such simplicity and ease of operation as to be revolutionary.

Packard Single-Eight gives, probably, the most perfect correlation between a motor of superlative power and all of the operating parts of the chassis, that has yet been attained.

At the same time, extreme simplicity and accessibility result in exceptional ease and economy of maintenance never before realized in a superfine car.

Thus, mechanical and operative perfection, coupled with compelling beauty of design and brilliance of finish, have produced a car nothing short of phenomenal.

It is the confident expectation of the Packard Company that the Single-Eight in its sphere will duplicate the distinction already accorded its companion car—the Single-Six—that of being the most distinguished exponent of its type.

Week Brings Two Weddings and an Engagement in the East of Interest to St. Louis

Miss Josephine January's Betrothal to Worth Daniels, Son of Former Secretary of the Navy, Announced in Baltimore — Miss Janavince Kerens Is Bride of Walter Bryant Pierce and Miss Lucy Hewitt Will Wed Guido Pantaleoni Jr. Today

OCCASIONALLY news of St. Louisans who have moved away exceeds in interest that which concerns those who stay at home. Such is the case this week-end in the East, where two weddings and an engagement in which three of the six principals have made their home here, take their places in the current romances. Today in Midvale, N. J., will occur the wedding of Miss Lucy Hewitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ringwood Hewitt of New York, and Guido Pantaleoni Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Guido Pantaleoni of 8 Lenox place; yesterday Miss Janavince Kerens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Kerens of New York, and grand daughter of the late Richard C. Kerens of St. Louis, Ambassador to Austria, became the bride of Walter Bryant Pierce of New York, and Friday the engagement of Miss Josephine January, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. January of 5800 Enright avenue, and Worth Daniels, son of Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy during the Wilson administration, was announced in Baltimore, where Miss January and her fiance are students at Johns Hopkins University, and in St. Louis by means of notes to close friends.

Miss Hewitt and Mr. Pantaleoni will be married at 3 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Reiland of St. George's Church of New York in St. Elizabeth's, a private chapel on the estate of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton at Tuxedo, N. Y., and a reception will follow at Wewappo Farm, the adjoining Hewitt home in Midvale. The bride's attendants are to be her sister, Miss Cadance Hewitt, maid of honor; Mary Schuyler Schieffelin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Schieffelin, flower girl; Miss Louise Vanderbilt Schieffelin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin and fiancee of Abram S. Hewitt, the bride's brother, and Miss Eleanor Ashley of Toledo, O.

Raoul Pantaleoni will be his brother's best man, and the ushers are to be Ashley Cooper Hewitt, another brother of the bride; Leeds Wheeler of Cambridge, Mass.; James Gore King, and Wendell Davis of New York; Dana Von Schrader of St. Louis; Russell Chapin of Springfield, Mass.; Higginson Manning and Gifford Alley of Boston and Haven Parker of New Haven, Conn.

Miss Hewitt is a granddaughter of the late Mayor Abram S. Hewitt of New York and great-granddaughter of the late Peter Cooper, philanthropist. She is a member of the Colony Club and vice-president of the Junior League in New York. She was decorated by the French Government for relief work under the auspices of the American Committee for Devastated France, as well as by the peasants of the sector in which she worked. Mr. Pantaleoni is a nephew of Maffeo Pantaleoni, a senator of the Italian Parliament. His grandfather was Dr. Pantaleoni, the Italian patriot who distinguished himself during the war for Italian unity. After a honeymoon trip in Europe, Mr. Pantaleoni and his bride will reside in New York.

Yesterday at noon in the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, the Most Reverend Patrick J. Hayes, archbishop of New York officiating, Miss Kerens was married to Mr. Pierce. The attendants were Misses Vernelle Head of Omaha, Neb., maid of honor; Miss Rosemary and Margaret Hollister, Margaret Power, Margaret Ramsey, Nina Chatillon and Jean Douglas, bridesmaids; Raymond Francis Baby, stepfather of the bridegroom, best man, and Peter Roy Lawson, C. Berkley Cooke, Edward Walker, John W. Snowden III, Edwin Harvey Herzog, George M. Laughlin, III of Pittsburg, Lawrence Copley Thaw and C. Harvey Pierce of Baltimore.

The bride's gown was of white satin, made with a long court train, and her veil held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms, was of rare old rose point lace worn by her mother and grandmother at their weddings. The bridesmaids wore green and lavendar crepe with hats to match. The church was decorated in pink roses and peonies.

The bride was educated in the Sacre Coeur convents of Europe and this country and at Miss Spence's School in New York. She is a member of the Junior League and is known in society for her skill as an amateur dancer. Mr. Pierce is a graduate of Harvard University.

The engagement of Miss January to Mr. Daniels is of unusual interest here. The prospective bride made her debut several years ago and was special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball that year. She is a graduate of Wellesley College. Lady Leith of Fyvie Castle, Scotland, whom she has visited a number of times, and Mrs. John T. Davis of Portland place are her aunts. She has always been interested in medicine, and a few years ago spent some time with Dr. Grenfell at his hospital in Labrador. Mr. Daniels will be graduated next June from Johns Hopkins. His family live in Raleigh, N. C.

The wedding will take place in September in Baltimore.

MANY ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS ARE ANNOUNCED.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Orie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Ogle of 7050 Washington boulevard, and Thomas A. Cleveland, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Cleveland, took place last night at the Ogle home, Dr. John L. Roemer of Lindenwood College officiating. The decorations throughout the house were pink and blue, and the bridal party stood under an arch of roses in the living room.

The gowns of the bride's attendants were chiffon voile, Miss Mildred Ogle wearing rose; Miss Marion Bennett of Oklahoma City, orchid, and Miss Leonelle Cleveland, blue. They were made with a petal-like surplice collar forming tiny sleeves, and ribbon sashes with showers of the ribbon at the front of the gowns. Their flowers were of contrasting colors arranged in colonial bouquets, and the ribbons which tied them were fastened to the wrists. Mary Ella Cleveland and Betty Diable as flower girls, wore ruffled net frocks over pink silk and carried hats filled with rose petals.

The bride's gown was of white moreen crepe adorned with chantilly lace. There were long angel sleeves of the lace which reached the floor and were caught to the train, and more of the lace adorned the front drapery of the skirt and formed a coronet from which fell the tulle veil. The train was of crepe lined with pink georgette and edged with pearls. She carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland have departed for Chicago on a two weeks' honeymoon trip and will make their home temporarily in St. Louis. The bride is a graduate of Lindenwood. Mr. Cleveland was educated at Washington University and was a member of Sigma Chi.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Church Bixby departed Friday at noon for New York and Lake George, N. Y., to spend a few days before sailing June 26 on their honeymoon trip. Mrs. Bixby was Miss Gloria Geisinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Geisinger of 15 Kingsbury place. Their wedding, one of the most notable of the year in St. Louis, took place at 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, before a representative assemblage. Details were in Thursday's editions of the Post-Dispatch.

Mr. Bixby's gift to his bride was a string of perfectly matched pearls and to his groomsmen leather bill folders with gold corners. Mrs. Bixby presented her attendants with pearl chokers.

Upon their return from Europe Mr. and Mrs. Bixby will make their home for the summer at 15 Kingsbury place. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby of 26 Portland place, parents of the bridegroom, and their family departed Friday afternoon for Lake George to open their summer home.

WAS MARRIED JUNE 7

MRS. FRANK C. MERKER

MRS. MERKER was formerly Miss Mary Willie Woodward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Woodward of Forest Ridge. She was married June 7 in the garden surrounding the Woodward home. After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Merker will make their home in St. Louis.

The marriage of Miss Alice Ruemmeli, youngest daughter of Mrs. Louise Ruemmeli and the late Albert Ruemmeli, to William Maier of New York will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Faure, 1525 Missouri avenue, Monday, June 25. The bride will be attended by her sister, Mrs. James McKelvey of Tulsa, Ok., as matron of honor; Miss Marguerite Versen, maid of honor, and Miss Laura Barnes, bridesmaid. Dorothy Brockmeyer will be flower girl. After the ceremony Mr. Maier and his bride will depart for an extended honeymoon trip and will make their home in New York.

The bride was a student at Mary Institute. She spent two years in the East studying the violin under Alexander Block and Leopold Auer.

Mr. Maier is an alumnus of Cornell University and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He played on the Agricultural School football team and was in the university orchestra.

The engagement of Miss June Henckler to Verna W. Vane of Omaha, Neb., was announced at a garden party Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Henckler's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Henckler, 2319 South Compton avenue.

One hundred guests, all students at Washington University, attended. The prospective bride is a member of the freshman class and of the Delta Gamma Sorority.

Mr. Vance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Vance of Omaha. He is a member of the senior class of the Washington University Law School and of the Phi Delta Phi Fraternity. His parents motored to St. Louis to be present at his graduation.

The marriage of Miss Catheren Clancy and John Fallon will take place Wednesday at St. Pius' Church, the Rev. Coleman King, recently ordained cousin of the bride, officiating. Miss Margaret Clancy will be her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Mary Clancy, her cousin, bridesmaid. Adair Danabar and Peggy Kelly will be flower girls. Mr. Fallon will have James Murphy as groomsman and Thomas Daly and Arthur Cockrane as ushers. A breakfast for the families and close friends will follow at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Clancy, 4032 Humphrey street. Mr. Fallon will take his bride to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for their honeymoon trip, and they will reside in an apartment at 1461 Goodfellow avenue.

Miss Ruth Nelsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nelsch, 3810 Page avenue, will become the bride of Sidney J. Heiman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Heiman of Florissant, Mo., on June 22, the twenty-second anniversary of the marriage of her parents. Rabbi Samuel Sale, who officiated then, will perform the ceremony. The couple will spend their honeymoon at Niagara Falls and in other Eastern cities, and will be at home after July 7 at 3810 Page avenue.

A wedding of the past week was that of Miss Lucille Halloran, daughter of Mrs. C. Halloran of 3535 Iowa avenue, and Fred B. Dickson, son of Mrs. R. C. Dickson of Webster Groves, Monday at 8 o'clock. The ceremony and the reception which followed took place at the home of the bridegroom's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mann, in Webster Groves. The Rev.

ARCADE BUSINESS ASSOCIATION

TOPICS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—All is in a flutter of excitement at the White House where the President and Mrs. Harding are packing for their summer holiday which will include a business like inspection of the great northwest.

A party of distinguished officials and friends will accompany the President and Mrs. Harding, including Secretaries Weeks, Wallace, and Work, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, Mr. and Mrs. George Christian and Doctor and Mrs. Sawyer.

While the social activity of the trip will be kept as far submerged as possible because of Mrs. Harding's state of health which, while permitting the journey, would not stand many functions or entertainments yet, there will be many events scheduled for the trip.

Mah Jongg Set Packed.

It is whispered that one of the articles that went into the Presidential wardrobe trunk was the beautiful Mah Jongg set which was given to him last fall and at which popular game now raging with unabated zeal in Washington's four hundred, he is an adept. Many a round of the elusive game the Chinese call the "Game of The Hundred Intelligencies" will enliven the trans-continental trip. The President's set is hand-painted and one of the handsomest in America.

Since Secretary Weeks is going with the party, that will prevent Assistant Secretary of War Dwight Davis from making the trip as was planned at one time for he will have to sit on the "lid" of the War department in Washington. This St. Louisan has much to console him however in the admirable tennis courts at Chevy Chase where he can be seen after office hours matching his skill with various young diplomats, skilled in this royal game.

Apropos of diplomats, much sorrow is displayed in the foreign colony here over the lamentable condiion of the eyes of the British Ambassador Sir Auckland Geddes, who is threatened with total blindness. For weeks he has been confined to a darkened room and the other day when the bandages were removed for the first time it was found that there was still uncertainty as to the permanent condition of his sight. This probably will mean a new Ambassador from the Court of Saint James eventually in Washington—a regrettable matter as Sir Auckland has made many warm friends since his arrival here and his retiring under such tragic circumstances would be a matter of universal regret.

An important member of the Missouri Colony wil be lost to Washington when Rear Admiral Robert E. Coontz goes west to take command of the Pacific Fleet. The Coontzs have been popular here in naval circles and as Chief of the Bureau of Operations, Admiral Coontz had wide power in the service.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Robert Coontz went to Annapolis for the June week festivities. Admiral Coontz, who has recently been placed in command of the United States Fleet, will leave for the west coast in July where he will assume command of the Pacific Fleet at San Diego, Aug. 5. He will return in November to take charge of the Atlantic Fleet on board the flagship U. S. S. Seattle. As long as it is necessary for the admiral to divide his time between the two coasts, Mrs. Coontz will continue to maintain their apartment at Wardman Park Hotel where she will remain with her son Lieut. K. L. Coontz and Miss Bertha Coontz, her daughter. Miss Coontz will graduate from the Western High School in July.

Gen. John J. Pershing, who went to West Point to attend the commencement exercises at the Military Academy, is now in New York and is staying at the Waldorf Astoria. He is accompanied by his son, Warren Pershing. Major John G. Quekemeyer, aide to the general.

Greater Beauty for Every Complexion

For over 80 years GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM has rendered greater beauty to thousands of women the world over. We have now extended its usefulness so that those who desire to closely harmonize their complexion with their particular shade of beauty can do so to the best advantage.

Gouraud's Oriental Cream is now available in three shades.

Flesh—for those who desire to bring the glow of roses to their cheeks.

Rachelle—for those who desire the enchanting depth of color, just off the white shade.

White—popular for all complexions for over 80 years.

Gouraud's Oriental Cold Cream and Gouraud's Medicated Soap are indispensable complexion aids and should be used in conjunction with Gouraud's Oriental Cream.

Send 10c. for trial size bottle in either shade, or 25c. for a trial size bottle of Gouraud's Oriental Cream, any shade desired, a cake of Gouraud's Medicated Soap, and a tube of Gouraud's Oriental Cold Cream.

Foot troubles need no longer sap your nervous energy

This week you can find relief easily, quickly, here at our store

The pain of those poor aching feet—how you long to get rid of it! For not only is the constant irritation distressing, but, as physicians well know, it saps your nervous energy too.

This week, from the 16th to the 23rd of June is your chance to get genuine relief from foot ills—without even a change in your usual style of footwear. You can learn this week the scientific way to real foot comfort through the help of the well-known foot authority, Dr. Wm. M. Scholl.

It may be that your arches are breaking down. You know the danger signals—intense weariness of the feet upon the slightest exertion, shooting pains like rheumatism in the feet or legs, weak, turning ankles, cramped toes, tender corns, callouses or bunions. Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazers and Arch Supports, as applied to each individual case, correct these symptoms by gently supporting the bones and ligaments, increasing the circulation, and stimulating muscular action until the strength of the arch is restored.

Since no two foot conditions are the same, each case requires individual treatment, that is, an adjustable arch support. Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances are fitted to each individual foot condition.

We are one of 20,000 shoe and department stores throughout the country with men trained in Dr. Scholl's methods. We can fit you with the Dr. Scholl Appliance or Remedy which your particular trouble needs.

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads relieve corns quickly, safely, by removing the cause—friction-pressure, and healing the irritated surface. Price, 35c a box

Crooked, worn-down heels? Dr. Scholl's Walk-Strate Heel Pads correct this condition, even up the body weight, and preserve the shape of the shoes. Price, 40c a pair

Dr Scholl's Foot Comfort Week

JUNE 16TH-23RD

Arch gently supported and body's weight equally distributed by Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer. Light and springy to wear. Eases feet, body, and nerves

DELEGATES TO STATE D. A. R. SESSION CHOSEN

Mrs. Frederick H. Starr entertained the members of the board of the St. Louis Chapter, D. A. R., at her home in Webster Groves on June 7th. The usual celebration of Flag day was omitted this year on account of the death May 1 of Mrs. Robert W. Brooks, regent of the chapter.

The delegates elected to attend the state conference of the D. A. R., to be held in Sedalia in October, are: Mrs. Shelby H. Curlee, Regent, and Mmes. Theodore Shelton, Wallace Delafield, A. V. L. Brokaw, and James H. McCabe.

The alternates are: Mmes. Wilson W. Keyser, Joseph S. Calfee, Milton C. Marshall, Ben F. Gray, William Rodes Estill, Betty Gentry Skinner, John N. Booth, Clement W. Nelson, W. J. Harris and Miss Nannie Hocker Estill.

There will be no meeting of the chapter during the summer months.

Margaret McLure Chapter, United Daughters of Confederacy, held their last meeting of the season on Monday, June 11, at the home of Mrs. M. P. Duke, 7068 Maryland avenue. Mrs. G. K. Warner, Miss Nancy Warner and Mrs. W. H. Dickey, were the assistant hostesses.

The Historian, Mrs. W. A. Vivion, read a number of interesting historical facts.

Delegates were elected to the state convention in the fall at Kansas City, as follows: Mrs. L. W. Ray, Miss Laura Phillippi, Mrs. W. A. Vivion, Mrs. T. M. Young and Mrs. J. C. Edwards were elected delegates, and the alternates elected were Mrs. G. K. Warner, Mrs. W. H. Hudson, Miss Marie LeGear, Mrs. Paul Guerard, and Mrs. W. P. Hawkins.

Mrs. H. S. O'Bannon, State Chaplain of the Missouri Division, will attend the convention, and also Mrs. H. F. Brey, president, and Mrs. John Hurck, by virtue of their offices, will be in attendance, making a representation of eight from Margaret McLure Chapter.

The Althena Delphian Chapter held its final meeting of the season Tuesday evening at Cabanne Branch Library. The program being "The Peleponnesian War: Its Cause and Consequences." General theme, "Trade rivalries culminate in militarism which destroys trade, progress and democracy.

After the discussions the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Ione T. Gilmore; vice president, Miss Lula C. Bridges; secretary and treasurer, Miss Nellie B. Babcock. Members of Advisory Board, Miss Lida Collins, Miss Minda Safer, with Miss Collins as chairman.

The chapter will have three social gatherings during the summer, July 9, Aug. 13, and Sept. 10, meeting for the first of these at the home of Mrs. Lily Linde. Regular meetings next season will continue at Cabanne Branch Library. The date of first regular meeting to be announced later.

Flag day was observed by the Webster Groves Chapter, D. A. R., at the last meeting of the season on Tuesday, June 12, held at the home of Mrs. Herbert Rountree, 235 Jefferson road. Mmes. Harry Holbrook, Roderick Allen, B. H. Kooser, W. L. Greenhalgh and C. M. Skinner assisted. Mrs. Lida Vincent, State librarian, and Mrs. F. C. Harrington, regent of Douglas Oliver Chapter, were honor guests.

After a short business session, articles pertaining to Flag day were read by the regent, Mrs. C. M. Skinner, Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Stuart, Mrs. Kooser, Miss Allen, Mrs. Ramsey, Mrs. Roderick Allen and Mrs. Greenhalgh. One of the most interesting features was hearing Edward Stuart read his prize essay on Samuel Adams. This essay won the D. A. R. medal in the recent school contest.

The program closed with a piano solo by Miss Virginia Rountree and was followed by a short social hour.

The annual picnic of Chapter CK, P. E. O., was held Tuesday, June 12, at Look-a-Bit, the country home of Mrs. William P. Evans. Mrs. Evans was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. R. L. Michel, and Miss Catherine Erwin. After luncheon the members of CK sewed for the Visiting Nurses' Association.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Campbell, the coresponding secretary, Mrs. Drayer, presided. Mrs. Barnes of Chapter B, Pittsburg, brought greetings from her chapter.

Chapter O, P. E. O., met June 11 at the home of Mrs. G. W. Coffman, 6607 Virginia avenue, with Mrs. Samuel P. Harris assisting hostess. Mmes. Hatfield, Jeffords and Koontz gave reports of the State convention held in Springfield, Mo.

There is a meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Theosophical Society every Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Academy of Science Building, 3817 Olive street. Those interested are invited.

The annual banquet of the Kroeger School of Music Alumni Association was held in the Colonial room of Hotel Chase Thursday evening. Miss Katherine Tenner was elected president; Miss Viola Reitter, vice president; Miss Sue Parks, secretary and George C. Mauger, treasurer.

The graduates of St. Elizabeth Academy Day School entertained the under-graduates at a luncheon and dance yesterday afternoon at Bevo Mill. The graduates are Misses Lucille Broderick, Marie Helfert, Loretto Kupferer, Marie Padberg, Lucille Stein, Clara Wolff and Theo Welsh. Miss Dorothy Filippi, a members of the class of 1924, was honor guest at a farewell party Wednesday evening. She will depart for her home in Chicago Friday. The members of the class are Misses Hall, Landgraf, Riggle, Ryan, Stuevir and Windler.

Mrs. Amalia Treutler of 4556 Washington boulevard with her daughter, Miss Frances Treutler, will sail June 20 for Naples, whence they will start a tour of Europe.

STOP FOOLING YOURSELF!

The most misguided persons in the world are those who refuse to face a fact.

If you suffer from headaches—for instance—you must realize there is some cause, and the headaches are not going to stop unless that cause is removed. Drugs don't remove the cause, they merely deaden the pain for a little while.

Thousands of sick and nervous headaches arise because of some defect of vision, unsuspected by the victim.

Have me test your eyes at once. I have specialized for 19 years in the relief of eyestrain headaches solely by means of properly prescribed glasses.

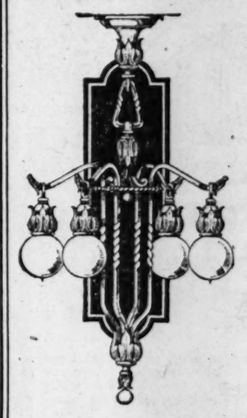
Home Electric Fixtures



The electric fixture equipment in the home is one of the most important features of decoration. If properly selected it fulfills a dual purpose, that of decorative effect and of substituting for the sun throughout the hours when the home is most used.

Fixture equipment should be selected with extreme care to combine these two functions effectively.

Our showrooms present a most extensive exposition of correct lighting equipment. A visit here will enable you to select a correct fixture for any location.

Our designers will submit sketches for special locations.

JUNE BRIDE

Is in the best taste, and is a lasting felicitation. An Electric Household Appliance combines the three elements essential to a happy gift-selection—Beauty, Usefulness and Charm.

In giving an Electric Appliance you pay a compliment not only to the taste and practical judgment of the bride but to your own discrimination as well. Whether it be a device for her personal use, such as the curling iron or vibrator, or one to serve her household generally, such as a cleaner or a lamp, you are giving her the best possible means of doing what it is designed to do. The Electric Way is the Best Way.

EMPLOYERS RAISING $50,000 TO FIGHT THE PLASTERERS

Money to Be Used in Importing Men if Strikers Refuse to Return to Work at $12 a Day.

ABOUT $30,000 ALREADY SUBSCRIBED, THEY SAY

Plan Is to Pay Transportation of Nonunion Workers and House Them While They Are in City.

Plans for combating the demand for an increase from $1.50 to $1.75 an hour, or to $14 a day made by journeymen plasterers, refusal of which caused about 350 of them to walk out last Monday, have been left to a committee of seven by the contracting plasterers.

This committee, of which Peter Anderson Jr., is chairman, is outlining the employers' stand, and will present definite proposals at a meeting tomorrow by which the contractors may attempt to break the strike and reopen building construction which has been hampered by the discontinuance of work on virtually every plastering job in the city.

"We have already raised about $30,000 of the fund of $50,00 decided upon to finance our side of this strike," Anderson said yesterday. "We are going to get nonunion plasterers, if necessary, and make every effort to win this controversy. This stand is taken because we feel we are absolutely right in the matter."

Purpose of the Fund.

Anderson said the fund would be used to pay transportation of the men to take the strikers' places, and to house them and care for them generally during their stay, which, it is intimated, will be permanent, unless the union men here agree to go back to work at the old $12-a-day scale.

As is known, some 300 plasterers' hodcarriers also are out, having been refused an increase of from $9 to $10 a day, or to $1.25 an hour, made as a result of the plasterers' previous demand. The employers intend, they say, to engage negro laborers to do this work if nothing else will cause the hodcarriers to return to their jobs.

The strike is regarded by the contractors generally, not only in the plastering division of building construction, but others, as peculiarly significant, its success, they predict, being the signal for a general demand among building tradesmen for more money.

Significance of the Strike.

"The economic significance of this strike is little appreciated," Frank Boyd, secretary of the Contracting Plasterers' Association, asserts. "If it is won it will be the death knell of building in St. Louis for the next two years. The "buyers' strike" will result, which we have feared with the general increase already made.

"The contractors don't want to employ nonunion plasterers. But we are willing to do it if necessary to win this strike, which would result badly, not only for the employers, but, ultimately, for the unions themselves. Building will cease, and both of us will be the losers. The owners won't stand an added financial burden."

The contractors have attempted in their efforts to reach an equitable solution of the difficulty to present a solid front in their refusal to meet the union's demand, and have held meetings, as is known, with representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, the Real Estate Exchange and other business organizations, to give them an idea of the effect of the strike and to gain their co-operation in its defeat.

Attitude of Master Builders.

E. J. McMahon, secretary of the Master Builders' Association, sent out a letter to members of that organization, stating that they "are asked personally to see that no plastering goes ahead on your buildings, regardless of any demand upon you."

He has pointed out the other increases now pending, stating "the slaters, steamfitters, lathers, plasterers, hodcarriers and others are making demands right now. These will turn every job you already have into a big loss—and then we will have a 'buyers' strike' in St. Louis, and you will loaf for the next year."

The Post-Dispatch has made frequent effort to reach officers of the plasterers' union, and yesterday reached Robert E. Lee, business agent, by telephone. Asked for any statement the union cared to make in explanation of its stand, Lee replied he had "no news for you," and hung up. The employers are giving publicity to their plans and actions, believing the public should be acquainted with the situation.

Status of the Dispute.

The contractors have said that more than 90 per cent of the contracting plasterers and sub-contractors are standing by the refusal to meet the demand, while Lee has said that "most of the men are on the job at the $14 scale." Boyd said less than 60 plasterers had been working since the walkout took place a week ago.

A grievance the employers feel most strongly, also, is the suddenness of the plasterers' demand, which was made on Friday a week ago, and to be effective last Monday. The Building Trades Council has a ruling stating its members must give the employers a four months' notice of intended demands for higher wage scales.

The plasterers are not affiliated with the council, but the hodcarriers are, and a letter of protest is suggested by the builders to be sent to the council with regard to the hodcarriers' demand, more sudden than the plasterers' ultimatum.

1000 FAIL TO PAY U. S. TAXES

Approximately 1000 persons in St. Louis and Eastern Missouri failed to pay the second installment of the Federal income tax by Friday midnight, the final legal time for payment. A penalty of 5 per cent will be assessed against each by the Internal Revenue Collector, and in addition the full amount of their taxes becomes immediately due. For each month they fail to pay an additional penalty of 1 per cent will be assessed.

The number of delinquents on the second installment this year is less than in 1922, when nearly 2000 failed to pay on time. Many of those have not yet paid the 1922 tax. Penalties are being added.

MISSOURIAN FOUND
Worked as Carpenter in Iowa; Couldn't Remember Leaving Home.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.
HUTCHINSON, Kan., June 16.—James Harford, 50 years old, real estate man of Carrollton, Mo., who disappeared from his home last February, was located in Dodge City Saturday, where he was known as Jo James and working as a carpenter. Harford was identified by Guy Reed, a former Carrollton boy. He spoke to Harford, but the man appeared not to know him. Reed wrote to the Harford family, and the son, Harold Harford, came Saturday and found his father.
The elder Harford has no recollection of leaving home. He first knew of his whereabouts when he was at Catalina Island. After drifting around in California he landed in Dodge City a few weeks ago.

FARM COLONIES FOR DEFECTIVES URGED

Eugenics Research Head Warns Against Great Menace of Irresponsibility.

By the Associated Press.

COLD SPRINGS HARBOR, L. I., June 16.—It lies within human power, though the complete ideal may never be achieved, to prevent insanity and defectiveness to such a degree that an outspoken case will be as rare as a case of leprosy, Chief Justice Harry Olson, of the Chicago Municipal Court, declared today in an address before the Eugenics Research Association, of which he is president.

Speaking on the subject "Crime and Heredity," Judge Olson asserted that the problem of crime is in reality the problem of crime prevention, adding that the loss of life and property by criminal means is steadily increasing in this country. As a solution for the crime problem, Judge Olson advocated farm colonies for defectives, who, he said, are multiplying as never before. Such farms, he predicted, soon will be "common enough."

"Crime prevention finally is seen to be the weeding out of defective stocks and is a part of the eugenic program," he continued, "being most readily discovered and most universally abhorred, crime control becomes the first step in the eugenic program.

"Irresponsibility is the quintessential to the social characteristic of both general classes of defectives, the morons and the psychopaths.

"The great menace from irresponsibility at the present time is the easy reproduction of the unfit. At the present day the defectives are multiplying as never before. The limitation of offspring has foolishly been called race suicide. It is not. Race suicide lies in the encouragement of the unfit.

"We can not put to death every incorrigible criminal. We can not unsex all our defectives. That would be the easiest, cheapest and surest method. It would purify the life stream in a few years. But public opinion will not, at this time, sustain such practices on a scale commensurate with the population.

"There remains seemingly but one alternative, which is to segregate the defective delinquents in state controlled colonies where the protective environment can be created. Under such control there is an abrupt end to criminal depredations and to reproduction. Both great needs of society are met.

"Existence for the individual defective will no longer be anguished and agony for him but a sensible balancing of work and play."

WHAT THIS SALE MEANS TO YOU!

As you know—we operate the 4 Big Drug Stores of St. Louis. Each store has a Manager, entirely responsible for it—naturally there does occur a difference of opinion among our Managers as to what their patrons most appreciate.

IN THIS MANAGERS' COMPETITION SALE

Each of the 4 Store Managers has been allotted ¼ of this page to LIST and PRICE such articles as he thinks his public will want. The result of this grouping of four different men's selection of articles SHOULD AND WILL RESULT in such a sale that "SENSATIONAL" seems weak in describing.

117 BOYS AWARDED DIPLOMAS

St. Louis University High Holds 104th Commencement.

Diplomas were awarded to 117 boys at the 104th graduation exercises of St. Louis University High School Friday night. The following scholarships were awarded: First prize, four years of high school work and four years of college work, to Paul Anthony Stauder; four years of high school work to Joseph Ross, Joseph A. Schulte, Gerald Smith, William Lembeck, Paul Hartman and Bernard Fleming. Sixth and seventh places were won by Jacob Saum and Lawrence Gusnard, but they were disqualified because only one scholarship is allotted to a parish, and their parishes were represented by winners with higher average grades.

Gold medals for elocution and for scholarship were awarded to John Boland, Joseph Tissier, Thomas Dempsey, John Garesche, William Kelly, John Davidson, Jacob Rau, Virgil James, Joseph Walter, Charles Bruening, Stephen Kelly, Edmond Burke, Bernhard McDonald, Cornelius Dahm, Herbert Emmett Kelly, Charles Ledder, Edgar Helbling, Gerald Bader and Paul Thatcher.

SALUTE OF 21 GUNS WILL BE FIRED ON HARDING'S ARRIVAL

Battery A to Assist in Carrying Out Welcome to Presidential Party When Members Reach City Thursday.

COMMITTEE PLANS ON SPECIAL ATTIRE

Hope Is Expressed That Reception Body Will Wear White Trousers and Blue Coats; Amplifying Devices for Coliseum.

Eight busy hours will be spent by President and Mrs. Harding in St. Louis Thursday afternoon and night, when they make the first stop, and the President makes his first public address on their tour to Alaska.

When the presidential train stops at Lindell and Union boulevards, Battery A will fire a salute of 21 guns, and the Jefferson Barracks and Letter Carriers bands will play "The Star-Spangled Banner." Detachments of regular troops from the Barracks will stand at attention while the President and Mrs. Harding enter automobiles.

A procession, in which 14 cars have been alloted to the presidential party and accompanying officials and correspondents, will start east on Lindell boulevard shortly after 4 o'clock. Speaker Gillette of the House of Representatives and Secretary of the Interior Work are expected to be in the party.

Locust boulevard will be followed on the drive downtown, and the President will stop at Eleventh and Locust streets to lay the cornerstone of the new City Club building. The rest of the line will go on ahead of the President to Hotel Statler, where the President will meet the reception committee formally, on the mezzanine floor.

To Wear Special Garb.

The members of the committee have been asked to appear in costumes of blue coats, white trousers and straw hats. It is expected that this costume regulation will be followed more cosey than a simiar regulation was followed on the occasion of the last presidential visit to St. Louis, made by President Wilson Sept. 5, 1919.

On that occasion, though frock coat and silk hat had been prescribed, some members of the committee wore business costumes and straw hats, as it was a warm day, and when the President appeared, he also was wearing a sack suit and straw hat.

The President will eat dinner in his suite at the Statler, with the members of the presidential party only. He will leave the hotel about 8 p. m., to go to the Coliseum for his scheduled address on the subject of the World Court. The presidential party will leave St. Louis at midnight.

Vocal amplifying devices will be installed in the Coliseum, before the President's speech, by telephone experts, accompanying the presidential party.

The reception committee, headed by President Vesper of the Chamber of Commerce, with Walter B. Weisenburger as vice-chairman, will meet at the Chamber of Commerce at noon Tuesday, to consider further details in the arrangements. The committee will hold a final meeting Wednesday noon, in the room of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at the City Hall.

Procession Details Arranged.

The arrangement of automobiles for the procession downtown, by the Lindell-Locust route, places the President and Mrs. Harding in the first machine. The second car will be occupied by Secret Service men, and the third by George B. Christian, secretary to the President, Brigadier Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, Capt. Adolphus Andrews, U. S. N., and Judson C. Welliver.

In other cars will be Secretary and Mrs Work, Speaker Gillette, William Spry, commissioner of the General Land Office, and 30 or more newspaper correspondents and moving picture men, besides stenographers and secretaries of the presidential party.

The presidential suite set apart at the Statler, on the fourteenth floor, is the same which President and Mrs. Wilson used on their last visit here. It consists of two bedrooms, reception room and dining room.

In conformity with advices from Washington no special entertainment plans have been made for Mrs. Harding, as she will be with the President most of the time.

Festival for Benefit of Orphans.

The annual spring festival for the benefit of the German Protestant Orphans' Home, St. Charles Rock road, will be held next Sunday at the home. At 3 p. m. the orphans will parade through the parks to the speakers' stand, where services will be held. They will sing and George E. Hackmann, Auditor of Missouri, and Rev. Paul Langhorst of the Salem Evangelical Church will speak. In the evening the park will be illuminated and there will be a band concert.

LOVE LETTER GOES AS WILL

Missive Sent to Girl by Soldier Before He Was Killed Accepted by Court.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A love letter written by Ernest G. Mason in the trenches of France to Miss Eleanor Knapp of Brooklyn today was accepted by Surrogate Wingate as Mason's last will and testament and by it Miss Knapp will receive approximately $23,000. Mason's was said to have been the first huncupative will probated in New York since the Civil War.

The letter, written a short time before Mason "went over the top" for the last time, told Miss Knapp, Mason's fiancee, that, if anything happened to him, he wanted her to have all his possessions, including the war insurance he carried. Mason was captured by the Germans and last was heard of in a prison camp where one of his "buddies' saw him suffering from influenza.

ST. LOUISANS AT CONVENTION

Mrs. William John Hall Presided at Junior Club Session.

Mrs. William John Hall of St. Louis, who is national chairman of Junior Clubs, presided at the national junior forum which was held Friday afternoon at Asheville, N. C., during the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs. A patriotic hymn, "The New America," by Charles Claflin Allen of St. Louis, was sung, and Mrs. Bessie Bown Ricker, also of this city, delivered two groups of poems and stories.

In connection with her work as national chairman, Mrs. Hall has prepared a brief and simple treatise for children on the instruments of the orchestra. Missouri, it was stated at the convention, leads the country in the number of Junior Musical Clubs.

Mayor to Begin Prison Term

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 16.—Mayor Bray of Beaufort, S. C., who before his election was fined $1000 and sentenced to a year and a day in prison for striking a Federal tax examiner, will leave Wednesday to begin serving his term in the Atlanta Federal prison.

Did Closed Cars Cost Too Much?

Thousands Thought So

Prior to the Coach, closed cars on high grade chassis were too costly for most buyers.

A moderate-priced closed car meant a low-priced chassis.

The Coach, for the first time, combined a famous chassis with closed car comforts at moderate price.

That accounts for its wonderful success. More than 50,000 are in service.

The Coach is staunchly built, for long, hard service. It stays tight and snug, free of rattles and squeaks. And you get its year round comfort and protection for but a trifle more than open car cost.

In choosing your next car, be sure to see the Coach. It will satisfy your every closed car need at a saving of from $500 to $1200.

CHIROPRACTOR FINED $50

Meyer Convicted Under Advertising Section of State Law.

J. Meyer of 3109 South Jefferson avenue, a chiropractor, was fined yesterday by a jury in the Court of Criminal Correction on a charge of holding himself out in a manner to indicate that he was treating the sick.

He was prosecuted under the advertising section of the State medical act. An advertising solicitor for the Bell Telephone Co. identified Meyer as having contracted for an advertisement in the telephone directory concerning chiropractic. Meyer filed a motion for a new trial.

Would You Be Beautiful?
Beauty has been the quest of all ages. Thousands of lovely women attribute their beauty to the use of Nadine Face Powder. The cheeks have just a tint of color—the skin can only be equalled by the soft texture of a rose petal. Nadine will keep the roses in your cheeks. It will adhere and protect the skin from the sun, wind and dust. It contains no white lead or other ingredient to harm the skin or the eyes. It's the same pure powder, popular for so many years—only the box and fragrance have been improved.

Would You Be Beautiful?

Beauty has been the quest of all ages. Thousands of lovely women attribute their beauty to the use of Nadine Face Powder. The cheeks have just a tint of color—the skin can only be equalled by the soft texture of a rose petal. Nadine will keep the roses in your cheeks. It will adhere and protect the skin from the sun, wind and dust. It contains no white lead or other ingredient to harm the skin or the eyes. It's the same pure powder, popular for so many years—only the box and fragrance have been improved.

HEALTH BOARD MAKES NEGRO HOUSING SURVEY

Will Determine How Many Thousands Must Move Because of Street Improvements.

In an effort to solve the negro housing problem involved in the city's street widening program, the Health Department is making a survey to determine the number of negroes who will have to find other homes because of the destruction of their present domiciles contemplated in the improvement plan.

A group of negro leaders, as has been told, protested against the recent recommendation by the Real Estate Exchange that two negro residential zones be set aside. It was proposed that these zones be bounded roughly as follows: Easton, Taylor, St. Louis, Kennerly and Belleglade avenues for one, and West Belle place, Enright, Newstead, Cook and Spring avenues for the other.

It is estimated by Assistant Health Commissioner Woodruff that 3500 to 6000 negroes will have to move so that their homes can be torn down to make way for the following improvements: Widening of Olive street by cutting 40 feet off south side from Twelfth boulevard to Channing avenue; widening of Market street, from Sixth street to Vandeventer avenue; widening of Morgan street, from Ninth street to Jefferson avenue, and widening of Twelfth street, from Washington avenue to Palm street.

In his last annual report, Director of Public Welfare Cunliff asserted that a real effort must be made toward meeting the housing requirements of the negroes. He said about 1000 negroes were attracted here monthly by high wages in industries deprived of foreign labor by restrictions on immigration.

Although the greater portion of the proposed improvements will not be under way before next year, the Health Department is making its survey now so as to be prepared to make a comprehensive report.

In protesting against zoning for negroes, the spokesmen for the race declared that the areas proposed by the Real Estate Exchange were virtually settled to the limit by negroes now, allowing for little expansion, and that the remainder of the property in these districts probably would come easily into possession of negroes in the future, regardless of activities of the Real Estate Exchange.

It was pointed out there is little residential property east of Grand boulevard, between Chouteau and Cass avenues, that is not available for negroes. It was stated that the exchange "conceded" this district to them because there was within it no "protective" society opposed to their settlement.

ARTIST SEEKS SIGN JOB

But Relief Society Comes to Aid of Russian Mural Painter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Eugene Daunkel, creator of the murals in the Imperial Opera House in Petrograd, who served in Denekine's army, arrived in the United States 10 days ago with his wife and 10-year-old son.

The Russian soldier-artist started to find a job. He saw on every side great signs that someone must have painted. He applied at agencies and was promised a tryout. But here the Russian Refugee Relief Society stepped in. An exhibition of his sketches and oil paintings was arranged at the International Institute. These are vivid things with the color and mysticism of the East. Some are from the "Arabian Nights." One is a grewsome portrayal of the execution of a maiden representing Russia. Another is a sketch of Mme. Voronozoff, a Russian singer. The exhibition may bring him some orders. Meanwhile, Daunkel is working in the art shop of a Fifth avenue dealer.

FALLS OFF ELEVATOR TO DEATH

Boy, 14, Killed in 33-Foot Drop Down Shaft.

Sylvester Perowicz, 14 years old, of 2215 Madison street, was killed at 10 a. m. yesterday when he fell in the freight elevator shaft of the National Chair Co., 301 South Main street, from the third floor to the basement, about 35 feet.

The police were told that Perowicz boarded the elevator at the third floor and was reaching up to lower the safety gate when John Sandrowski, 14, in charge of the elevator, started the car to the fourth floor, causing Perowicz to lose his balance and fall into the shaft.

Army Quartermasters' Anniversary.

The St. Louis Chapter of the Quartermaster Corps celebrated the 148th anniversary of the founding of the corps last night by a banquet at the University Club. Capt. L. M. Edwards, Quartermaster Corps, was toastmaster. Speakers included Lieutenant-Colonel C. C. Jones, in charge of local quartermaster activities; Maj. R. C. Taylor, Senator H. W. Blodgett, D. M. Flournoy, G. V. Dahigren of the James H. Forbes Tea and Coffee Co., and others.

DEPUTY FIRED AFTER DRINKING WITH WOMEN HE HAD ARRESTED

He Was Charged With Shooting at Riding Partner at Capri Inn.

Deputy Constable James Shea of Central Township, St. Louis County, was dismissed by Constable E. L. Stanton yesterday because of an incident Tuesday night at "Belvedere Joe" Gonnella's Capri Inn on Olive Street road, near Woodson road, in which a shot was fired.

Constable Stanton was informed by three Deputy Sheriffs that Shea, while drinking at the inn with two women, became angered because Joseph Sherman, his riding partner, had tampered with his automobile, and that he had fired a shot at Sherman.

Shea had arrested the women on a charge of speeding and later had accepted their invitation to join them in a drink. Shea told Stanton that after arresting the women he accidentally met them at the inn. He said the shooting was only a joke.

BONES PUMPED UP BY DREDGE

May Be Remains of Men Who Died in Civil War Naval Battle.

By the Associated Press.

BATON ROUGE, La., June 16.—A quantity of shells and human bones, believed to be the remains of a Federal war vessel commanded by George Dewey, later Admiral Dewey, damaged by Confederate batteries during the Civil War near Port Hudson, have been pumped up by a gravel dredge a few miles north of here. The shells include one identified as Confederate ammunition.

The vessel commanded by Wewey was one of Admiral Farragut's fleet and it became disabled below Port Hudson when struck by a Confederate salvo. It drifted down the river and finally grounded a few miles north of here, where it burst into flames. Most of the crew escaped, and the bones just recovered are believed to be those of men killed in the engagement or of wounded who could not leave the boat when it took fire.

MEMORIAL SERVICE OF MARINES HERE TONIGHT

Two U. S. Senators to Speak at Program in the Palladium.

The St. Louis Marine Corps Club will hold its second annual memorial service at 8 o'clock tonight for the 119 St. Louis marines who have died during and since service. The ceremonies, part of what is termed "Belleau Woods day," will be held in the Palladium, on Enright avenue, just west of Grand boulevard.

The program, which is the second in what is planned to be an annual observance of this day, in commemoration not only of the Marines who died, but of the fight they made in Belleau Woods, for which they became famous as the "teufel-hunden" of the A. E. F., includes addresses by a number of marine and navy officials.

Six have been added to the roll of dead since the first celebration, a year ago. Among them was the noted Sergeant-Major John H. Quick, who had been awarded a Congressional medal of honor, the Distinguished Service Cross, the Navy Cross and the Samson medal. Corp. William H. Hand, a St. Louis man, was killed last September while engaged in battle with bandits in Porto Rico.

Major-General Wendell C. Neville of Washington, D. C., has accepted an invitation to speak, and others on the program, which includes the "Unanswerable Roll Call," with lights for the men who have died, are: John G. Emery, Grand Rapids, Mich., past national commander of the American Legion; United States Senator Holm O. Bursum of New Mexico; United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, and Gus. V. R. Mechin, president of the National Foreign Born League. Gov. Hyde also has been asked to speak.

The services are public and 7000 seats have been provided to accommodate the club members and visitors.

NEW TRIAL ASKED BY CAMIEN, GIVEN 2-YEAR SENTENCE

Head of Defunct Accounting Firm Convicted of Grand Larceny of $641 From Yahlem Motor Co.

TRIED UNDER FIRST OF FIVE INDICTMENTS

Former Partner Is Witness Against Man Accused of Taking Money While Working on Concern's Books.

A sentence of two years in the penitentiary was imposed yesterday on Herbert C. Camien, 29, 3009 Allen avenue, convicted of grand larceny in taking $641.81 from the Yahlem Motor Co., 1035 North Grand boulevard. Camien was president of the accounting firm of Giraldin-Fink-Camien, now defunct. He was tried before Circuit Judge Grimm.

Formal motion for a new trial was filed. Camien, who is married and has a child, was released on $2500 bond, signed by Anton Mulch, a saloonkeeper, of 2327 South Third street.

The trial was the first under five indictments against Camien for grand larceny and embezzlement, involving a total of $2813.82. Consideration of the embezzlement count in this case was removed from the jury by the court, as there was no sugstantiating evidence. The Yahlem company alleges that it suffered a loss of more than $25,000, while Camien was installing a new system of bookkeeping.

The jury deliberated about an hour and 45 minutes, exclusive of a lunch period. Jurors said afterward that they had their minds "pretty well made up" from the beginning of deliberation that Camien was guilty, and took a "couple" of ballots as to punishment. Two years was the minimum penalty possible and five the maximum.

Camien asserted on the stand that the sum named in the indictment represented a commission due him from the Yahlem company for arranging to discount its notes received in part payment on used automobiles.

He told of having $7,385 in notes discounted at 12 1-2 per cent, and receiving for them a check for $6,418, payable to the Yahlem Motor Co. Charles H. Yahlem, president of the concern, he testified, arranged to have him trade checks for this to prevent the company's bank from learning of the transaction with the discounters. Camien said that his accounting firm retained a 10 per cent commission and turned over to the Yahlem company a check for $5,776.

Yahlem, Camien declared, said he couldn't spare the commission then, so Camien loaned him cash for the amount of the commission, but was repaid for this loan the same day. Camien asserted that later he was given another check for the same amount, to reimburse him for his trouble in guaranteeing payment of the notes to the discounters. Camien denied having removed 15 pages missing from the company cash book, but said entries of checks for his commissions must have been on those pages.

Yahlem testified for the State that that it was part of the agreement for Camien to retain a 10 per cent commission, but that it was found he had twice repeated the payment to himself. Records of the Yahlem company's bank account showed a discrepancy of $641.81 between the account and the deposit made by Camien on June 30, 1921, according to evidence. Arthur Yahlem, secretary-treasurer of the company, testified that the company's bank book showed a credit in this amount to Camien on July 2, but the defense brought out that Camien was not the only one having access to the books. William A. Giraldin, Jr., of the accounting firm, testified for the State that Camien had admitted to him having received $641.81 three times, explaining that the second time it was for extra commission and being evasive about the third payment.

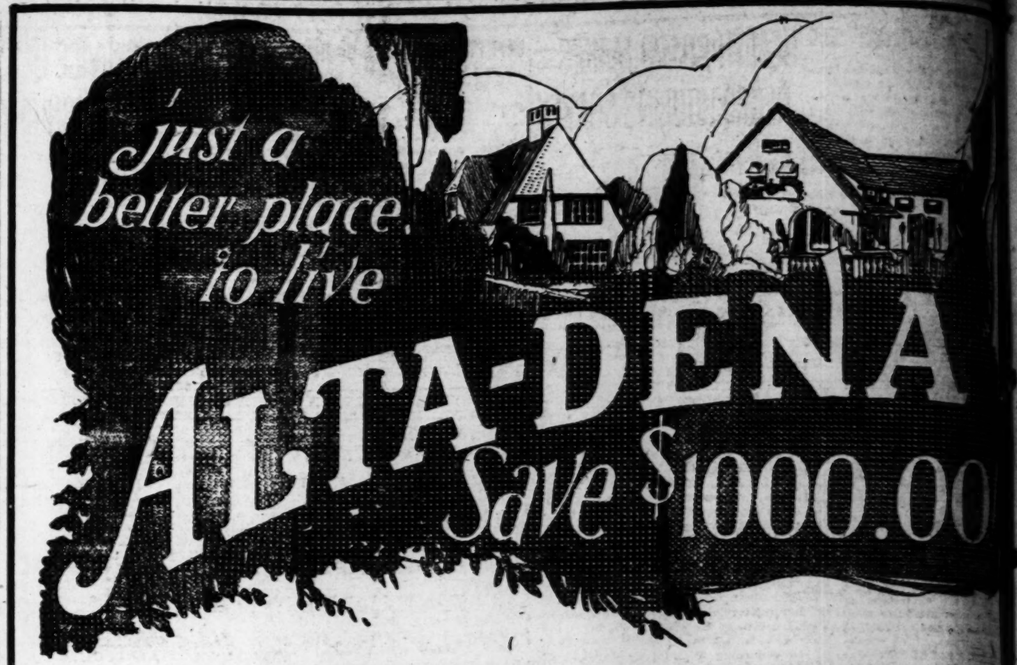
Y. M. H. A. TO BEGIN ERECTING ITS $500,000 BUILDING SOON

Structure Will Stand on $35,000 Site Purchased at Union and Enright Avenue.

Construction of a $500,000 Young Men's Hebrew Association building on the site purchased last week at the southeast corner of Union boulevard and Enright avenue will be started as soon as possible, Gilbert Harris, executive secretary, said yesterday.

Authority to buy the site was given Thursday night at a meeting in the present headquarters, 3645 Delmar boulevard. David Sommers, president, said the price was $35,000. The site is 170 feet by 225 feet.

Among the features of the building will be a gymnasium, swimming pool, radio room and club rooms. A committee plans to study similar institutions in Eastern cities during the summer and suggest ideas gained from the investigation for incorporation in the new structure.



BUYING a homesite now in this ideal spot—whether to build or to hold for future profits—means a net saving to you of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS or more in a very few months.

BEAUTIFUL ALTA-DENA

Lies in the path of residential progress for the better type of homes; its artistic landscape effects; its broad, beautifully paved thoroughfares; its sunken gardens and many other exclusive features place this ideal home section in a class by itself. It is a place of satisfied desires.

It is the opinion of experts in realty values, who have closely watched the residential expansion of Saint Louis, that this truly wonderful spot will rapidly exceed the sensational increase in values that have made history in the Delmar Boulevard and Delmar Garden sections.

You have often dreamed of a homesite like this, amidst environments that inspire, where pride of possession becomes a satisfied reality and health, happiness and contentment are your daily portion.

JUST A LITTLE PLANNING

Perhaps you are not ready just now to build—or don't care, at this time, to take the money out of your present surplus or business; if so, secure your lot now and make a payment of $400 or $600 and monthly payments of $25 or $35. You will never miss the payments and you save $1000 by buying now. By acting at once you can secure choice locations. Later you can build or sell and take your $1000 or more profit.

We have prepared a beautiful colored plat of ALTA-DENA, showing the artistic landscape treatment, the broad streets and boulevards with arrangement of homesite locations. With the plat are examples of artistic homes suitable for just such a setting. WE WILL MAIL IT TO YOU IF YOU WILL SIGN AND POST ATTACHED COUPON.

PART FIVE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 17, 1923. PAGES 1—12.

"Prince of Pilsen," Musical Comedy, Will Open Tomorrow Night

Frank Moulan Is to Play Harassed Cincinnati Brewer in Piece That Ran 11 Years—"The Fencing Master" Concludes Tonight.

THAT estimable brewer, Hans Wagner, with his query, "Vass you offer in Zinzinnati?" will once more struggle through scrape after scrape this week in the Municipal Theater Association's revival of "The Prince of Pilsen," a musical comedy by Gustav Luders and Frank Pixley. The opening performance will take place tomorrow night. The concluding presentation of "The Fencing Master" occurs this evening.

Various Rotary Clubs were invited by the management to choose by vote that one of the 10 works listed for this summer which they preferred having performed during their convention, which opens here tomorrow. The "Prince of Pilsen" proved the favorite. It was first produced by Col. Henry W. Savage in May, 1902, at the Tremont Theater in Boston, and for 11 consecutive years, up to the outbreak of the war, continued to run on tour after tour. Luders and Pixley also wrote "Marcelle," "King Dodo," "The Burgomaster," "Woodland" and "The Grand Mogul." With George Ade as librettist, Luders composed "The Old Town," "The Fair Co-Ed," "The Sho Gun" and "Mlle. Napoleon."

The two acts occur at the Internationale Hotel at Nice, where Mrs. Madison Crocker, an attractive American widow, is a much beleaguered guest. Excitement prevails because of the unexpected arrival of the wealthy and popular Prince of Pilsen. Francois, a spy in the service of the Prince, is disguised as a waiter. He has important military plans which are to be delivered to a member of the Prince's retinue, who is to identify himself with a password.

Brewer Mistaken For Prince

IT happens that the Prince decides to visit Nice incognito, with a party of Heidelberg students. Hans Wagner, touring with his daughter, Nellie, arrives at Nice on the special train on which the Prince was to have traveled, and is mistaken for that worthy. All of the brewer's efforts to explain prove futile, and the royal suite is placed at his disposal.

The Prince is about to denounce Hans as an impostor, when he recognizes in Nellie the charming American girl whom he met once before, and to whom he was strongly attracted. In order to further the acquaintance, he introduces himself as Herr Niemann, a student. His love-making is interrupted by the arrival of Tom Wagner, Nellie's brother and a naval officer, who refuses to listen to explanations, and compels the Prince to fight a duel. Both are arrested and put in prison.

In the second act, Hans, discoursing with a bell-boy, unwittingly uses the password. Francois, eavesdropping, immediately passes the secret plans to the brewer, who later is arrested and is about to be sent to a military fortress. In the denouement everything is cleared up—Hans wins the dashing Mrs. Crocker, the Prince proclaims his identity, and Nellie is on the road to becoming a Princess.

Moulan Cast as Cincinnati Brewer.

THE part of Hans Wagner played in former years by John W. Ransone and Jess Dandy, has been assigned to Frank Moulan. The other roles will be cast as follows: the Prince of Pilsen, Thomas Conkey; Tom Wagner, Craig Campbell; Mrs. Crocker, Flavia Arcaro; Edith, engaged to Tom, Blanche Duffield; Lord Artie Somerset, Willian J. McCarthy; Francois, Roland Woodruff; Nellie Wagner, Helena Morrill; and Sidonie, maid to Mrs. Crocker, Dorothy Maynard.

Among the popular musical numbers are "Artie," "A Season at the Shore," "The Message of the Violets," "Heidelberg," "The Widow," "Keep it Dark," "Pictures in the Smoke," "The American Girl" (Song of the Cities); "The Message of the Violet," "The Tale of the Sea Shell," "Back to the Boulevards," and "Fall In."

Next week's production, the most ambitious of the season, will be "Die Fledermaus," by Johann Strauss, the title of which is sometimes rendered as "The Bat's Vengeance." In the view of German connoisseurs, this is the best operetta, both in book and music, of the entire Viennese school.

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

To Julanne Johnston goes the honor of being the first player selected by Douglas Fairbanks for the cast of his new picture, "The Thief of Bagdad." Miss Johnston's knowledge of classic dancing had much to do with her selection.

B. P. Schulberg has announced that the screen version of the Belasco play, "The Boomerang," by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, will be started at the Preferred Studios during David Belasco's stay in Los Angeles. "The Boomerang" has been chosen as Victor Schertzinger's first production to be made under his new contract with Preferred Pictures.

Douglas Fairbanks, it seems, possesses a luxuriant growth of hair these days. In fact, there are those who say that Doug possesses tresses, but be that a it may. At any rate, when the matter was called to his attention. Doug offered the following explanation: "You see, I grew my hair to fit the pirate picture, then I didn't like the idea of the pirate picture, so I had to find a picture to fit my hair, which is why I'm doing 'The Thief of Bagdad.'"

The production of a series of photoplays, unique in the screen world, has been started under the auspices of the Investors' Vigilance Committee, through the medium of which the unwary will be shown the wiles and methods of "get-rich-quick" schemes, confidence workers and crooked stock and security salesmen, in a manner which cannot help but drive home the lesson of caution and care in the making of investments and in any transaction in which securities are involved. These pictures will be two-reel features, issued at the rate of one a month, and will be given nation-wide distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Arrangements are nearing completion for the organization of a new film-producing company in London with an ambitious and significant program. Carlyle Blackwell is to be artistic head and the "star" player in this company. The first picture is already under way—an elaborate film version of William J. Locke's idyllic story, "The Beloved Vagabond."

Harry Langdon, one of vaudeville's most popular comedy headliners, has closed his footlight career and begun his picture work at Principal Pictures Corporation's studios in Hollywood.

His contract covers several years and calls for six feature comedies a year, two-reel length. Principal Pictures has gathered together the cream of the silent comedy field to support Langdon, and one of the best comedy directors in the business will be engaged.

Work on Langdon's initial story is being rushed while the comedian is studying the mysteries of movie makeup.

Conway Tearle, who has just finished work as Norma Talmadge's leading man in her latest picture, "Purple Pride," is now selecting his wardrobe for Constance Talmadge's next picture, which will be "A Dangerous Maid." Tearle jumps two centuries and from France to England in making his change from the Norma to the Constance Talmadge company, for "Purple Pride" is in the period of Charles IX of France, while the story of "A Dangerous Maid" is laid in the times of King James II of England.

Barbara La Marr, the alluring beauty of "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Hero" and "Poor Men's Wives," is about to exhibit her charms on the other side of the Atlantic. Miss La Marr is packing her trunk in preparation for a trip to Italy, where, as a featured player in the First National production of "The Eternal City," she will spend several months. Moreover, Barbara says she will take with her the bright-eyed youngster she recently adopted as her own, together with her newly acquired husband, Jack Dougherty.

Marion Mack and Creighton Hale, in "Mary of the Movies"—Kings

The Selznick Distributing Corporation is just announcing the early release of Robert W. Chambers' famous novel, "The Common Law," which has been done into pictures under the direction of George Archainbaud. The production is designated as a Myron Selznick Master-Picture and has a cast which co-stars Corinne Griffith, Conway Tearle and Elliott Dexter, and includes Hobart Bosworth, Bryant Washburn, Doris May, Harry Myers, Miss Du Pont, Phyllis Haver, Wally Van and Dagmer Godowsky.

Raymond Hatton has been added to the cast of "The Virginian," Owen Wister's story, to be filmed by Preferred Pictures. Other players assembled to date are Kenneth Harlan for the title role, Florence Vidor, Russell Simpson and Pat O'Malley.

"What a Wife Learned" "Only 38", "Railroaded", "All for a Woman"

"The West-Bound Limited" Also on View Here, Exploits Heroes of the Rail, With Brother of Bobby Harron as the Star.

THOMAS H. INCE'S production, "What a Wife Learned" a story of matrimony based on a "career-for-wives" situation, is the feature screen attraction at the Grand Central Theater this week. The cast includes Milton Sills, John Bowers and Marguerite de La Motte.

Bartram & Saxton, vocalists, appear on the stage in "Cotton Days," a musical presentation. Another stage feature is the appearance of the world's youngest Rotarian, Jerome Hayes of Mexico, Mo. He is 5 years old and offers a trap drum and vocal act.

Dave Silverman of the Lyric Skydome is the guest conductor at the Grand Central this week.

"What a Wife Learned," is similar in style to "The Dangerous Age," but different in treatment. A young Westerner marries a school teacher who develops a talent for playwriting. In this way she becomes associated in her work with another playwright who falls in love with her. In the cities the husband, who is a young ranch owner and out-of-doors man, does not fit in with the society crowds, nor is he able to obtain anything more than menial positions. There is a separation. On his own ranch he decides to build a great dam and in this way comes to understand the driving force that causes his wife to build plays, just as he builds the dam.

There is a thrilling climax when the dam breaks and he saves the other man's life, presumably for his wife. But he learns he had misunderstood the entire situation and all ends well.

The program at the Missouri this week includes a De Mille character drama and the appearance of the Moscow artists, a group of 10 native Russian vaudeville performers. Organ and orchestral specialties are also featured.

The picture "Only 38," has in its cast Lois Wilson, May McAvoy, Elliott Dexter and Robert Agnew. The story turns about the everyday occurrence of a widow's wooer being objectionable to her children.

The Moscow Artists' organization is made up of native Russian musicians, dancers and performers. The balalaika, and other strange instruments are used in solos and accompaniment to the singing specialties.

"The Westbound Limited," comes to the Capitol Theater for the entire week and to the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric for four days.

"The Westbound Limited" is similar in its idea to "In the Name of the Law" and "The Third Alarm." Those successes were dedicated to policemen and firemen, respectively, while the current offering is a tribute to the railroad men. Ralph Lewis, Ella Hall and Johnny Harron are the featured players. The film is said to abound in thrills.

"All for a Woman," the feature picture at the Delmonte Theater this week, is a foreign film story of the French revolution. The chief character of the drama is George Jacques Danton, who rebelled against the bloody rulings of the tyrannous tribunal and abandoned it. For a time the revengeful tribunal is unable to lay its hands on Danton, for he has long been an idol of the people. During the carefree days which follow his defection his fancy is attracted by a tattered little fugitive of the masses.

In a capricious mood he takes her to his dwelling and has her arrayed in all the finery of the olden days, and she presents a bewitching figure. Such a strong appeal does she make to him that he pays constant attentions to her, to the delight of the unsophisticated maid.

Eventually, however, he tires of Babette and turns his attentions elsewhere. Piqued and scorned, Babette vows to make him pay for his actions and she hurries to the tribunal.

On the bill also is a reissue of Charles Chaplin's comedy, "Dough and Dynamite."

Herbert Rawlinson and Mike Donlin, former center fielder of the New York Giants baseball club, are the principals in "Railroaded," a swift-moving crook picture at the Rivoli Theater.

Rawlinson fits into the role of Richard Garbin, alias Richard Ragland, the crook son of the most noted Justice in England. It is an adaptation from the novel, "Richard," by Margaret Bryant.

"Mary of the Movies" is featured at the King's Theater and Airdome. It is all about Mary, the little country girl, who goes to Hollywood, burning with ambition to become a movie star. The story is woven in and out the big studios, bringing into action 40 famous movie stars, including some of the biggest personalities in pictures, in a series of situations bound together by a story with a vein of humor.

Season of Summer Plays Launched on Broadway

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 16.

THE season of summer plays makes a start next week with George White's "Scandals," edition of 1923, which will open Monday night at the Globe; and with "Helen of Troy, New York," a musical comedy, by Marc Connelly, George Kaufman and George Jessel, which begins Tuesday evening at the Selwyn. In the cast of the former are Tom Patricola, De Lyle Alda, Winnie Lightner, Johnny Dooley and about 60 others. The company presenting the Connelly-Kaufman opus is led by Helen Ford, Queenie Smith, Charles Lawrence, Tom Lewis and Roy Atwell.

What is regarded by many observers as a preliminary skirmish of the theatrical war expected to break forth in June, 1924, is being waged over Earl Carroll's "Vanities of 1923," scheduled to open on June 25. The antagonists are Carroll, who is an independent producer, and the Actors' Equity Association, a union organization.

Carroll alleges that Equity attempted to coerce him into compelling all the members of his company to join the union, which many of them, being vaudeville performers, refused to do. Equity, on the other hand, accuses Carroll of discharging numerous persons for no other reason than that they were members of the organization. At any rate, every member of Equity in the cast walked out. These included Ray Dooley, Gloria Foy, Walter Catlett, who was directing the piece, and numerous men and women in the chorus.

CARROLL is continuing rehearsals, with students from Columbia University and girls without stag experience in the chorus. William Collier, a bulwark of the Actors' Fidelity League, which is unalterably opposed to unionism among actors, volunteered to take Catlett's place, and was accepted. Peggy Joyce, star of the production, though formerly a member of Equity, has decided to remain with the company. It is generally believed that the "Vanities" will never open on Broadway if Equity can prevent; and that Equity holds a trump card through its affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and its consequent ability to call out the musicians and stage hands at Carroll's theater.

After all these years of production, "The Devil's Disciple" is having its text revised by George Bernard Shaw, who is steadily undermining his reputation for tyranny. A postal has been received by the Theater Guild in which the author accepts a correction in geography noted by Arthur Guiterman. The original text represented Burgoyne's army as "marching south from Boston;" the correction makes it "south from Ticonderoga." Incidentally, Shaw requests all the cast to observe that the name of the British general is stressed vigorously on the last syllable — "B'goyne," instead of "Burrrgoyne."

John Galsworthy's "Loyalties" will be sent on tour next season to about 30 cities, including St. Louis and Kansas City. Word arrives that Vivienne Segel, prima donna of "Adrienne," will be married in the imminent future to Robert Ames, leading man in "Icebound;" and that the knot will be tied by Billy B. Van, principal comedian in "Adrienne" and a Justice of the Peace at Lake Sunapee, N. H.

THAT side-splitting impersonator of rural types, "Chick" Sale, is at last to be starred in a play. It is by no less an author than Frank Craven, and the title is "Early to Bed." • • • It is reported that a British star and several actors from England will be imported to support Mrs. Fiske in St. John Ervine's "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary." • • • "Four Men in Dress Clothes," by Ladislas Lakatos, which is said to have been the smash hit in Budapest, is being prepared for an American production next fall.

"Zander the Great," with Alice Brady, is being groomed for London. This means that Salisbury Field's comedy, when sent to the provinces, will be without the services of its star. • • • Ethel Barrymore opens her annual season in vaudeville next week at Washington, in Barrie's "The Twelve Pound Look."

London Forfeits Stage Scepter to Broadway

From the London Bureau of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, June 8.

THE scepter of the English-speaking theater has passed from Shaftesbury avenue to Broadway. Lee Shubert is today a more important man than Charles Cochran or Sir Oswald Stoll. If you don't believe it all you have to do is to read the theatrical ads in the Times or make a round of the London theaters. The artistic and popular success of the present season is Eugene O'Neill's "Anna Christie," and we have our old friends Potash and Perlmutter in "Partners Again," and Porter Emerson Browne's "The Bad Man" and George M. Cohan's "So This Is London!" and the "Music Box Revue," and "Merton of the Movies," the latter seemingly the only failure from America, and "R. U. R." and "The Insect Play," successes in New York before London tried them.

As for the English plays, half of them are revivals and the other half, with an exception or two, are scarcely worth discussion. Of the revivals there are Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," Maugham's "Jack Straw," Pinero's "The Gay Lord Quex," and Sudermann's "Magda," and when one sees their contemporary rivals one gasps that indeed the palmy days have passed.

Suggests School for Dramatists.

SOME of these epistles are rather humorous. Dennis Eadie, one of the few remaining actor-managers, in a long letter to the Morning Post, appeals for a training school for dramatists, with Prof. Baker's playwriting course at Harvard as an inspiration. Whereat St. John Ervine, London's foremost dramatic critic, replies in the Observer that the only dramatist worth thinking about who ever attended Prof. Baker's course is Eugene O'Neil, who has smashed every rule that the professor ever taught him, and who in fact owes nothing whatever to that academic venture.

To Mr. Eadie's complaint that the trouble is with the British playwright, Mr. Ervine charges that it

MARRIAGES INCREASE THROUGHOUT GERMANY

At Same Time Fewer Babies Are Being Born and Death Rate Falls Off.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 24.—Fewer babies are being born in Germany now than before the war and fewer people are dying, but the marriage license clerks are doing more business than during 1913. The Germans say there is a boom in the marriage market "after every war."

The state of Hamburg lived up to its name of having the most attractive "frauleins" in the republic. It chalked up a wedding record of about 15 to every 1000 inhabitants. Schaumburg-Lippe, a little to the south of Hamburg and in romantic proximity to Steinhuder Lake, ran a close second with 14 to every 1000. Saxony's proportion stopped at slightly over 13, while Berlin city's was only 12.8.

The most timid bachelors in all Germany appear to live in the mountainous state of Waldeck, in the Weser basin, where there have been only about seven weddings to every 1000 residents. And yet the Waldeck boys have not such faint hearts as before the war, when their average was only 5.4.

The statistics for Wuerttemburg, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and Mecklenburg-Strelitz have not yet been received, but not including those three states, Germany's marriage rate the past year was 10.9 for every 1000 inhabitants, compared with only 6.6 in 1913.

Babies appeared in the states reported at the rate of 23 for every 1000, as against a proportion of 28.9 before the war. Most of the births were registered in Upper Silesia and the least in Berlin. The former's proportion was approximately 32, the latter's less than 12.

Germans have been dying at the rate of 12.5 out of each 1000 the past 12 months, while in 1913 death was taking a proportionate toll of about 15. Upper Silesia, which had the highest birth rate, also led in the ratio of deaths.

Do Some Touring HERE

Drive into these new highways at any point, Toronto to Chicago, and you'll find new beauties and summer pleasures to attract you.

2000 Miles of New Paved Roads

Not till this summer have fine roads been available through this delightful region, north of the older east and west highways. Whether you plan your main route here or elsewhere, include some part, at least, of this charming summer playground.

The Lake Erie-Niagara Falls Trail: From Toronto to Niagara and Buffalo—each of the three cities a center of a great vacation territory—is but the beginning. Through the lakes and resorts of Western New York and of Northern Ohio are hundreds of attractions on both main routes and by-paths. Cleveland is another inviting point; many famous beaches and lake resorts are in easy reach as you drive on to Toledo and the north. At Detroit are innumerable playgrounds, and here is the door to the wonderland of Michigan resorts on The Michigan Trail. Any of these places will easily provide a week's—or a fortnight's—delightful vacationing.

The Tour-Book, with Good Maps, is Free

Write for it today—before you do any further planning for your vacation. A post card will do—to The Great Lakes Tours Association, at Detroit, or at Buffalo, or at Petoskey, Mich.—whichever is nearest.

Cool nights and wonderful days invite you to the Windermeres

For your vacation, choose Chicago and Hotels Windermere. Here you have the combined advantages of a great city, and the city standard of service in two thoughtfully managed hotels—and yet, at your very door, you have the 600 acres of recreation in Jackson Park, and 22,000 square miles of sparkling water and cool breezes of Lake Michigan.

Like the open country are the bridle paths and wooded walks of Jackson Park. And yet, when you wish to relax, you have the comfort of a beautifully appointed room—the broad verandas of Windermere-West, and two quiet dining rooms which take pride in the appetizing goodness of their foods.

Windermere-West has been the summer home of southern people for years. Windermere-East, newly completed, opens new possibilities for enjoyment, with the completeness and modern perfection of its accommodations.

Both hotels combine the advantages of living where the air has country freshness—with the convenience of having the heart of Chicago and all its metropolitan recreations only 12 minutes away. Write for rates and descriptive literature.

To American Travelers Going Abroad

BE SURE of the value and safety of your Travel Funds.

Before you leave American soil change your American Dollars into

American Express Travelers Cheques

Experienced American Travelers abroad depend upon them.

Thirty years of use around the world have made these Cheques the insured money of all nations. Acceptable everywhere, spendable anywhere, they are never questioned, never discounted. SAFE, convenient, simple, and handy to use, they are an absolute necessity to the traveler abroad.

Besides, they are your business and your social, as well as your financial passports—since they command the world wide service of the American Express chain of international offices—a service so varied, so helpful, so personally American, that 90% of American travelers abroad always use it.

American Express offices are the American's headquarters abroad. Thru them his mail and cables find him quickly wherever he is. They are his banking centres; his travel bureaus of information, where railway, steamship and hotel reservations are secured, passport intricacies settled, possible legal difficulties straightened out, etc. In fact, the seat of a seeming magician, so marvelously has their power and will to serve been developed. Socially these offices are the American's Club the world over—making it possible for him to know who is who wherever he is.

As an additional safeguard, and for greater convenience, use the $250 and $500 American Express Travelers Cheque Exchange Orders. These Orders are convertible into regular Travelers Cheques of smaller denominations without extra cost at American Express offices.

There Are a Few Very Choice Lots Still Available, but Quick Action Is Necessary

NEVER BEFORE IN THE HISTORY OF ST. LOUIS HAS THERE BEEN OFFERED SUCH INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES, WITH ASSURANCE OF LARGE RETURNS, AS EXISTS TODAY IN THE PURCHASE OF BUILDING SITES WITHIN THE ZONE OF RESIDENTIAL EXPANSION

WHY THIS IS SO

The present unsettled building situation is one of the most important factors that will contribute to the increased valuation of residential property in St. Louis in the near future.

The home shortage is increasing at a distressing rate, due, in great part, to present building costs. When this condition is stabilized, as all these things are eventually, a rush to build undreamed of in St. Louis will result. Land must be had and the demand will far exceed the supply. Homesites in the close-in section of University City will double, treble—yes, quadruple in value. Fortunate indeed will be the man who has even a single building lot located in this line of the city's residential progress.

JUSPUL CORSETS

"JUST THE THING"

for SUMMER and SPORTSWEAR

Particularly when away on a vacation a dependable corset is an absolute necessity. At that time many women are over-active in outdoor sports and do not consider the undue strain to which such strenuous exercise subjects their bodies. In that case, instead of being a period of recuperation a vacation might prove a source of much physical discomfort, and often even actual physical disability.

The Juspul Corset is neither front nor back-laced; yet combines the utmost in comfort and hygienic support with the much desired natural figure effect. If accustomed to any other Nemo model do not change; but buy the one to which you have grown used. Nemo Juspul Corsets are sold in all progressive Corset Departments and Shops where graduates of the Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute are in attendance. They furnish an efficient and scientific corset service entirely free. Consult them about your corset problems.

NEMO JUSPUL No. 573 (illustrated) is for slender to medium figures; pink coutil; sizes 22 to 36—$5.00.

NEMO JUSPUL No. 475 is also for slender to medium figures but with a very low top. Pink silk-striped batiste; sizes 24 to 32—$4.00.

FIFTY OTHER NEMO MODELS $4.00 to $13.50.

MAN ARRESTED IN WHISKY ROBBERY AND FRIEND SHOT

Mystery Surrounding Attack on Victims While Riding With Two Women in Auto Puzzles Police.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky.—James Brewer, under $10,000 bond for his appearance at the June term of Federal Court on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the distillery robbery at Midway, is in a private hospital at Lebanon, shot shrough the lungs, and George L. Williams of Blumandale and Lexington is in the Good Samaritan Hospital here wounded in the right leg and shoulder as the result of a gun battle with unidentified whisky "highjackers" one mile from Springfield, Washington County, shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Although Brewer's condition is serious, there is said to be a chance for his recovery. Williams' condition is not considered serious. He was brought to the hospital in an automobile belonging to Mrs. Ethel Boone Murphy of Winchester, by Mrs. Murphy, her sister, Grace Boone and J. W. Shelton.

The car, bespattered with blood, was taken by the police from in front of the home of Blanche Patterson, where it had been parked. Mrs. Murphy, who, with her sister, had gone to the Patterson house, was taken to the station house and questioned regarding the shooting.

She said that she, with her sister, Grace, were driving shortly after midnight and about 2 o'clock had started home, coming toward Lexington on the Lexington-Nicholasville pike just out of Nicholasville. They heard some one call to stop. The sister, at the wheel, at first paid no attention to the command, driving on, when a man, grabbing the curtain standards, jumped upon the running board, explaining he was George L. Williams and had been shot through the leg and arm by a highwayman, and asking if they would take him to the hospital. He got in the car and was brought to Lexington, the car stopping first at the home of J. W. Shelton, where the women aroused him from bed to help the wounded man into the hospital.

Mrs. Murphy denied having been with either James Brewer or Williams during the night and declared she knew nothing of the shooting, until stopped by Williams.

According to William" story, as told to a police detective, he, with Brewer, and two women whom he did not know, were driving toward Lexington about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning nearing Springfield, nine miles from Lebanon, when they were fired at from the roadside. Brewer was shot through the back, ne, through the right leg and right arm near the shoulder. A passing automobile was halted by the women and Brewer was taken to a doctor's office for first aid. He, with the women, came to Lexington and to the Good Samaritan hospital.

Story Told by Surgeon.

Williams later told substantially the same story as related by the Murphy woman that he had jumped upon the running board of her machine, asking the two women to take him to a hospital.

Dr. W. G. Barnette of Springfield, who was stopped by two women as he neared Springfield, on the Springfield-Bardstown road shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning, and gave first aid treatment to Brewer at his office in Springfield, removing the bullet, a .32-caliber, steel-jacketed one, from his left breast just above the heart, told the following story:

"As I came into the suburbs of Springfield, I was flagged by two women who said a man had been shot through the heart and they wanted help. I told them to follow me to my office. With them in a large car was another man who also was shot through the arm. We got Brewer out of the car and into my office and the machine, with its three other occupants, hurried away. Brewer was shot through the back, one bullet piercing the lungs. I extracted it and gave him first aid treatment, later calling an ambulance and had him removed to Dr. McChord's hospital at Lebanon. The wounded man refused to say how the shooting occurred. He said five shots were fired, one hitting him and one the other man.

Man With Rifle Appeared.

"Within 15 minutes after the larger car drove off, another automobile, containing two men, one carrying a rifle, drove hurriedly up in front of my office and asked a man standing there if he had seen a large car come up and drive off. When told the direction the other car had taken toward Lexington, the men turned around and went back toward Bardstown."

Brewer's car, a two-seated touring, covered with mud, was driven up and parked in front of Shelton's house early Tuesday morning. It was found there by Shelton. Charley Shelton and Grace Boone left Lexington shortly before 8 o'clock Tuesday morning for Lebanon to see Brewer, according to information received by officers.

Federal and police officers are working together on the case in an attempt to solve the mystery. State Prohibition Director Sam Collins, United States Commissioner Charles N. Wiard, Detectives Dudley Veal and Joe Grant of the Lexington Police Department questioned Williams at the hospital in an attempt to learn who might be responsible for the shooting.

POST-DISPATCH WANTS YOUNG MEN CAPABLE AND EXPERIENCED AS WORKERS for the OFFICE, STORE, MILL, FACTORY, WAREHOUSE and HOME.

Big Contract for St. Louis Firm.

Contract for erection of the memorial shaft and museum building, which Kansas City will build from popular subscription to honor its men who served in the World War, has been offered to the Westlake Construction Co. of St. Louis on its bid of $1,142,250, which was low among eight submitted. Other contracts for equipment to be let separately will make the memorial cost nearly $2,000,000.

Ailing Children Get Well on Syrup Pepsin

A small dose at bedtime brings relief and laughter by morning

HOSPITAL and doctor's records prove that 75 per cent of human illness has its origin in the intestinal canal, complicated with what is commonly called constipation. Realizing what that figure means, mothers should contrive methods of handling their children while they still control them, that will prevent these future dangers. Teach children regularity of bowel movement, and be especially watchful of young girls. Insist on two passages a day until the age of 18, when one is usually sufficient. Give plenty of oranges and apples, plenty of butter because it lubricates the intestines, and encourage the drinking of water.

If you detect restlessness, belching, gas or wind on the stomach, sleeplessness, or lack of appetite, examine the tongue and you will find it coated, accompanied by unpleasant breath. The child is bilious, constipated. According to age, give from one-half to a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which children never object to taking as they like the taste. By morning the youngster will be well again. Likewise if the nostrils are stuffed up or there is persistent sneezing, a dose of Syrup Pepsin will break up the fever and cold.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mrs. Geo. N. Colson of Bernard, Me., keeps her family well in that way, and Mrs. Ida A. Burkett of Carroll, La., who has been using Syrup Pepsin for a dozen years, has raised her three children on it. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The formula, however, is on every package. Druggists have sold it with satisfaction to their customers for over 30 years, and it is now the largest selling family laxative in the world. Buy a bottle today. It will last you for months, and the cost is only about a cent a dose.

Whithorne's Work Will Be Played at Salzburg

A FORMER St. Louisan, Emerson Whithorne, several of whose works have been played by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, has been distinguished by the selection of one of his pieces for performance during the Chamber Music Festival to be held at Salzburg, Aug. 2 to 7. The work is entitled "New York Days and Nights," and has these sections, "On the Ferry," "A Greenwich Village Tragedy" and "Times Square."

More than 200 works were submitted by 35 composers from 14 countries in a competition held under the auspices of the International Society for Contemporary Music. Among the successful contestants, in addition to Whithorne, were Arnold Schoenberg, Bela Bartok, Florent Schmitt, Serge Prokofieff, Maurice Ravel, Arthur Bliss, Igor Stravinsky, Arthur Honneger, G. Francesco Malipiero, Manuel de Falla, Ferruccio Busoni, Darius Milhaud, Francis Poulenc and Alois Haba. The nast named will be represented by a novelty—a string quartet written in quarter tones.

Francis Macmillen, concert violinist and brother of S. E. Macmillen, manager of the Symphony Orchestra, will be married on June 19 to Miss Lillian Mure, daughter of Dr. and Mme. Jean Mure of Paris and New York. The ceremony will take place at St. Thomas's Church, in New York.

Raymund Koch, St. Louis baritone and pupil of E. A. Taussig, has been engaged as soloist during the month of August at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. He is also under contract for appearances with the New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, and with the New York Oratorio Society, conducted by another St. Louisan, Albert Stoessel.

Three Soloists at Concert.

A CONCERT for the benefit of the Sunshine Mission, under the auspices of the St. Louis Christian Endeavor Union, will be given tomorrow evening at Moolah Temple. Those participating will be Vladimir Lenska, violinist; Helene Leaning, soprano; and Orley Ilsz, pianist. Lenska is a Russian, said to be known to European concert halls. Miss Leaning, an American, was formerly a member of the London Opera Company; Ilsz is a Belgian composer.

The violin numbers will include Vieuxtemps Concerto in F-sharp Minor; "Perpetual Motion," Novacek; "Legende," Wieniawski; "Spanish Dance," Granados-Kreisler; "Mazurka," Volpe; "Hymn to the Sun," Rimsky Korsakoff-Kreisler; "Orientale," Cui; and two pieces by the violinist, "Scherzo Caprice" and "Carnival of Russia." Miss Leaning's chief number will be "Vissi d'arte," from "La Tosca." Besides providing accompaniments, Ilsz will play Liszt's eleventh Hungarian Rhapsody.

"WHO IS FRANK?" INQUIRY BY WILSON TOLD OF AT HEARING

Intimation That Ex-President Was Too Ill to Be Familiar With Dye Patent Facts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 15.—A letter introduced yesterday at the hearing of the Government's suit to regain the German patents sold by the alien enemy property custodian had a direct bearing on President Wilson's illness which followed his return from the peace conference and came upon him while he was touring the country to create sentiment in behalf of the League of Nations.

The insinuation of the Government has been that when Mr. Wilson officially confirmed the sale of the patents to the Chemical Foundation, he was, perhaps, too ill to have been familiar with all the facts.

The letter was from Francis P. Garvan, then custodian of alien enemy property and now president of the Chemical Foundation, to Joseph P. Tumulty, then secretary to the President. It read:

"Dear Joe—Will you please take up the matter of the enclosed executive order (that confirming the sale) at the earliest possible moment? It is essential and vital that it be done. Sincerely yours, (Signed) FRANK."

At the bottom of the letter in the penciled handwriting of Mr. Wilson appeared this notation:

"Who is Frank? W. W."

The letter, it developed, had been transmitted by Tumulty to the President, and before acting upon the executive order, Mr. Wilson had returned it to Mr. Tumulty with the briefly noted inquiry as to the identity of "Frank," who was Mr. Garvan.

Mr. Wilson, it was evident, had chosen this method of reproving users of the familiar form of salutation and signature in a letter relating to official government business.

near the Tyrolese frontier, the bridegroom must be liberal with his money on his wedding day, for while the cart is being driven to his home the village lads bar the way with poles or ropes, and ere they will let the horses pass, a toll of one or two florins is exacted from him. Here the priest enters to bless the house and all the bride's recently transported belongings.

MAN CONVICTED OF MURDER TO WHICH WOMAN CONFESSED

Robert Leeper Found Guilty of Killing Roy Wertz, His Wife's Father, at Iowa City Trial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

IOWA CITY Ia.—Although Mrs. Roy Wertz testified at the trial of her son-in-law, Robert Leeper, that she shot her husband in defense of her daughter, a jury found Leeper guilty of first degree murder. One juror held out for 18 hours against sending the young man to the gallows and he swung sentiment to life imprisonment.

Roy Wertz was found unconscious in a pool of blood in his home here on Dec. 27, 1922. He was in his night shirt and there were two bullet holes in his head. A 3 caliber Mau2ser pistol was lying on a table. The wounded man died a few hours later.

Leeper, his wife and Mrs. Wertz were indicted for the murder and the youth was the first to go on trial. Mrs. Wertz testified that her husband had always disliked their daughter, even displaying aversion to her before birth. Her husband was a hard drinker, she said, and he held a poker party at their home a few hours before he was shot. Liquor was served, according to the woman. Leeper and the two women, who had been out of town, returned at 10:30 o'clock the next morning and Wertz got out of bed and heaped verbal abuse upon his daughter. Mrs. Wertz said she attemped to interfere and her husband shouted: "Now I'll kill you both." Mrs. Wertz said she backed against a dressing table and groped for the pistol which she knew was in a drawer. As her husband rushed at her, she said she aimed and fired one shot. She was unable to explain the two wounds in Wertz' head.

Corroborated by Daughter.

Mrs. Leeper corroborated her mother's testimony and Leeper declared he was in the basement fixing the furnace when the shooting occurred. He said he heard Wertz cursing upstairs and the two shots were fired as he rushed up the stairs. When he reached the main floor he found Wertz on the floor, wounded, and the two women hysterical.

The star witness for the prosecution was Byron Johnson of Mount Sterling, Ia., a junior at Iowa University and former classmate and chum of the defendant. Johnson testified that one night in July, 1922, Leeper told him he planned to "knock Wertz off." Leeper outlined two plans for the murder, the student said. One was to shoot a bubble of air into Wertz's arteries with a hypodermic needle and the other was to kill him with a rifle equipped with a silencer, take the body to Cedar Rapids in an automobile, weight it with rocks and drop it into the Cedar River. The car would then be disposed of by leaving it at a railroad station to encourage the belief that Wertz had deserted his home. He said Leeper told him it would be easy to shift the blame to Mrs. Wertz if suspicion was directed toward him, as she would claim she killed her husband in self-defense.

A sensation was caused by the testimony of Mrs. Julia Wertz of Gruver, Ia., aged mother of the murdered man. The day before the murder, she said, she talked to her daughter-in-law over the telephone and the younger Mrs. Wertz told her that "Roy is drinking hard. He has a bad heart so you needn't be surprised to hear of his sudden death."

"At 2:30 the next afternoon I was notified of his death," the aged woman said.

Leeper's Testimony.

Leeper admitted that he had quarreled with his father-in-law, but it had occurred only once, he said. This was in July, he testified. Wertz was intoxicated when Leeper visited the daughter and her father shouted: "What's this I hear about you insulting my wife and wanting to marry my daughter2"

Wertz gave him 5 miputes to obtain a marriage license, he said, and when he explained that the courthouse was closed, the older man had him arrested, but he was released within a short time.

The day after the verdict was returned, Leeper, who was at liberty on $45,000 bail, pending action on his petition for a new trial, was rearrested at the request of his bondsmen, who indicated they were unwilling to risk their money as a result of the verdict. He is now in the county jail here.

No indication has been given regarding what action will be taken toward prosecution of Mrs. Wertz and her daughter, who were named in a blanket indictment shortly after the murder.

CANADA TRIES TO BAR HOBOS

Objects to Unusual Number Coming From United States.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont.—Chief of Police Harry N. Greene of this city now the Niagara district authorities are trying to break the long hobo line coming over the Niagara River from the United States and striking for Toronto and Montreal.

The police say the number of tramps coming over into Canada this spring has been unusually large, and there seems no reason for it, as there are plenty of jobs to be had in the States. The fact that Montreal has liquor advantages may account for some of the immigrants, but that doesn't explain the onrush to Toronto.

Scores of tramps are being rounded up here on freight trains by the Canadian National Railways detectives.

Erwin Bergdoll Free On June 20.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA—Erwin Bergdoll, notorious draft-dodger and brother of Grover Bergdoll, will be released from the United States prison at Fort Leavenworth on June 20. Bergdoll has served two years and ten months of a four-year sentence.

Is Green No More

"My experience with your medicine has been wonderful. My stomach and liver trouble of five years' standing took a new turn two years ago when I took on an olive green complexion. I spent $1,000 with doctors and specialists only to prove that I was still as green as ever. A friend advised me to take Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and I am green no more. My stomach and liver trouble has all disappeared." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

Secure a Splendid Car at a Fraction of the Original Cost During the Red Tag Sale, Used Car Week

What better time than Summer to make an investment which will come nearer health and ideal happiness to your entire family than any other gift could bestow.

This is the week of the year's most important Motor Car event—The Red Tag Sale, Used Car Week—which is being held by St. Louis' leading Car dealers. It will enable you to buy a good Car Now, and buy it right.

Wise merchants realize the value of clearing their shelves during the Summer months; wise Car dealers want to clear their showrooms for the same reason.

The result is that they have reduced prices on a number of splendid, service-giving, and in many instances, guaranteed Cars to an unprecedented level—and those who buy now are those who will profit.

There will be many fortunate purchases made during this sale week. Read the list of Car offerings today over in the Post-Dispatch's Classified "Automobile" columns and you will appreciate how many good Cars for every requirement may be bought at prices which will appeal to you as veritable bargains.

After you have read these columns carefully take time to investigate the Cars that interest you. Let the dealers put them to a thorough test for you. Note their attractive appearance. Ask about the guarantee of service, let the dealer tell you the easy terms of payment.

All of this information will confirm the judgment of wise men—that it is right to own an automobile, and it will be confirmation of the statement—that you can afford to own an automobile NOW.

Soft, Curly, Wavy Hair Now Easy to Have

Beautiful, fluffy, natural-looking curls or waves, without the use of the ruinous curling iron, are now possible for every woman. Yes, not only possible, but very easily and quickly acquired, and with benefit to the life and health of the hair. It is only necessary to apply a little liquid silmerine before doing up the hair, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose. The hair will have a most delightful curliness and lustre, without the least suggestion of grease or stickiness, and will be quite controllable, no matter what the style of coiffure. As a few ounces of liquid silmerine from the druggist will last for months, it is quite inexpensive to use.

is with the British manager. He might have unkindly added with the actor-manager as well, for Mr. Eadie is at present appearing in a piece chosen for the sole purpose of furnishing the actor with some of the longest speeches ever written.

It is true that the commercial manager has both eyes on the box office, but that may very well be preferable to an actor-manager with both eyes on the box office and both ears open to the applause which he hopes may follow monologues from his cultivated and rather empty voice. Irving had genius, and so, of a sort, had Tree. Most of their successors have nothing except slender figures, impeccable taste in dress and an Oxford accent. Of such stuff Garricks are not made.

No Anti-American Prejudice.

OF course the real trouble lies with the war. When the Government takes, or did take until very recently, six shillings from every pound a man makes, and the man pays it, we marvel at the heroism of the English race. But mere heroism isn't the basis for a national theater. The theater at best is a gamble, and when a manager stakes to lose a fortune he wants at least the chance to win one.

At the present moment no London manager can win a fortune; theater rents and the costs of production are enormous, and at the end there is always the shadow of the income tax genii. So the manager naturally casts about him for a sure-fire success, and rightly argues that despite local differences a play which has succeeded in New York is more likely to succeed in London than a play by an unknown British dramatist. Thus he gives "Potash and Perlmutter" and "So This Is London!" in preference to a work from a British unknown.

It is a tribute to the fairness of the British mind that all this arouses no anti-American prejudice. The public goes to the American plays and the critics take their medicine like men, despite an occasional sarcastic outburst from Mr. Walkley. And when an American play does come along which really is worth considering, as it has come in the case of "Anna Christie," it is received with open arms.

There is scarcely an English review which hasn't already had an article on the art of Eugene O'Neill. There may at times be some condescension in their tone, as there once was in the British reception of Walt Whitman. O'Neill uses baid language and writes of the great unwashed, and, after all, the towers of Oxford are still very dear to the English heart, but there hasn't been a reviewer who has denied genius to this young American.

A London Theater Guild.

HERE is something new and vital, and Oxford with all its grace and charm hasn't recently produced anything with either of these qualities. The Irish theater did, and so did Miss Horniman's Manchester adventure, but somehow these promises never ripened. England still has Galsworthy and Barrie and Maugham, but they are of an older generation, and Ireland has Shaw and Ervine and Yeats, although all three live in London, but of newer men there isn't a trace.

Undoubtedly they are here, in Bloomsbury boarding houses or Chelsea flats, but the British income tax has got them, and the syndicates which control the London theaters are not in business for their health.

Meanwhile there is another effort under foot, sponsored by such men as Sir Johnston Forves-Robertson and St. John Ervine, to establish a British Theater Guild. It is an effort quite frankly patterned after the New York venture at the Garrick, but it seems far more likely to succeed than does Mr. Eadie's plea for a school of dramatists. As Mr. Ervine stated only last Sunday, a playwright learns his trade not in the university and from professors, but in the theater and from life.

Despite the income tax the British theatergoer still has money which he will spend at the box office. The thing is to get the right sort of of box office. Mr. Cochran, like the American commercial manager, has one sort, the New York Theater Guild has another, and of this latter sort London is yet wanting. It's understood that another season will see this want remedied. Then the unknown playwright in the Bloomsbury boarding house or the Chelsea flat will get his chance, and he at least hopes that the sceptre of the English-speaking stage will once more rest withing walking distance of Shakespeare's Bankside.

Miss Brandon's "The Outsider"

A CONFLICT between orthodoxy and heterodoxy in surgery is the theme of "The Outsider," by Dorothy Brandon, at the St. James Theater. On the one side are all the great men of the College of Surgeons, pompous, expansive, or quietly professional in manner; on the other is a "bone-setter," with a good heart but bad mannerr, a passion for advertisement, and, in fact, most of the outward signs of a quack. But the point is that the "bone-setter" succeeds where the others fail, and, as modesty is not one of his failings, he doesn't let the others forget it. Now the greatest of all the surgeons has an only daughter, who is a cripple, and beyond—as her father believes—all cure. Not so, however, thinks the bone-setter. He persuades the girl, in defiance of her father, to commit herself to his care, and undertakes in a year's time to effect a perfect cure.

It should be said that the lady is of a remarkably passionate temperament and yearns to be whole in order that she may dance with her lover and otherwise revel, on two legs instead of one. Thus it is not altogether surprising to find that kisses form an important part of her treatment, not merely the perfunctory kisses of her half-hearted lover, but the ardent ones of the bone-setter, who carries unprofessional conduct so far as to fall in love with his patient. When the twelve months are up, the great men are all called in to witness the bone-setter's triumph. The lady stands on her feet and walks—but only a few faltering steps. Groans and objurgations from the orthodox. Despair of the bone-setter. Abrupt departure of the half-hearted sweetheart, who isn't man enough to "stick it."

Expert in Occulation.

IT is the lady's father, that prince of surgeons, who saves the situation. A rapid glance at the patient has told his practiced eye, what even the bone-setter's native genius couldn't see, that orthodox surgery can now step in and make a certain cure. But only the bone-setter's previous treatment has made this possible. Give the devil his due. Hence-

Millions Spent for Highways

We motored from St. Louis to Washington, Annapolis, and Atlantic City, all the way on perfect roads.

For more than a thousand miles over the National Highway the roads are equal to our own boulevards.

Nothing is more enjoyable during your Summer vacation than an automobile trip through this rolling farm country and the stately seenie mountains.

Vast sums of money are being spent for YOU on good roads; YOU should use them whenever possible! You'll enjoy them.

What pastime will give you more health, pleasure and happiness than a motor trip?

CHICAGO SCHOOLS SUCCESSFUL WITH CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Their Education Must Be Linked With Treatment for Physical Handicaps, Experience Proves.

NEARNESS TO GOOD HOSPITAL ESSENTIAL

Best Results Obtained in Special School—St. Louis Education Board Split on Way to Begin Work.

The Board of Education has decided to establish specialized education for crippled children in St. Louis

It is unanimously agreed that something shall be done. It is not in agreement as to what shall be done. One group, a majority at present, advocates beginning in a small way. To avoid mistakes, they say, it will be better to care for the most severely handicapped children first and, as experience proves methods, to expand to care for all the children.

The other group, a minority in discussion thus far, insists that experiment is unnecessary, that other cities have established precedents and that, profiting from them, the Board should begin on a large scale.

The first group bases its opinion on the need for economy. The second declares that experimenting will be more costly, in the end.

The first group has three suggestions—establishing of rooms in various school buildings, erection of temporary, portable schools in North and South St. Louis, or establishing a portable school on Board property at Grand boulevard.

What Chicago Has Learned.

The second group advocates purchase of property in the vicinity of the orthopedic clinic of Washington University, Barnes hospital and the new Shriners' hospital for Crippled Children, and erection thereon of a one-story fireproof building, equipped with all the industrial devices found useful in the physical reclamation of cripples and their training for vocations which will make them self-supporting. They want the building to embody all that has been found good in other cities and would start caring for all not part of the crippled children.

The first city in this country to undertake full specialized education of crippled children was Chicago. A reporter for the Post-Dispatch went to Chicago this week to learn from educators there what, in the light of their 15 years' experience, they would advise as economical, efficient procedure.

He found that all the procedures now being advocated in St. Louis have been pursued there—specialized instruction in rooms of various scattered buildings, a separate school, the Toole school, specially and completely equipped, but not in proximity to a hospital or clinic, and the Spalding school, designed and built for crippled children, equipped with industrial workrooms and adjacent to the Chicago Hospital for Crippled Children.

He found that physicians who were caring for the physical needs of the children, executives who were concerned chiefly with their educational progress, teachers in immediate contact with the children, and budget officers whose interest was financial, were in agreement that the most profitable procedure, in all respects, was the Spalding school. They backed this judgment two years ago by building an addition to the Spalding school at a cost of $150,000, so that it now cares for 350 of the 750 crippled children for which the Chicago Board of Education must provide.

Education and Treatment Linked.

The outstanding lesson learned by Chicago, as stated by the principal of the Spalding school, was that the education of crippled children was "indissolubly linked with treatment of their physical handicaps."

The reclamation of this boy or of that girl from helplessness to ability to support himself is dependent, not only upon the education of his mind, but upon the training of muscles to function as closely to normal as possible. That training of muscles is accomplished in two ways—by specific tasks in workshops or by massage and electrical treatment by members of the school staff under direction of a physician.

When Johnny B— was placed in the shoe repair shop it was in the hope not that he could be taught to make his living at the last, but that the special exercise given his fingers would revitalize his right hand, impotent with the deadness of infantile paralysis, and that the right hand thus would be reclaimed for whatever task Johnny desired to undertake with it.

Another reason for the necessity of proximity to a hospital and clinic is that at some period during their instruction and reclamation it is necessary for most of the crippled children to undergo operations, some minor, other major, but in either event necessitating absence from school in a hospital. With the hospital next door, teachers from the school go each day to continue the invalid's lessons, so that his progress mentally is uninterrupted.

Solves Operation Problem

It also is necessary for many of the crippled children to go to clinics weekly for long periods, sometimes as long as two years. If the clinic is at a distance, the school progress of the child is interrupted; if it is near the school, there is no loss of time.

In this connection, the Spalding school solves what is feared as a problem in St. Louis. Will parents permit the physical treatment of the children, even if a major operation is required? That difficulty was encountered in Chicago. It solved itself through the children. Mary, who is helpless, sees playmate Jennie made over by an operation. Whatever Mary's parents may think of operations, Mary herself begins to demand that she have the same chance as Jennie and usually gets her wish.

The second important thing Chicago authorities learned from the school was an answer to the frequent question: Does not segregation of crippled children in a single school stigmatize them? The answer is "no." The psychological miracles wrought in the Spalding school are cited as its chief justification. Annie, who is sadly maimed, goes to a regular school. She is singled out above all others, the subject of whispers among the more considerate children, the butt of jibes by the thoughtless. She shrinks even to moroseness. She sulks and a scowl comes to the little face.

Spalding school authorities recount case after case of children regenerated mentally as well as physically. The point they make simply is: Annie leaves the regular school and goes to a school where, like herself, all the children are crippled. She ceases to be conspicuous. She sees other children more severely handicapped than herself. The natural sunshine of childhood says to her: "I am not as bad as that little girl." Spalding school teachers point out pupil after pupil transformed in this way. "None is so badly crippled that he does not see some one who is worse," is their summary of this aspect of the problem.

Remade and Given a Chance.

The records of the school are full of the names of children who came to it apparently doomed to lives of helplessness and demand upon others and left with good prospect of making their own way.

Here is Lola, who came in a wheel chair, a victim of infantile paralysis. Within the last month, Lola was appointed private secretary to the president of a railroad. Lola goes about with braces, fitted for her and made in the school.

There is Henry, born without arms and otherwise crippled, irretrievably, it seemed. Hehry has been in the school five years. Last Christmas Henry drew and painted 1500 postcards and sold them in payment for the appliances that made his work possible. Henry's postcards are sought at the Christmas season by hundreds of Chicagoans who have learned of his winning fight.

Forty-five children from the Spalding school were returned to the regular school last year. They had been physicalHy remade so that they could take their places with normal children without concessions.

Chicago was inclined to view the special education of crippled children as charity at the start. It is now recognized as enlightened self-interest. The cost was at first questioned. It required last year $113,387 for the education of the city's 750 crippled children. In addition, it cost $171,700 to transport them to and from school in hired busses, the longest trip for any child being about 15 miles. The distances would not be so great in St. Louis.

Cost of Work in Chicago.

Chicago spends $360 a year on each of its crippled children. It spends $246 on each blind child and $278 each on deaf children.

When the wisdom of the expenditure on crippled children is questioned, the answer given is that progress can be more surely marked among the cripples and that the increased cost above that for blind and deaf is fully compensated.

The Spalding school is a one-story and attic building, only slightly above the street level. It contains on the first floor eight classrooms, assembly hall with stage, gymnasium, three large industrial rooms, dining room, kitchen, playroom, nurses' room, sleeping porch with beds, for all the children nap each day; physician's examining room, dental room and office. The attic is used for industrial training, such as shoe cobbling, printing, basket weaving, brace making and several other specialized pursuits as need for them may arise in individual cases. An easy incline leads from the first floor to the attic, and a fire escape 100 feet long, and broad runs from the attic to the ground.

The school, in short, provides medical, nursing and dietary care, with eight grades of school as in the regular school, and equipment for meeting every need, however unusual.

Chicago is abandoning its classes in regular school building and is centering all work for crippled children in its two special schools. It expects eventually to care for all in the one school, the Spalding, because of its proximity to hospital facilities.

"Without hospital care and medical treatment it is money wasted; no progress is possible," is Chicago's summary of experience with its crippled children.

MERRY TIMES FOR MERMAIDS

One-Piece Bathing Suit Advocates Win in Seattle.

SEATTLE Wash—The city council, despite two women members, this week washed its hands of the annual bathing suit squabble. According to its recommendation women bathers this summer may wear as little as they please conscience being the only guide. The one piece silk wool, tightly fitting suit has always been a favorite on Seattle's beaches and none but grandmothers wear hose or shoes. There has been little change in style of men's attire for the beach in 10 years. A popular adjunct this summer to the one-piece silk bathing suit is the long length woolen cape. With sandal slippers and a long cape women bathers are ideally clothed for the sandy playgrounds.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Tightly grasping a small red memorandum book he had found on the train, Richard Godfrey, 11-year-old son of Joseph N. LONDON FORFEITS STAGE SCEPTER TO BROADWAY forward orthodoxy and heterodoxy will strike an alliance and each smilingly acknowledge the other's merit. Meanwhile, the lady has discovered that the kisses—the really good ones—that she thought, when under treatment, to have received from her sweetheart actually proceeded from the bone-setter. That settles it, and the lady pots for the expert in osculation.

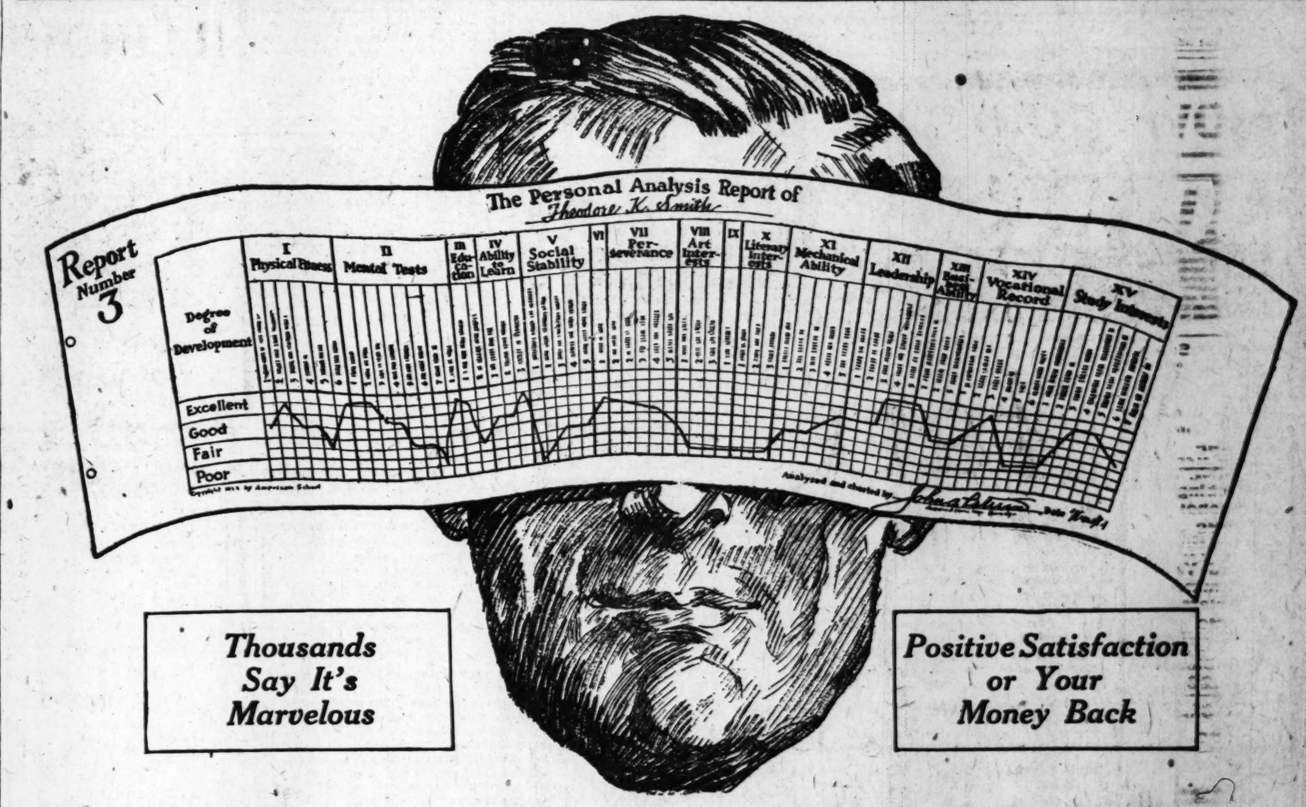
The bonesetter (and osculatory expert) is played by Mr. Leslie Faber, who never touches a part without making it, in the theatrical sense of the term, a "character." He elaborates this one with many details of eccentricity, flamboyancy, and fervor, and enriches it with splashes of warm, vivid color. Needless to say, he soon became the darling of the house at the opening performance, fairly sharing his triumph, however, with Miss Isobel Elsom, who in the part of the crippled girl gave abundant promise of becoming a grande amoureuse.



Thousands Say It's Marvelous

Positive Satisfaction or Your Money Back

An Amazing New Way of Finding Out What You Are Best Fitted For

Think of it! A way of finding out what you are best qualified to do. Think what that means—success quickly, wealth, health, happiness, power and prominence.

At this very moment, your inner capacities once released, may make you a captain of industry, a statesman, a famed lawyer, an expert in accounting, a skilled mechanic—you can know.

Your capacity known to yourself now may be but a shadow of the tremendous powers of ability within you, waiting to be analyzed and released in the right direction.

Or you may find that your present ambition can never be realized and your right forte in life is startlingly different than you expect. You should know—and at once.

American School
Not For Profit

The American School is not a money-making corporation, but like resident schools and colleges, is chartered strictly as an "Educational Institution, not for profit."

More than 200 famous engineers and educators prepared the special Instruction papers for our students.

For over a quarter of a century, Big Engineers, Educators and Business Men have recommended the American School. They know that our long experience as an educational institution guarantees better training at less cost than can be given by any school conducted for profit.

Established for Over a Quarter of a Century

A Fascinating Experience

No Study, Books or Work Necessary

No longer need those who have failed remain failures—once they learn what that hidden power of ability within them is really fitted to do, failure and disappointment will turn into success, and once again people will say "There's an instance of making good in a big way over night—everything he tries is successful."

And those who have reached success in full or part measure—or from curiosity those who wish to check up on their own capacities—known and hidden, can find dependable results in a sure scientific method—no theory, psychic, mind-reading or magic marvels; just a logical formula that charts each capacity as it is, pointing out of unlimited power which you probably never knew you possessed—suggesting how and toward what purpose to direct these capacities for the greatest success.

No longer need young men about to enter the business world grope in confusion for the right start to early success.

No longer need worrying parents guess what vocations their children shall prepare for in their studies.

Once the findings of our personal analysis is applied in your daily life you will note an immediate change—you will watch your progress with confidence because you will know you are giving your capacities a chance and they are making good.

Unlike Any Other Method

Every analysis is made specifically for the individual wishing to learn about his inner capacities. Old or young, success or failure, man or woman, you can KNOW, no matter what kind of work you are doing, have done, or would like to do.

EDITOR OF BOSTON TRANSCRIPT TO BE GUEST AT LUNCHEON

Military Order of World War to Give Affair in Honor of James T. Williams Jr.

The St. Louis Chapter, Military Order of the World War, will tender a luncheon in honor of James T. Williams Jr., editor of the Boston Transcript, Friday, at noon at the Missouri Athletic Club. Attendance is limited to 250 members.

Williams, who has published a pamphlet containing editorials written when he attended the Limitation of Armament Conference, is an authority on national and international affairs. His editorial comment and other writings deal extensively with the national defense act and preparedness. He is keenly interested in work pertaining to the Military Order of the World War.

Reservations for the luncheon should be sent to Lieut. W. R. Moynihan, 3869 Park avenue. E. J. Spencer is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangments.

In Studio and Gallery

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

DURING the summer months when most St. Louis artists are away storing up material for next winter's work in the studio, some of their works of the past year have been hung in the Artists' Guild for the benefit of summer visitors to the city. A number of contributions to this display have been shown previously, some of them having been purchased in the meantime, while for others this is their initial appearance.

One of the most charming things in the exhibition is William Schevill's portrait study of Sheila Burlingame. The soft, unobtrusive background of dull rose blends with the spirit of gentleness of the model. Her quaint delicacy seems to have been caught by the artist and guarded in the semi-conventionalized arrangement.

The Joplin, Mo., Art League may well be congratulated upon the ownership of T. P. Barnett's work, entitled "Autumnal Mosaic." It is a sparkling story of Autumn's splendor, told in brilliant colorings, lights and reflections. The manner in which it is done entirely justifies the title of the picture.

Mild and restful, yet not lacking in the spirit necessary to enliven a picture, is C. G. Waldeck's "Ozark Stream." It is a pleasing, "livable" picture, with peaceful pastoral feeling. His "Evening in the Harbor" although a wharf marine, also is quieting. In view of Mr. Waldeck's present artistic attitudes, it will be interesting to see what results from his summer now being spent in Rockport where the art laws decree that painters in that colony shall paint impressionistically and with unadulterated color.

E. H. Wuerple's calm picture, "Against an Evening Sky" is another pleasure. It is an extreme relief beside some of the torrid disturbances in which a few local feminine strugglers chose to dabble.

A group of etchings by C. K. Gleeson will be found in the little front gallery of the Guild. Some of them are colored, giving them additional charm. The finesse of a good etching will never fail to attract, and the majority of these prints are small enough in size to be practical for use as nice bits of decoration in even the smallest apartment.

WITH the exception of a few objects from the Bachstitz collections of ancient gold, enameled jewels and millefleur glass, the exhibits which for some time have been loaned to our Museum have been returned. Those objects which were retained here are for the consideration of the Museum, and it is greatly to be hoped that treasures as rare as these will be added to our permanent collections.

MISS Esther Blomgren, a young woman just starting upon her career, has taken the studio of the late Frederick Oakes Sylvester for a few weeks, and is showing a number of her pictures in St. Louis. A serious exhibition at this time is somewhat premature, since her work thus far is entirely experimental and her individual style yet unestablished. Miss Blomgreh is sincere in her appreciation of this fact, and contrary to the usual desire of artists to withhold their first experiments which cannot qualify as better and consequently later works, she is showing her early efforts in order that she may receive the criticism other artists can give her. She has studied in France and Italy, copying the old masters for an understanding of that technique, although she has fallen short on the conception of color, and she also spent two years at the Art Students' League in New York. Last year she studied a short time with a Russian artist whose influence may be seen in some four or five of Miss Blomgren's original figure drawings. These give promise of future development, whereas the majority of the other pictures she is showing have only value almost entirely for herself, from experimental standpoints.

Miss Blomgren has a number of friends in St. Louis, and intends remaining here for another fortnight. Anyone wishing to see her pictures is welcome.

HOLDUP MAN SEARCHES MAIL SACK, RETURNS IT TO CARRIER

Robber on Highway Near Knoxville Apparently Failed to Find What He was Looking For.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—Forcing H. F. Bailey at the point of a pistol to surrender the mail sack which he carries daily between the University of Tennessee and the University farm, an unidentified man made a hurried search of the contents of the bag, then escaped. Bailey does not think any mail was taken from the bag.

The holdup occurred on Kingston pike near the L. X N. underpass. After covering Bailey with his gun the man forced him to give up the mail bag. Making a hurried search which, according to the carrier, evidently failed to reveal what he sought, the bandit handed the bag back to the carrier and made away.

The holdup was immediately reported to university officials. Bailey, it was said, furnished a complete description of the man.

The Secret of Having Beautiful Hair

Beautiful hair—hair that is soft and silky—adds more than anything else to your attractiveness and charm.

Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care.

You can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly. Proper shampooing is what brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why leading motion picture stars and millions of women, everywhere, use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

TEMPORARY HOMES FOR TEN BOYS IN COUNTRY SOUGHT

Board of Children's Guardians Wishes to Place Other Youngsters With View to Adoption

The Board of Children's Guardians is seeking homes for a number of children, including ten boys who are strong and healthy and could make themselves useful around country homes to pay for their board. They will not be placed on farms, but with families near St. Louis where they can be visited by representatives of the board. All of these boys attend the city schools and want to spend their vacations doing chores in the country.

The board also wants to find homes, with a view to adoption, for two brothers, 8 and 10 years of age, for a brother and sister and for several other boys and girls. All homes offered are carefully investigated before the children are placed. Application for any of the children may be made at the Board of Children's Guardians' headquarters, Room 237, Municipal Courts Building.

centrated upon the Mississippi and Meramec Rivers and is designed to conserve human life by minimizing the number of preventable drownings.

The city of St. Louis, as well as various civic and athletic organizations, including the Chamber of Commerce, the Missouri Athletic Association, Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association, are co-operating in the project, which is part of the program of the National Red Cross.

Preliminary work of the campaign has consisted of the distribution of 10,000 pamphlets outlining "Don'ts" for bathers and the placarding of bathing beaches and banks of streams in the city and county with suggestions for safe conduct by swimmers.

Beginning today, 10 volunteer life guards will patrol the Meramec River on Sundays and holidays, to give instructions in life-saving methods. These guards are in charge of Capt. Fred Potthoff.

The City has reserved the Marquette Pool for the exclusive use of the Red Cross from 6 to 7 p. m. on Wednesdays and Thursdays, where instructions in life saving will be given. There is no charge for this instruction on the river or in the Marquette Pool. The Y. W. C. A., the Lorelei and the Tower Grove Natatorium also will give free life-saving instruction at the request of the Red Cross.

The campaign this year is in charge of Allen C. Orrick, a lawyer who issued the following statement in connection with the campaign:

"The Red Cross, in its life saving campaign, encourages swimming and canoeing as healthy forms of relaxation making for greater efficiency in the office, factory or on the street. The Red Cross suggests, however, certain common sense rules of conduct for persons indulging in this type of recreation. It is safe to predict that were these rules observed, there would be few, if any, accidental drownings. Most of the accidental drownings in St. Louis in the past few years have been preventable, and in most instances have been caused by violation of the cardinal rules for water safety issued by the Red Cross. Persons who cannot swim should not attempt canoeing unless accompanied by experienced swimmers.

"All organizations, commercial and otherwise, are urged, now that the vacation season is at hand, to co-operate with the Red Cross by encouraging and developing life saving and understanding of water safety fundamentals among their members and employes. It is hoped that a sufficient number of swimmers will take the life saving examination this year to furnish the entire bathing territory of the Meramec and Mississippi Rivers in St. Louis and St. Louis county with life guards. Life savers are community assets, and life-saving methods should be understood by all swimmers."

The Misouri Athletic Association has incorporated the life-saving tests in its athletic program, and more than 60 members have passed the examination. Classes in life-saving are being conducted at Washington University and Principia Academy.

Water-Safety Rules Tell How Best to Avoid Preventable Accidents

WATER-SAFETY rules have been issued by the St. Louis Chapter of the American Red Cross as follows:

If you Cannot Swim

Don't—Wade unless you know the depth of water.
Don't—Go wading alone or where there is a swift current.
Don't—Go canoeing unless accompanied by an experienced swimmer.

If You Can Swim

Don't—Attempt long swims early in the season. Wait until you get into condition.
Don't—Swim on a full stomach. Wait at least two hours after eating.
Don't—Swim if overheated.
Don't—Swim until exhausted.
Don't—Dive without accurate knowledge of the depth of the water.
Don't—Cry for help in fun. You may need help some time and not get it.
Don't—Go in swimming alone unless you are an expert.

Canoeists.

Don't—Attempt canoeing without some instruction in paddling.
Don't—Stand up or change seats unless ready to swim out. Many deaths result from this.
Don't—Try to scare your companion by rocking the canoe. It isn't smart and may cause a death.

The St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross today begins its annual campaign to make the swimming in St. Louis and St. Louis County safe for the public and is making widespread distribution of pamphlets and placards and giving free instructions in life-saving methods. The campaign is con-

Amundsen's Airplane Flight Across the North Pole to Fame---or Death

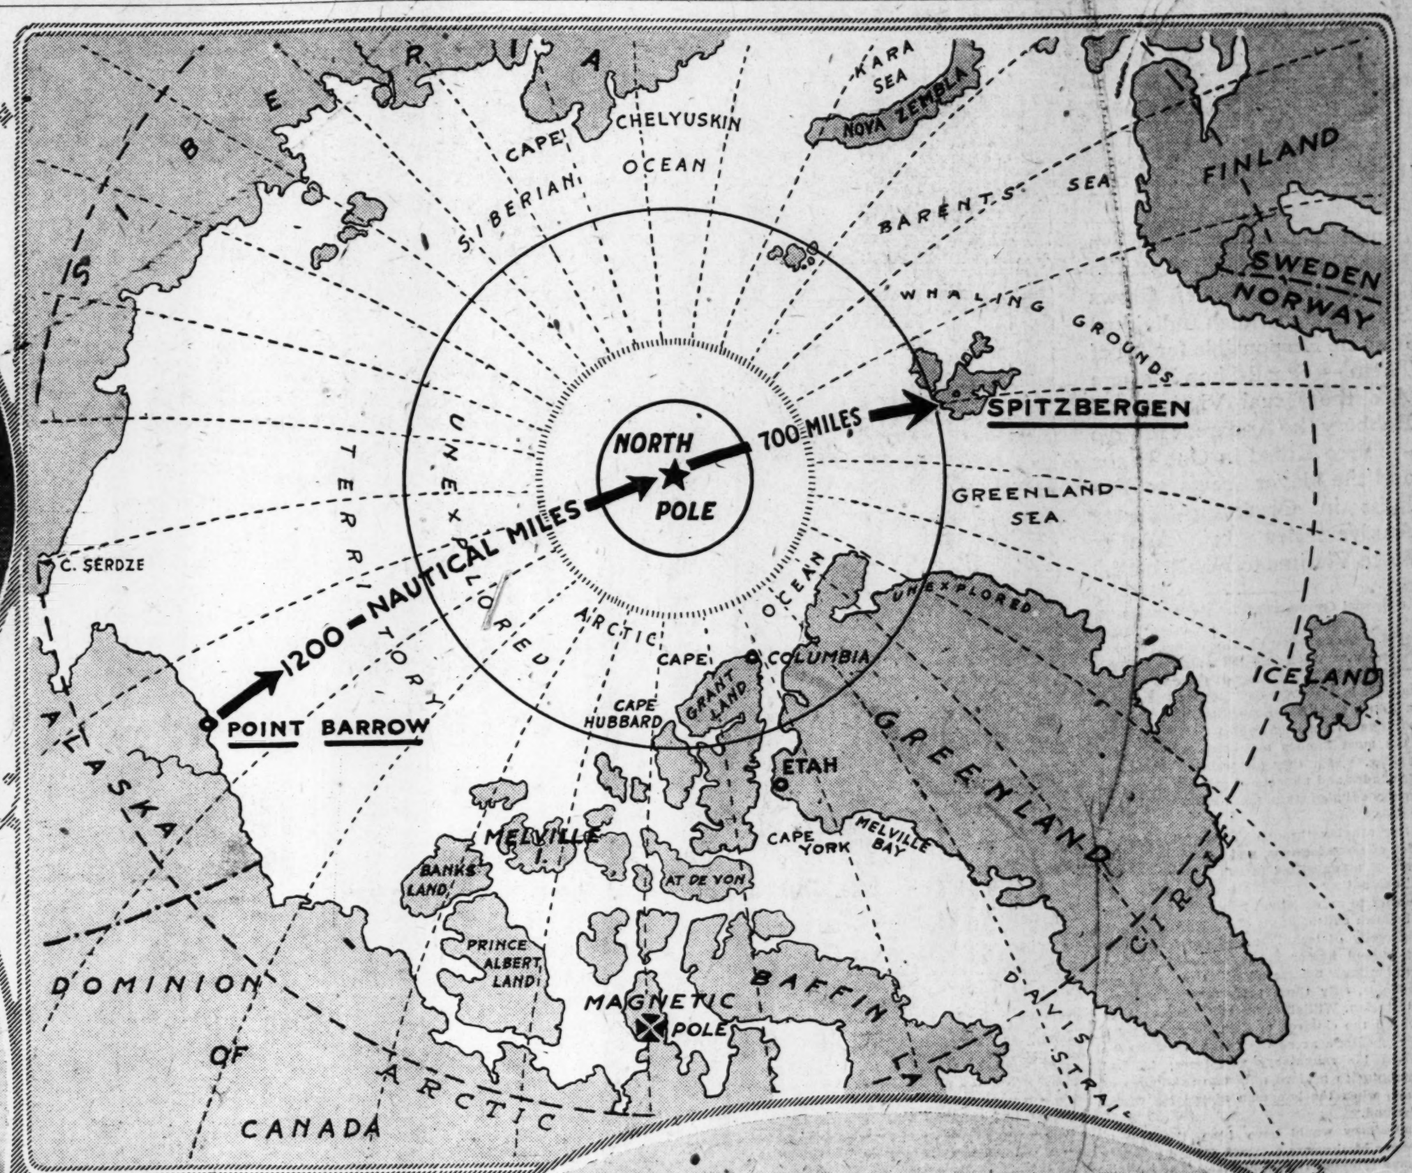
BOLD ASSAULT ON SCIENTIFIC MYSTERIES AT TOP OF THE WORLD DUE TO BEGIN THIS WEEK

CAPT. ROALD AMUNDSEN,

Discoverer of the South Pole and veteran of many Arctic campaigns, who will make a supreme effort, within a few days, to reach the earth's northernmost point by airplane, flying from Point Barrow, Alaska, across the pole to Spitzbergen, nearly 2000 miles away. A landing field, marked with letters 15 feet high, has been prepared for him at Spitzbergen, and several planes have been sent there to reconnoiter for him and try to effect a rescue if he should be forced down in the wilderness.

LIEUT. OSKAR OMDAL,

Norwiegan naval aviator, who will serve as Amundsen's pilot on the attempted flight across the pole.



Map of the top of the world, showing the course Amundsen plans to take across the pole to Spitzbergen. His original plan was to attempt a non-stop flight straight across the 1900 miles of polar ice, but later arrangements provide for the use of two planes, one of which will lay a string of supply stations from his ship, Maud, to within a few hundred miles of the pole. Then Amundsen and his pilot will have only about 1250 miles to cover from the last cache to Spitzbergen.

Amundsen's all-metal plane, the Elisabeth, in which he will attempt to negotiate the frigid air over the ice fields. The cockpit, as can be seen in the photograph, is entirely enclosed, and the mechanism is especially constructed for battling with intense cold. In test flights it has been proved capable of remaining in the air 26 hours. The plane has been for sometime at Wainwright, Alaska, in readiness for the flight.

Norwegian Explorer, Who Beat the Ill-Fated Scott to the South Pole, Now 11 Years After That Tragic Adventure in the Frozen Antarctic Wastes, at the Bottom of the Earth, Defies a Similar Fate in the Ice Fields at the Top of the World—Men Familiar With the Region Predict That He Will Never Return, but He Has Gone About His Preparations Certain That He Will Succeed—Plans Seemingly Provide for All Emergencies, but He Is Entering a Vast, Unknown Region Where the Peril of Getting Lost Is Great.

SOMEWHERE among the ice floes in the Arctic seas beyond Wrangel Island and 800 miles or more north of Point Barrow, a queer little round-hulled schooner, the Maud, scarred and battered, roosts on an icy nest like a lonely waterfowl. Day in and day out, it hovers there and drifts and waits. Even now that the long night of an Arctic winter is over and the sun is up for a period of some six months' perpetual daytime, it is likely that the crew has brought forth little outward sign of activity from the ship, for its mission is simply to do what it is doing. Locked in the ice, it is performing its errand of floating along with the bergs to discover whether or not there is truth in Roald Amundsen's theory that the great Arctic ice pack drifts across the pole.

Before many more days have passed, however, the hardy adventurers who for months have watched what Admiral Peary called "the everlasting moons" will find a new diversion. They will start scanning the horizon for an object strange to the Northern heavens while they keep their ears alert for the hum of an airplane that will tell them Amundsen is at last off on his flight "over the top of the world." The day the roar of that plane breaks the deathlike stillness will be a memorable one in the annals of Arctic exploration, for it will signalize the climax of Amundsen's efforts to conquer North Polar barriers after five years of failure, and it will mean also the beginning of one of the most hazardous aerial feats ever attempted—one in which the chances are all with the monster adversary, hungry for human lives.

Unless misfortune has overtaken him since he set out from Nome two months ago to "mush" a dog team over 500 miles of wilderness, Capt. Amundsen, rugged veteran of the ice fields and already the discoverer of the South Pole, is now at Wainwright, Alaska, preparing for his final dash from Point Barrow, near by, to the earth's northernmost point. Equipped with a powerful monoplane, the Elisabeth, specially built to battle with the intense cold, he, with his pilot, Lieut. Oskar Omdal of the Norwegian navy, expects to "take off" for the unknown regions sometime between June 20 and 28.

A few hours should carry them to the Maud, which is to serve as the base of operations in the campaign.

What, then, will be the fate or the fortune of the adventurers is an open question, for the way from the Maud on to the pole and from the pole on to Spitzbergen, where the final landing is planned, is fraught with perils of which none but the Arctic explorer can conceive—perils which the outside world, housed in warmth and comfort, knows only through the poignant letters of dying men and frozen bodies that have come out of the ice fields to tell their story.

Wild and hazardous Amundsen's venture seems on the face of it, but darker still is the shadow of misgiving thrown upon it when one remembers the fate that befell Capt. Robert F. Scott and his heroic little party after they had reached the South Pole early in 1912, only to find Amundsen's flag already there. That tragedy, the most heartrending of all those enacted in the polar solitudes, somehow seems closely linked with Amundsen's destiny, and one cannot forbear to wonder if the sturdy Norwegian's escape from Scott's terrible debacle will only serve to bring him to a similar disaster 11 years later at the opposite end of the earth.

Briefly, the program that Amundsen will undertake is this: After reaching the Maud, the explorer and his pilot will leave their metal-inclosed monoplane and, using a Curtiss Oriole plane now on board the ship, attempt a series of hops to a point within striking distance of the pole, leaving supplies at a string of depots. Then, returning to the ship and getting the Elisabeth, which has already proved itself to be a glutton for cold and capable of remaining in the air for 26 hours or more, they will retrace the course marked by supply depots and stake all on a 1250-mile hop from the last station across the pole to Spitzbergen.

Obviously, a hundred factors, any one of which might spell failure, and if failure, then death, enter into the attempt. Not alone will there be dangers such as polar explorers ordinarily encounter—blizzards, high winds, hunger and the possibility of losing the course. Just as soon as he takes off from Point Barrow, at Wainwright, Amundsen will be up against the problem of making a landing again. How serious that problem is becomes apparent when it is remembered that the frozen Arctic Ocean is not a smoothly covered expanse like a lake, but is filled with jumbled, upheaving swells and jagged bergs for a distance of thousands of miles.

A forced landing in the wilds probably would mean a damaged plane, and that would, more than likely, mean death to the flyers by freezing or starvation, for it is manifestly impossible to carry many supplies in a plane already burdened with gasoline and human freight.

Then, even if the machine should escape damage in landing, the difficulty of getting in the air again would be almost as grave, for in an ocean full of ice crags it is not probable that there are many stretches level enough to accommodate a machine that requires 1200 feet for a "take-off."

Experienced explorers declare that the proposed flight is madness. Capt. Donald MacMillan's opinion, recently expressed, is that Amundsen and his pilot are going to certain death if they try to carry out the plan they have outlined. Capt. E. T. McIntyre, who for 18 years has been a navigator of the Arctic regions, offers a prediction just as gloomy.

"If Amundsen should attempt to fly across the pole this season," he asserts, "it will mean the end of him and his pilot. He's at Wainwright now and he will have 1200 miles to fly before reaching the pole and then a distance almost as great from there to Spitzbergen. The ocean is full of ice—hummocky, bumpy ice—that wouldn't permit a landing anywhere. In a good year he might possibly make it across, but never in a single hop, and it is extremely unlikely that flyers could select from the air a safe landing place on the treacherous snow-covered surface. Even if the surface appeared to be level the risk would be enormous."

Andree's Ill Fated Dash for Pole

There is on record only one other attempt to reach the pole by means of aircraft, and that was the ill-fated venture of Andree, who in 1897 set out from Danes Island, north of Spitzbergen, in a balloon. What happened to him nobody knows, for Andree never came back to tell the tale. Rumors concerning his fate came out of the North for years afterward, but the last definite trace of him was the note he threw overboard giving his position as 82 north and 25 west longitude, with the added comment that his craft was sailing 800 feet above the ice

Birmingham's Eerie Series of Ax Murder Mysteries

19 DEAD, 13 MAIMED IN EXTRAORDINARY CHAIN OF CRIMES THAT STRIKINGLY RESEMBLE EACH OTHER

An Airplane View of the Prosperous Iron City of Birmingham Over Which Hangs the Sinister Shadow of the Fiendish Murderer's Ax.

Though Three Negroes Have Been Convicted, the Assaults Continue and Belief Grows That One Fiendish Individual May Be Responsible for All of Them — Small-Shop Keepers Are the Usual Victims and Robbery the Apparent Motive —Three Killed in One Night and the Slayer Seems to Delight in Observing Sinister Anniversaries by Adding More Victims to His Record.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 16.

HIS genius maddened with opium, Thomas De Quincey fell into the macabre drollery of imagining a Society of Connoisseurs in Homicide, in his essay on "Murder Considered as a Fine Art." These worthies, he supposed, from time to time assembled to hear reports on the most famous masterpieces of manslaughter, which they appraised, regarding their shades and nuances of excellence, as other critics adjudge statues, oratorios, pictures or intaglios.

After ranging through history's populous atelier of assassinations, and celebrating the merits of many gifted artists in carnage, the facetious author awarded the palm of supreme virtuosity to an executant named Williams, for the breadth and boldness of design, the relentless ferocity of technique and the features of mystery and horror displayed in his "grand exterminating massacre" of two complete households. By these performances, averred the historian, Williams asserted his ascendancy above all the children of Cain. He affected a ship carpenter's ax as the tool with which he wrought his sanguinary sculptures; he had opportunity to achieve only two specimens of his art, when the hangman nipped his career in the bud.

De Quincey would have been the first to denounce his hero as a mere dilettante, could he have foreseen the performances of another craftsman of the ax now flourishing—that is, if one accepts a belief general in Birmingham, that its atrocious series of "ax murders" has proceeded from the hand of a single maestro.

Survivors of Attacks Tell of Ax

The Birmingham axman, according to theorists of that city, made his professional debut on Christmas Eve, 1919, and celebrated his most recent appearance on May 29 last. Altogether, 19 men and women in Birmingham have been slaughtered within a period of three years and five months, while 13 other persons have been so fortunate as to recover from similar murderous assaults. In every case a blunt instrument was used to crush the skulls of the victims; survivors invariably have described the weapon as an ax with a short handle, which the murderer concealed beneath his coat.

Still assuming the hypothesis of a lone assassin, the thought which terrifies Birmingham, which has sent throngs of citizens to the police imploring permission to carry arms, which has incited the formation of bands of vigilantes and protective associations, and which spurs the authorities to frantic and as yet futile exertions—the thought which lowers over this city of 180,000 like a sinister shadow is that the monster is still at large, his identity utterly unsuspected; that at any given moment, walking unmarked and honored among his neighbors, he may be revolving the subject, the time, place and method, of his twentieth butchery!

Slayer Believed to Be Left-Handed

There have been various theories as to the origin of these crimes, such as a bootleggers' war, a vendetta imported from abroad, the operations of a band of murderous drug addicts, quarrels among bands of thieves, or the vengeance of negroes for supposed wrongs against their race. But on examining the long gallery of homicides and assaults, one is struck by numerous and singular features of unity, in addition to the striking fact of the nature of the weapon.

The first curious feature is that in every case of murder or assault, the victims have been shopkeepers or small merchants, and members of their families. It seemed as if the assassin had taken a vow to annihilate the shopkeeping population of Birmingham. Twelve of the 19 murders actually occurred in stores and shops. In the second place, the majority of those assailed were what is known in the South as "foreigners"—Syrians, Italians, Slavs, Jews, Greeks.

Survivors without exception have described their assailant as a negro, or a white man disguised with a mask of blacking. From the nature of several of the wounds, he has been supposed to be left-handed. In every case but one, it is said, the blunt instead of the sharp end of the weapon was used for striking.

What may be termed the scenical features of the crimes appear to have been almost identical.

"The good sense of the practitioner," wrote De Quincey, "has usually directed him to night and privacy."

The procedure of the supposed ax murderer was to enter some small shop just before the closing hour, when no customers were present, the proprietor was alone, and the whole day's receipts were in the cash register.

The visitor would ask for some petty article, and when the unsuspecting shopkeeper turned or stooped to get it, would fell him with a blow of a weapon snatched from beneath his coat. If a member of the family, hearing the noise, came to the rescue, he or she would also be struck down. Then the assassin would loot the till, and flee into the darkness.

Other peculiarities, or perhaps mere coincidences, are that three murders and three attempted murders occurred on the dates of Jan. 10 and Jan. 25 in different years, as if these were days red-lettered for some reason in the assassin's calendar; and that certain localities were favored as scenes of operation. In four cases, the victims resided between Twelfth and Eighteenth streets on Avenues D and E; and two assaults this year occurred in the vicinity of Fourteenth street and Eighth avenue, North.

Sinister Anniversaries Observed

But the grand distinguishing feature in several of the crimes has been the display of a gratuitous atrocity. In four of the cases, the assassin, after murdering his victims with an ax, lingered to cut their throats. In a fifth case, after slaying a merchant and his wife, the monster set fire to a bed in which their seven-months old baby was sleeping. The child was rescued by a negro woman who saw the blaze.

These facts lead Birmingham to believe that a criminal sadist is abroad—a fiend who murders not only for money but for delight in bloodshed and cruelty; a demon in the last stages of that pathological malady which is observed, in its mildest form, in children who are obsessed with a joy in torturing insects and animals, and later in those adults who seek employment as killers in slaughter-houses, where they can gratify their passion for witnessing and inflicting death.

The first case was that of John H. Belser, a Syrian merchant, of 1801 Avenue E, who was struck down in his shop on the night of Dec. 24, 1919, apparently while bending over a barrel to serve a customer. He died 15 hours later in a hospital, without regaining consciousness.

Whether this was an isolated crime, or the murderer still experienced the qualms of a novice, or was glutted, his nerve not yet being completely hardened, with his first shedding of blood, no further instance of the kind occurred until Nov. 28, 1921. At 7:30 o'clock on that evening, G. T. Ary, manager of a chain store at 1000 Twenty-fourth street, North, was felled while leaning over a pickle barrel. He died a few hours later.

Three Murders in One Night

Thereafter, the murders and assaults came thronging at an average of one every 16 days. Three murders occurred on the single night of Dec. 31, three weeks after Ary's assassination. The first was that of Mose Parker, a negro shopkeeper, living in the black-belt settlement of Birmingham which is called "Titlesville."

The other fatalities were those of Joseph Mantione, an Italian shopkeeper, and his wife, who lived in a sparsely settled district in North Birmingham. Mantione was struck down as he leaned over a barrel of meal, apparently to fill an order. Mrs. Mantione, who was in bed, leaped up in her nightdress and ran to her husband's aid. She was killed instantly; Mantione died the next day. It was on this occasion that the murderer, after slaying the parents, went into an adjoining room, despite the peril of delay, and set fire to the bedclothes in which their baby was sleeping.

Two weeks later, on Jan. 10, 1922, a night watchman heard outcries, and traced the sound to a grocery kept by Clem S. Crawford, an ex-service man. He found a three-year-old child weeping over its dead mother and dying father. Mrs. Crawford had been instantly killed with a blow on the head. Evidently her husband had rushed in, to be met with a similar blow. Then the murderer returned to his first victim and cut her throat. Afterwards he ransacked the shop and living quarters. It was obvious that he had asked Mrs. Crawford to fill an order, for a sack partly filled with meal was found near her, beside a barrel. Crawford died a week later.

On Jan. 25, Lillie Byrd, a negress, was arrested on a charge of having committed the Mantione murders, and was summarily sentenced to serve two terms of 99 years each in the penitentiary. Feeling ran so high that, on the night after her arrest, several thousand members of the Ku Klux Klan, in full regalia, paraded the negro districts of the city, marching from Avondale to North Birmingham in a procession which held the streets from 8 to 10 p. m.

As if to throw doubt upon the justice of this hurried conviction, the ensuing months were filled with attacks, fatal or otherwise, bearing the same characteristic features as the preceding ones. On the very night of Tillie Byrd's arrest, Tony Lorino, a grocer, and his wife Rose were struck down by a negro or disguised white man wielding an ax. The man entered their shop at Twelfth street and Avenue D and made the familiar request for meal. Lorino was felled as he bent over the barrel. Leaving him for dead, the assailant started for the living quarters back of the shop.

Lorino, recovering consciousness, snatched a revolver from his shirt and emptied it, but missed. Mrs. Lorino, with a baby in her arms, rushed in, to be met with a blow that crushed the left side of her skull. Lorino seized a shotgun, but before he could fire, was struck a second time with the blunt side of the ax. The would-be murderer fled, without attempting to harm three small children. Both Lorino and his wife suffered fractures of the skull, and both recovered.

Extraordinary Boldness of Slayer

Unsuccessful attempts at murder occurred on June 3, 1922, when a man armed with an ax attacked and slightly wounded Joe Lucia, a grocer, and his wife and daughter. J. H. Seay, a grocer, was wounded under the usual circumstances on Sept. 30, 1922.

The next fatality occurred at 7 o'clock on the night of Nov. 6, 1922. The victim was Abraham Levine, who kept a shop at 1600 Avenue D. A man afterwards described as a negro drew both Levine and his wife into the back yard of their place and attacked them with an ax. Contrary to the usual custom, he used both the blade and the blunt side of the weapon in dispatching Levine, who died six hours later. Mrs. Levine was struck on the forehead with the blunt part of the instrument, and recovered. The murderer then entered the store and attempted to buy 20 cents' worth of eggs from Levine's daughter, Emma. His remark that he had "left her father and mother in the back yard" appeared so ominous that she screamed, frightening him away. Two negroes, arrested three days later, were acquitted by a jury during the spring of this year.

Four ax murders, besides several unsuccessful attacks, have occurred this year. On the night of Jan. 10 Joseph Klien, a grain dealer, and his daughter, Mary, were attacked in his store at 1406 Eighth avenue, North. Klien died on the way to a hospital, but his daughter recovered. The cash drawer was looted. Almost a duplication of the Mantione murders came to light on Jan. 23, when Luigi Vitellaro and his wife, Josephine, were found with fractured skulls in their shop at Eighth avenue and Twenty-fourth street, North. Mrs. Vitellaro died the next day and her husband a week later. Two days later Costia Terlikis, Greek proprietor of a restaurant, was attacked with an ax and slightly injured, by an assailant who escaped.

The latest murder was that of Charles Grafeo, Italian shopkeeper, who was found dead behind the counter of his store, 1500 Seventh avenue, North, at 9:45 on the evening of May 29. His skull had been crushed by a single blow of a blunt instrument wielded by a left-handed man, according to detectives; also, as in the case of Mrs. Crawford, his throat had been slit. He had been requested to sell a bottle of oil, for a bottle with a funnel in it stood on the oil tank. His pockets were turned out, and the till and living quarters had been ransacked.

Among the attacks which did not result fatally was a significant one upon Charles Baldone, his wife, Mary, and his 14-year-old daughter, Virginia. Baldone keeps a shop at 4510 Tenth avenue, North. Some time during the night of July 12, 1912, an enemy crept into the house and assailed husband, wife and daughter with blows of an ax or similar weapon, while they slept in their beds. Three younger children, sleeping near by, were not molested. Though each of the victims suffered a fracture of the skull, all recovered.

Other persons who suffered skull fractures at the hands of a mysterious assailant, but who recovered, were the following: H. Dersky, merchant, 719 Sixteenth street, North, Aug. 17, 1921, and Mrs. Sam Zideman, storekeeper, Sept. 6, 1921. In addition to the 19 murders listed previously, seven other persons have been killed under similar circumstances, but not actually in stores.

In addition to Lillie Byrd, two negroes have been convicted in connection with this chain of murders and sentenced to life imprisonment. But the homicides nevertheless went on. The state of the public mind is reflected in a flood of petitions from citizens imploring permission to arm themselves; in the organization of many storekeepers into a band of vigilantes; and in the formation, with the approval of Chief of Police McDuff, of an Italian Protective Association, composed of merchants of that nationality. Nowadays, in Birmingham, small stores, fruit stands and shops are closing promptly at 6 p. m.

field. Whether his balloon was caught and destroyed in a storm or whether he came down to perish from privation, nobody ever found out. At any rate, the result of his effort was not such as to encourage others to adopt his method.

It has only been in recent years that Amundsen, who has fought many a fight with the wildernesses and won them with his schooners or his dog sleds, has been converted to the idea of using an airplane on a trip of polar exploration. Several years ago, when the plane was first coming into use as a means of reaching seemingly impossible places, somebody asked the Captain if he didn't think it would be a good plan to take one along when he made his next journey to the North. Amundsen was astounded.

"Certainly not," he snorted. "That would be ridiculous."

Now he seems not only to have changed his mind about the effectiveness of airplanes, but is confident that his plan will succeed and that it will enable him to gather more scientific data concerning polar conditions than has ever been obtained before.

But, dangerous as it may seem, Amundsen's proposed flight is not the fruit of a sudden determination. With a judgment seasoned by long years of struggle with the ice fields, he the suffering incident to the distinction of being

Johnny Jones Is Back---East Alton Smiles Again

TOWN'S GAIETY FADED WHEN ITS MOST USEFUL CITIZEN FLED, FEARING HE HAD MISUSED HIS NEIGHBORS' MONEY

But When They Heard About It, They Said It Couldn't Be True; That Johnny Might Not Have Kept His Books Well, as He Himself Had Explained, but That It Was Certain He Was Not Dishonest and, Besides, What Was Going to Become of the Town With Johnny Gone? So the Pressure Became So Great He Had to Come Back—And the First Thing He Did Was to Take the Absent Minister's Place and Preach on the Wonders of God's Goodness to Those Who Love Him—Whole Community Works to Help Him Straighten Out His Books and to Show That Not Only Is He Not Short $8000 but That He Is All Square With His Fellow Men.

JOHNNY JONES,

East Alton's grocer, Sunday school superintendent, School Board head, indorser of notes and all-round friend to man, who has come back to face charges that he is short $8000 in his accounts as secretary of the East Alton Loan and Investment Association, confident in his own honesty and certain that any discrepancy is due to bad bookkeeping.

By F. A. BEHYMER.

JOHNNY JONES came back. He had to come back. East Alton needed him, and was calling him.

The town had been left flat on its back when Johnny Jones, thrown into a panic by sudden trouble, went away between two days. For this Johnny Jones was East Alton's most useful citizen, President of its Board of Education, secretary of its building and loan association, deacon and treasurer of the Baptist Church, superintendent of the Sunday school, village grocer, creditor to many, indorser of notes and all-around friend to man.

What mattered it that Jones' accounts as secretary of the building association were all in a jumble and an inspector had found a seeming shortage of something like $8000! That was a mere matter of money and money could be replaced, but where would they find anybody to take Johnny Jones' place? That was East Alton's wail, sent out into the void into which Jones had vanished. And Jones heard and halted in his flight and came back and East Alton arose from its prostrate posture and welcomed him with open arms and told him it believed in him and would stand by him and see him through.

His return was timely. The Baptist preacher was going to be away the next Sunday morning and Johnny was needed to preach the sermon. And so, this man who had gone away under a cloud, only to discover its silver lining, stood before his brethren, the first Sunday after his return, and talked to them of the unmeasured and unimagined goodness of God to them that love Him.

And week days Jones is at his store, estopped by an order of court from merchandising but free to shake hands with friends who come to encourage and the debtors who come to pay what they owe, so that he can pay what he owes and get back on his feet and go forward again, keeping step with East Alton's progress.

Grew Up With the Town

For the history of Johnny Jones is pretty nearly the history of East Alton. Johnny is a member of the somewhat numerous United States family of Joneses and East Alton is a member of the also numerous family of Illinois Altons, grouped along the Mississippi between Wood River and Clifton Terrace. Johnny was 6 years old and East Alton was not much older when they joined hands, 39 years ago, to climb together. For 23 years he has sold groceries on East Alton's main street and has been a pillar of the Baptist Church and has served his generation in the numerous positions of trust to which his neighbors have called him. With a name like that he might have made a million by inventing a breakfast food and naming it after himself, but he was content to give East Alton his best.

If, now, he is short in his accounts, as he earnestly denies, while admitting that he may have made mistakes, the thing that is most to blame for it is the good heart of the man, who could never say no when a neighbor asked him to indorse a note and could never keep food on his shelves when there were hungry ones who could not pay.

The day, less than a month ago, when a State inspector came along to examine the books of the East Alton Loan and Investment Association, with assets of $100,000, Jones had been its secretary about 10 years. He had been president of the Board of Education for five years and had handled the bonding of a $50,000 building; he had served a term as a member of the Village Council; he had unlimited credit with wholesale grocers and packers for the groceries and meats he sold to the townspeople; he had worked hard and owned his own home and had matured 10 shares of association stock for his two little girls, and his only extravagance was the Baptist Church.

So, when the inspector called him over and told him his accounts were short, he simply couldn't believe it. While he stared, dumb with incredulity, the inspector pointed to the footing of a column of figures. If the footing was right, Johnny Jones was short $8000. It meant, if it was right, that Johnny Jones' life was ruined. He found his voice.

"That ain't right!" he flung out with passionate conviction.

The man of figures said it was what the accounts showed. Jones said, then, the accounts were wrong. And he says so now, and he expects, somehow, somewhere, to find the missing items that will prove him an honest man.

Jones tried to explain his method of bookkeeping, admittedly a method of his own, outgrowth of his efforts to handle accounts without the usual office equipment, but the inspector was hard of hearing and professionally captious about eccentric bookkeeping, so the explanation did not get far with him and he stood by his figures.

HANK FELDWISCH,

Chief of East Alton's one-man police force and a friend in need to Jones. It was to him that the grocer turned over his entire establishment with instructions to pay all creditors in full when trouble became too deep for him and he determined to go away.

How His Accounts Became Confused

Jones was not unprepared to learn that there was confusion in his accounts, due to mixing of the building association funds and those of his business. He received the building association dues at his store and not infrequently a stockholder of the association and a customer of Jones would pay his dues and settle his grocery account with the same check. And because the association had no safe he had to keep the association funds with his store funds. And there were other ways in which they might get mixed. But nothing could convince Jones that there was a shortage in the association funds because his business was solvent and was making him a living and he was not squandering money in any way.

But, just before the inspector came, just to make doubly sure that the association funds were not short, he mortgaged his home for $2000 and deposited the money, along with the $1000 which he had matured for his daughters, to the credit of the association. And now he was asked to believe that in spite of that extraordinary precaution there was a shortage of $8000. It was incredible.

But Johnny Jones knew a certain presumption of inerrancy attached to inspectors' reports and felt himself so hobbled by his limited bookkeeping ability that he could hardly hope to discover quickly enough the errors which he believed would account for the apparent shortage. He was sure that his assets were ample to meet any obligation which might be found to rest against him, but he did not have the heart to stay and see the modest accumulations of a lifetime liquidated as the penalty of his poor bookkeeping. Discouraged and distraught, he determined to go away.

His method of winding up his affairs was more creditable to his honest intent than to his knowledge of bankruptcy administration. His one thought was to turn everything over to an honest man.

Johnny's Plan to Pay All

Hank Feldwisch, Chief of East Alton's one-man police force, is that kind of a man. Johnny Jones calls him friend and he is a man after Johnny's own heart, locally famed for his finesse in composing domestic difficulties without haling the disputants to court. Just the man to settle up Johnny's affairs with the least amount of flurry.

So Johnny wrote a letter to Hank, inclosing the key to his store and asking him to notify the wholesalers to come and get from his stock whatever he owed them.

"I am compelled to leave town," he wrote, "and I want you to have all whom I may owe show you their accounts and let them take whatever amount I may owe them, and let someone buy the balance, including the fixtures, and turn the money over to my brother, Albert, as he will have accounts to meet. I know you are honest and whatever you wish to keep for your trouble you may do so.

"I have plenty of stuff in the store to more than pay all I owe the different houses. I have lived in East Alton for 40 years and in business 23 and I find it impossible to get ahead any. I have such a large stock that nobody will buy me out, and then, too, there are too many stores in East Alton. I wish you would call up Luer Bros. and have them get the side of beef that they delivered yesterday, so that it won't spoil. Some may want to pay their bills Saturday, so you may get some honest person to receive it and give it to the cashier at the bank, and let him pay off the small bills. Please get my car and sell it and keep out for your trouble and give the balance to the bank cashier.

"You might let Edith stay in the store and sell and collect Saturday, as it is payday, and whatever she may collect please have her take it to the bank, so that Mr. Meyers can pay off as it comes in. Then I want the accounts given to Albert, so that he can give them to someone to collect.

"I am going to write Meyers about the case and instruct him to pay off my bills as it comes in and then turn the balance to Albert. I want Albert to sell my property, but I will send him a deed.

"I hate to do this, Hank, but I cannot keep going into debt. Let Edith stay in the store Friday and Saturday along with the man, and if you can't be on hand have Albert or someone on Saturday. They can put some stuff out over the counter and ought to get in quite a bit of money Saturday.

"I want every dollar paid I owe, but I must start over again myself. Albert will have quite a time taking care of the accounts, but with the help of Meyers at the bank I believe he can pull through and come clean in a few weeks. I have no place to go, but I feel under obligations to my dear girlies. Yours truly,

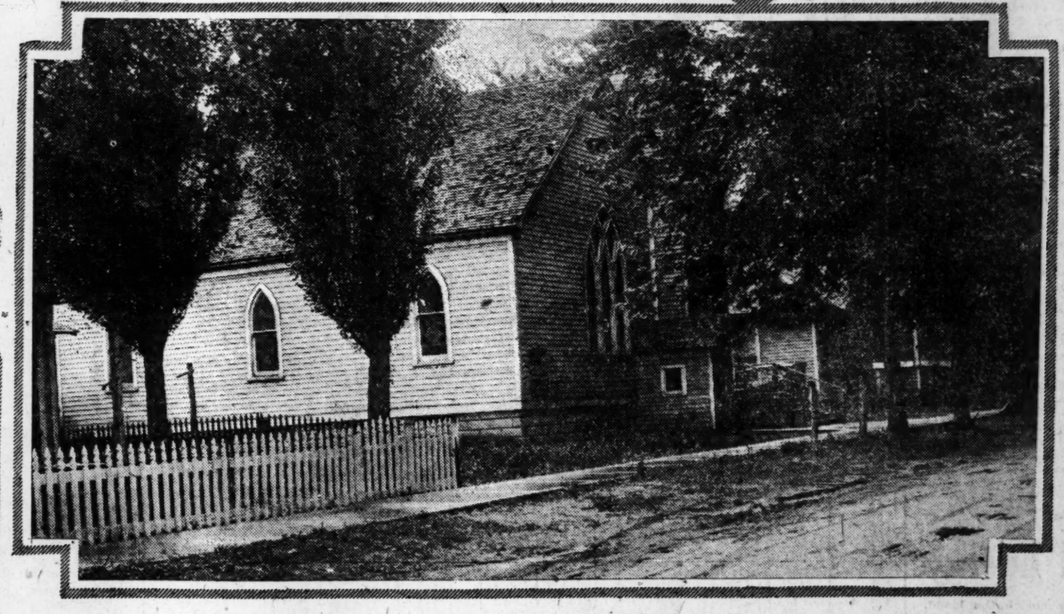
"JOHN JONES."

This Is How Johnny Went Away

One of the things that East Alton liked best about Johnny Jones was his devotion to his "dear girlies," Esther Mae, 13 years old, and Naomi, 11, motherless for three years. He went home to them then, and told them he was going to take them for a visit to their cousins in Kansas City. They were overjoyed at that and in no time at all they were ready to start. Johnny tucked them into the car and drove away from his home and down past the store and on toward St. Louis, looking back a few times at the lights of East Alton, where his life's work had failed, and then turned heavily to the long road ahead to the land of No-place-to-go.

At Venice he abandoned the car and took the girls and boarded a car for St. Louis and from here he took them to Kansas City and placed them in the care of relatives and paused there to think what his next step should be.

Jones and his two motherless little daughters, Esther and Naomi, to whom he is devoted, photographed in his grocery, which is now in the hands of Chief of Police Hank Feldwisch.



The East Alton Baptist Church where Deacon Jones serves regularly as Sunday school superintendent and often as substitute preacher. For 23 years he has been a pillar of the institution and it has been his only extravagance.

Next morning Johnny Jones' store was not open. Housewives who came early to buy wondered at that and came back later, but it still was closed. Nobody knew what to make of it until Hank Feldwisch, awaking at noon after night duty, found the letter and the key.

The news flew then, and before nightfall everybody in East Alton knew that Johnny Jones had gone away and that he had gone because of a supposed shortage in his building association accounts.

Now, speaking generally, there is no surer way to get in bad with the 1500 people of a town of that size than by monkeying with the funds of the local building and loan association, because it has more stockholders than any other small town institution, but East Alton did not flame with indignation when the word went around that Johnny Jones was short and had fled.

East Alton missed Johnny Jones, and mourned for him. What it could not understand was why he had gone away when, if he had made his troubles known, there would have been plenty to help him. As for the building association matter, there must be some mistake there. The idea of Johnny Jones taking anything that didn't belong to him!

Town Stood Faithfully by Him

The fact was East Alton did not see how it was going to get along without Johnny Jones. The muddled affairs of the building association were likely to remain muddled, with him away. The Board of Education was without a head. The Baptist Church was shy a deacon and treasurer and the Baptist Sunday school had no superintendent, the Johnny Jones grocery and meat business was tottering, men with notes they wanted indorsed were in a panic, everybody missed the round eyes and ruddy face and cheery smile of Johnny Jones.

The newspapers of the Alton sector were full of it. "Come you back, you Johnny Jones," was the message that they bore.

Albert Jones suspected that his brother, on his way to the land of No-place-to-go would stop a spell at Kansas City and thither went letters and newspapers, all calling to Johnny Jones to come back. Prof. W. I. Wilson, Superintendent of the East Alton schools, was one who wrote. Uncertain whether the letter would overtake Jones, he yet put into it all the urgency of which he was capable.

"If you don't come back, I'll come and get you," he wrote, with affectionate insistence.

Johnny Jones had had time to think, and his thinking, stimulated by the news that came from East Alton, was to the general effect that he had made a mistake. Heartened by the confidence which every breeze from East Alton brought to him, he turned back toward the home town he had not expected to see again.

It was late when he reached East Alton. He was unnoticed as he hurried through the streets. He wanted to talk with Prof. Wilson and other friends before he resumed his place in the community. But next morning "Johnny Jones is back" was in everyone's speech, and East Alton resumed its regular order of business.

JOHNNY JONES IS BACK AND EAST ALTON SMILES AGAIN

The officers of the building and loan association had felt it incumbent upon them, while Jones was away to obtain an attachment on his merchandise and other property, which had the effect of closing the store, but the creditors got together and placed Hank Feldwisch in charge and the matter of making collections was well under way. Jones lent a hand at this and gave his help wherever it was needed, more anxious than any creditor that all his debts be paid. And he is asking that a re-audit of his building association books be made, confident that it will disclose the mistakes in bookkeeping which he has made and clear his name and enable him to start over and build better.

Creditors and Debtors Flock to Help Him.

He was behind the counter yesterday, helping Hank turn away the people who came wanting to buy. All who came had words of encouragement. Men who had credited him told him his credit was as good as ever. Many came to pay what they owed. One was a woman who was sure she owed Johnny $15. He had no recollection of it and if she did the bill had been lost, but that didn't matter, she wanted to pay it, and he accepted it and thanked her and she went away, proud that she had done her bit toward the rehabilitation of Johnny Jones.

And at the end of the day Johnny and Hank got their heads together and counted up what the collection had been to date and Johnny called up the representative of the creditors and told him, with a ring of pride in his voice, there was more than $1200 in the bank which he could get any time that he called for it.

It was a coincidence that the first Sunday after Jones' return was baccalaureate Sunday at Shurtleff College. The Rev. William MacIntosh, pastor of the East Alton Baptist Church, was a member of the graduating class. He wanted to attend the baccalaureate services Sunday morning. The coincidence gave him a chance to show his confidence in Johnny Jones.

He went to see Jones. "I want you to preach for me next Sunday morning," he said.

Jones at first demurred. Would it not be better, he suggested, to wait until the affair of the building association had been straightened out. But the preacher insisted and Jones consented.

Eye Hath Not Seen, Ear Hath Not Heard.

So, Sunday morning, Jones was in his place at the head of the Sunday school. The attendance was larger than it had been during his absence. And it touched him when children came and spoke to him and said they were glad he had come back and when would Esther and Naomi be back?

No announcement had been made as to who would preach Sunday morning. As the church began to fill, after the dismissal of Sunday school, Johnny Jones quietly entered and took his place in the pulpit. The congregation showed no surprise. Some came and shook hands with him. All turned friendly faces toward him. He gave out the hymn and choir and congregation rose and sang "Love Lifted Me."

Johnny Jones gave out his text: "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things in store for them that love God."

He preached his sermon, forbearing allusion to his own troubles, lest his feelings escape restraint, and when it was over they all shook hands with him and gave him their good will and good wishes.

After the service a telegram was handed to him. His daughters, left in Kansas City when he returned, would arrive that night. He hurried to St. Louis, hours ahead of time, to meet them, and take them back to East Alton. They are with him now and it is for their sakes, more than his own, that Johnny Jones will "come back."

AMUNDSEN'S FLIGHT ACROSS NORTH POLE TO FAME — OR DEATH

the first human being at the South Pole and by partisans exploration of the great Northwest passage Amundsen is not the man to be captured at 54 by any foolhardy whim or schoolboy craving for public mention. If any adventurer may be said to know his ground, surely that man is Amundsen, and his confidence, now, on the eve of his flight, seems to contrast strikingly with the forebodings of other explorers concerning his chances of success.

Gaunt, white-haired and rugged, he is answering again the call of the frozen wastes, yielding to the fascination they always have exercised over his Viking spirit. It was largely the same lure that led him on his memorable dash to the South Pole ahead of Scott in 1911, and that spurred him on to negotiate the Northeast Passage and the Northwest Passage years earlier—love of polar conquest. No monetary reward can come from his endeavors and, now that pole hunting has lost much of its old-time popular appeal, not much fame. The best result that he can hope for is a few medals that soon will be forgotten, a few sundry bits of scientific knowledge heretofore denied to men and—personal satisfaction and pride of achievement.

On the wall of the New York office of Henry Woodhouse, who helped Amundsen get the equipment for his present journey is a map of the Arctic basin. Around the borders of it may be seen the heavy black lines that the explorer himself drew there to trace the course upon which his own wanderings have led him during the last 25 years in the Arctic regions. On one side is the long sweep indicating the trail he followed in his discovery of the Northeast Passage. Below appears the winding course of his voyage through the Northwest Passage, where no man had ever sailed before. Stretching across the center of the map from Bering Strait is the line representing roughly his present venture and in the middle of it a huge question mark which is his own answer to the questions that now arise as he is about to depart on his perilous adventure.

What is the nature of the earth's surface in the mysterious region? Is it land, a vast unexplored continent such as Amundsen believes is there, or is it only water and more ice? Has it gold like Alaska or iron like the rugged hills of Spitzbergen or nothing? Will the explorer, after 20 years of defiance, be able again to flout his challenge to the vengeful Arctic and escape, or will it swallow him up as it has swallowed up others and as the Antarctic swallowed up the valiant Scott? Will his plane carry him over the 1200 miles of ice to Spitzbergen or will some exploring party find his frozen body, like Scott's, and his letters telling how he died? There is a multitude of possibilities covered by the Amundsen question mark.

Scott's gallant struggle with the trail long after he knew his death was certain and his touching farewell letter written with a dying hand will always remain an epic among the tragedies of earth's frozen spaces. There are, perhaps, few events in history to be compared, for grandeur and pathos, with that last closing scene in the wilderness of snow. Thinking only of giving comfort and consolation to others in their sorrow, he wrote and wrote until the blizzard, raging at 40 below zero, overwhelmed him and he expired beside the bodies of his comrades. The memory of his death is vivid now that the man who won in the fight where Scott lost may soon confront again the perils that cost the gallant Englishman his life.

The voyage on which Scott met disaster was his second into the Antarctic undertaken purely for the advancement of scientific knowledge. The first had as its aim the exploration of the Antarctic continent and the great Southern Mountains. On the second it was the purpose of the party to study the South Polar ice cap and, if possible, reach the pole itself ahead of the Norwegian party, headed by Amundsen. Starting from New Zealand late in November, 1911, Scott and his party spent the next 12 months cruising through the ice-

Like a Girl at 40--- Full of Life and Energy

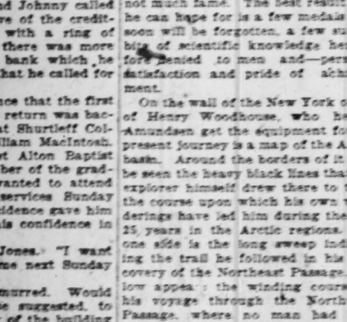
How magic-like power in Arium quickly helps enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves, and put ambition into the veins of sick, anaemic, run-down men and women—prescribed by leading physicians and hospitals everywhere.

"If you are haggard and aging before your time, if your health and strength are slowly being undermined, and you are a generally nervous, weakened, run-down condition, the chances are that you are unknowingly the victim of anaemia—lack of red corpuscles in the blood," said a well-known New York doctor, in commenting on the successful use of ARIUM in his own practice. "These red corpuscles are the blood's life, and if they gradually disappear your energy, strength and ambition disappear at the same rate, and you lay yourself open to all kinds of ailments and disease. Yet, once the body is supplied with the marvelous, life-giving element in ARIUM, a most remarkable change quickly takes place—the blood is enriched by thousands of red blood corpuscles, new strength is put into the nerves, ambition into the veins and much of your activity is restored.

"From my own experience in thousands of cases I have seen ARIUM increase the strength and endurance of delicate folks in only a few weeks' time, even after treatments containing drugs had failed to do them any lasting good.

So definite is the action of ARIUM that it goes right to work the moment it enters the body and sets up healthy functioning of the blood, organs and glands almost immediately. You often begin to feel this amazing revitalizing effect on your system within only 24 hours' time, yet it is so harmless that even a child may take it with perfect safety. If you long for the return of youthful strength and vitality, freedom from pains, aches and ailments—if you want the lines and marks of age to be smoothed out so that your face regains the firm flesh and contour of earlier years—if you want to feel your body to vibrate with new strength and ambition, then you owe it to yourself to get a box of ARIUM from your druggist today—start its use at once and if you are not amazed and overjoyed at what happens in your own case, your money will be promptly refunded.

Note: There are no drugs in ARIUM, and success is guaranteed so you run no risk whatever. Your local druggists now have ARIUM on hand.



BE YOUNG—NOT OLD— AT 40

This illustration shows how weak, haggard and run-down a woman may look and feel when her blood is pale, thin and watery, and lacks the power to fight off disease and signs of old age.	Illustration shows the same woman once her blood has become rich and red through the revitalising power of ARIUM. With rosy cheeks, bright eyes, steady nerves, her whole body tingling with new found energy and vitality, she easily looks like a girl of 20.

filled water of the Antarctic. Then the commander, with a small group of his officers, left the remainder of the expedition for a final dash to the pole. With Capt. Lawrence Oates, Lieut. Henry Bowers, Edward A. Wilson, chief of his scientific staff, and Petty Officer Edgar Evans, he reached the goal on Jan. 18, 1912, only to find the flag of Norway waving above the tent Amundsen had left to mark his triumph. The Norwegian had arrived nearly a month earlier.

That defeat in itself was enough to dishearten valiant men, but Scott and his party, making the best of the fact that they had made the longest march on record and had been the first Englishmen to set foot on the spot, planted the Union Jack and turned back on their long return march to the ship.

Caught in the Blizzard.

For weeks they struggled over snow and glaciers, sometimes 12 miles a day, sometimes only one or two, until the middle of March found them off the South Polar plateau and in the lowland region, with prospects of milder climate and open trails. Then disaster overtook them. Evans and Oates died from hardship. Finally the three survivors, caught in a sweeping blizzard only 11 miles from the supply depot that would have saved their lives, found travel impossible. For days the storm raged and they huddled in a little "pup" tent, without food or fuel. One by one they passed out. Scott was the last. When he saw that all was lost, his letters show, his last concern was for the welfare of his wife and son and his only fear was that his superiors would regret having put him in charge of the expedition.

Following are the last two entries in his diary which he had kept carefully throughout the trip and which is published in full in "Scott's Last Expedition." (Dodd, Mead & Co.):

Thursday, March 22 and 23. Blizzard bad as ever—Wilson and Bowers unable to start—tomorrow last chance—no fuel and only one or two of food left—must be near the end. Have decided that it shall be natural—we shall march for the depot with or without our effects and die in our tracks.

21st we have had a continuous gale from W. S. W. and S. W. We had fuel to make two cups of tea and bare food on the 20th. Every day we have been ready to start for our depot 11 miles away, but outside the door of the tent it remains a scene of whirling drift. I do not think we can hope for better things now. We shall stick it out to the end, but we are getting weaker, of course, and the end cannot be far. It seems a pity, but I do not think I can write more. R. SCOTT.

Eight months later they were found in the tent where they made their last stand. Wilson and Bowers lay in the attitude of sleep, their sleeping bags closed over their heads as they would naturally close them. Scott had thrown back the flaps of his sleeping bag and opened his coat. The little wallet containing the three note books was under his shoulders and his arm was flung across Wilson.

With the diaries were found the letters to relatives and various acquaintances. Extracts from the farewell message to his wife follow:

"I Go to Death Not Afraid."

The Great God has called me and I feel it will add a fearful blow to the heavy ones that have fallen on you in life. But take comfort in that I die at peace with the world and myself—not afraid.

Indeed, it has been most singularly unfortunate, for the risks I have taken never seemed excessive.

* * * I want to tell you that we have missed getting through by a narrow margin which was justifiably within the risk of such a journey. * * * After all, we have given our lives for our country—we have actually made the longest march on record, and we have been the first Englishmen at the South Pole.

* * * I shall not have suffered any pain, but leave the world fresh from harness and full of good health and vigor. * * * We have decided not to kill ourselves, but to fight to the last for that depot, but in the fighting there is a painless end.

Make the boy interested in natural history if you can; it is better than games; they encourage it at some schools. I know you will keep him in the open air. Above all he must guard and you must guard him against indolence.

A Baby Carriage and Stroller Combined

The New Lloydalet

Only a mother, who has the daily handling of a baby carriage, can fully appreciate this unusual new baby conveyance. It combines Baby's first and second carriage in one; is smaller and lighter than any other baby carriage; yet almost as roomy as a large carriage.

Naturally, it is easily handled; and it serves perfectly as a stroller when Baby has outgrown a baby carriage. Because of the small space it occupies, apartment dwellers find it invaluable.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

Ask your dealer to show you Lloydalets.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand. Don't accept a substitute. Find the Lloyd name-plate on the seat.

AMUNDSEN'S FLIGHT ACROSS NORTH POLE TO FAME — OR DEATH

Make him strenuous man. I had to force myself into being strenuous as you know—had always an inclination to be idle.

There is a piece of the Union Jack I put at the South Pole in my private kit bag, together with Amundsen's black flag and other trifles. Send a small piece of the Union Jack to the King and a small piece to Queen Alexandra.

What lots and lots I could tell you of this journey. How much better it has been than lounging in too great comfort at home.

Tell Sir Clements I thought much of him and never regretted him putting me in command of the Discovery.

Fighting It Out to the End.

Among other letters were missives to Sir James Barrie and Sir James Speyer.

To Sir J. M. Barrie.

My Dear Barrie:

We are pegging out in a very comfortless spot. Hoping this may be found and sent to you. I write a word of farewell. * * * More practically I want you to help my widow and my boy—your godson. We are showing that Englishmen can still die with a bold spirit, fighting it out to the end. It will be known that we have accomplished our object in reaching the Pole, and that we have done everything possible, even to sacrificing ourselves in order to save our sick companions. I think this makes an example to Englishmen of the future, and that the country ought to help those who are left behind to mourn us. I leave my poor girl and your godson. Wilson leaves a widow, and Edgar Evans also a widow in humble circumstances. Do what you can to get their claims recognized. Goodbye. I am not at all afraid of the end, but sad to miss many a humble pleasure which I had planned for the future on our long marches. I may not have proved a great explorer, but we have done the greatest march on record and come very near to a great success. Goodbye, my dear friend.

Yours ever,
R. SCOTT.

As a dying man, my dear friend, be good to my wife and child. Give the boy a chance in life if the state won't do it. He ought to have good stuff in him. * * * I never met a man in my life whom I admired and loved more than you, but I never could show you how much your friendship meant to me, for you had so much to give and I nothing.

"We Will Die Like Gentlemen."

To the Right Hon. Sir Edgar Speyer, Bart.

My Dear Sir Edgar:

I hope this may reach you. I fear we must go and that it leaves the expedition in a bad muddle. But we have been to the pole and we will die like gentlemen. I regret only for the women we have left behind.

I thank you a thousand times for your help and support and your generous kindness. If this diary is found it will show how we stuck by dying companions and fought the thing well out to the end. I think this will show that the spirit of pluck and power to endure has not passed out of our race * * *

Wilson, the best fellow that ever stepped, has sacrificed himself again and again to the sick men of the party * * *

I write to many friends hoping the letters will reach them sometime after we are found next year.

We very nearly came through, and it's a pity to have missed it. But lately I have felt that we have overshot our mark. No one is to blame and I hope no attempt will be made to suggest that we lacked support.

Goodbye to you and your dear, kind wife.

Yours ever sincerely,
R. SCOTT.

Such was the fate of the gallant Scott. The memory of it is hardly a cheerful thought for Amundsen to carry with him into the wilds at the opposite end of the globe.

Nobody knows, perhaps, how long the Norwegian has entertained the plan which he is attempting to carry out in the present expedition. For a long time he has held the theory that a ship locked in the ice would drift slowly across the polar basin, emerging several years later on the opposite side. Originally the voyage was intended only to accomplish this purpose. Then the airplane project was combined with the venture.

AMUNDSEN'S FLIGHT ACROSS NORTH POLE TO FAME — OR DEATH

The Maud, especially built with a rounded hull to escape the clutch of the ice packs, first sailed for the Arctic from Tromsoe with a crew of eight men on June 28, 1918, and by September had passed Dixson Island on her way to Spitzbergen. For a year and a half no further word was heard of her; then in April, 1920, it was learned that Amundsen had arrived at Anadir, a trading post on the Bering Sea in Eastern Siberia. Again there was a long silence until Amundsen himself walked ashore in Seattle in July, 1921, to tell of his 2000-mile journey and trying experiences.

The Maud had been held a year in the ice at Cape Chelyuskin on the Siberian coast and again at the mouth of the Kolima River, reaching Nome in the spring of the following year. He had started out again in August of 1920, but the Maud smashed her propeller and idled the winter through at Cape Serdze on the Siberian coast. Leaving the ship in charge of a few men he had gone back across the ice and was picked up by a Norwegian schooner that took him and his companions to Nome. The Maud was then brought down to Seattle and repaired while Amundsen repaired his finances and stocked the vessel with a new store of provisions and reinforced his equipment with additional instruments for scientific observations.

Food Supply for Seven Years.

In 1922 he set out again with nine men and his improved equipment, which included the Curtiss Oriole plane presented to him by the Curtiss company. On board he took food enough to last the party seven years and lumber to construct stables for the dogs when the vessel should find a permanent location in the ice drift.

With midsummer came a farewell wireless message from the Maud, stating that she was on her final dash for the Arctics. But there was to be further delay. On July 30 last, the radio from Nome told that Amundsen had been compelled again to bow to the difficulties the North had reared in his way, but the delay meant only another year, and that was not enough to discourage the sturdy Norseman. He transferred to a schooner, the Holmes, and went back to Seattle, leaving the Maud with only four men aboard her, to drift on into another Arctic night.

At last, with the coming of summer again, he is back on the job, at Wainwright with his metal-enclosed plane, ready to begin the flight that will either carry him to Spitzbergen or into eternity.

May Review the Ghostly Polar Fleet.

One of the objects—and a unique one—Amundsen's men will have in mind as they drift slowly across the wide expanse of icy wilderness will be the search for signs of the mysterious "phantom fleet" which, Eskimos declare, drifts year in and year out around the polar basin. Where these strange vessels came from and whither they are bound nobody can tell. Their very existence has always been questioned by white men, but the natives have no doubts.

Wanderers who have escaped from the ice pack after being carried far into the unknown waters have returned with eerie stories of ghostly ships, frozen in the ice, white with frost and manned by frozen crews.

Old-time explorers have always placed a certain amount of credence in the reports, citing the fact that vessels have strangely disappeared in the polar basin since the beginning of Arctic exploration. The devouring ice pack of 1876 carried off 30 whaling ships from the waters north of the American Continent, and they were never seen again. Most of the men escaped from the ice floes and reached Point Barrow, but some 70, it is said, refused to desert the ships and now go drifting on and on.

The Eskimos regard those ghostly vessels with a superstitious dread, and they fear for the fate of the Maud. When the long Arctic night comes again, they say, and "the everlasting moons" appear, Amundsen's ship will join the "phantom fleet."

BAD COMPLEXIONS ARE POPULARITY RUINERS

"Clear the Skin, Regain That Girly Appearance and Most Other Faults Are Overlooked," Say Authorities on Beauty.

The motion picture screen has done more than any other thing to prove that with a beautiful complexion you can overcome the handicaps of no education, few advantages, poor circumstances and a thin, unattractive form.

If you could see and talk with a great many of the girls and women of the screen you would find that their charm is in their face and that they rarely ever have that inherent aristocracy which their appearance on the screen impresses you with.

This shows that you can make the same impression on the people who pass you as you walk along among the crowds, or those you come in contact with every day. If you will just let the thousands of girls and women who use the Black and White Beauty Creations be your guide.

If these women were not satisfied with Black and White Cleansing and Peroxide Cream, Face Powder, Soap and many other complexion necessities now sold under the Black and White label, the tremendous sale of more than eight million packages a year would not be possible. Anything can be sold once, but unless it really brings results that thing will not be bought a second time.

U. S. Planes to Map Alaska

WASHINGTON, (Special) — Two United States Navy seaplanes this summer will make an extensive survey from the air of Alaska Territory to gather data on air ports, air bases and the coast line for aviation projects. Rear Admiral Charles will be in charge of the work, and the planes will base on the U. S. S. Cuyama while in Alaskian waters. It is expected that valuable information will be obtained in this manner, also for conservation and development projects in territory that is otherwise almost inaccessible.

Princeton Has Real Tiger.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Princeton, N. J. — A husky tiger cub has arrived at Princeton University, ready to take up his duties as mascot for future football teams. A professional caretaker will look after him until the Athletic Association decides whether to keep him. The tiger was presented to the Athletic Association by John F. Howard of Haverhill, Mass., father of Albert F. Howard, guard on last year's championship eleven. He bought the cub, which is seven months old and weighs about 100 pounds, in India.

100 STATE HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS SOUGHT FOR NURSE TRAINING

Miss Helen Martin to Make Personal Tour to Interest Young Women in Work

Miss Helen Martin, a graduate nurse and lecturer for the St. Louis City Hospital School of Nursing, will visit twelve Missouri towns the latter part of June with the view of obtaining 100 young girl high school graduates to prepare as trained nurses, especially in rural welfare work.

In the rural work, young women entering the serivec wil be aided by the American Red Cross. The City Hospital Schol provides a home for student nurses under the supervision of a house mother, with recreational and entertainment features. Student nurses are given free tuition and pay. Pay for private nurses ranges from $6 to $8 a day. Graduate nurses entering the public welfare work begin at $100 a month.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

SUMMER HINTS FOR RADIO ENTHUSIASTS

Hints for Those Who Take Their Sets Along During Vacation.

BY STUART C. MAHANAY,
Radio Staff, Post-Dispatch.

No ardent radio enthusiast will want to pack up his set while he leaves the city for the summer vacation. Undoubtedly, the summer months offer equally as many, if not more, varied opportunities for the full enjoyment of listening-in, as do the winter months.

While it is true, that the same long distances cannot be covered in summertime as during the cold months of the year, yet nothing can compare with the pleasure a radio set can add to a campfire, or to gliding smoothly along in a canoe or boat, listening to summer opera or a concert, clear, sharp, and clean cut.

In anticipation of the demand for portable sets, and with the advent of vacuum tubes which efficiently operate with one or more dry cells, a number of manufacturers have placed on the market, sets which are not only compactness itself, but which compare favorably with more elaborate apparatus. No longer need the outdoor enthusiast be isolated from the world at large for weeks at a time, while pursuing his favorite outdoor sport or hobby, if he takes along a portable radio set.

The first question to arise is, what kind of a set is recommended? This depends entirely upon the use to which it is to be put. The automobilist on tour will obviously need a different set from the farmer who caters to summer boarders. Likewise, the permanently installed set in a motorboat will differ from the set to be moved about from the canoe to the camp, or seashore home.

Complete sets may now be purchased which require but a few moments to set into operation, or the ingenious radio fan may purchase the necessary parts and assemble a set which will give equally as great satisfaction as the complete set purchased outright. The saving in cost will approximate one-third.

If permanently installed in the mountain home or lodge where a semi-permanent aerial may be erected, the regenerative set which brought pleasure during the winter may be removed and set up the same as in the city home. Instead of the storage battery, dry cells may be employed if vacuum tubes such as the UV-199, UV-201A, WD-11 or WD-12 type are substituted for those of the six-volt type. Many enthusiasts believe the UV-199 and UV-201A tubes to be more efficient as amplifiers than as detectors, where volume is desired.

If intense amplification is wanted, such as for dancing, the type of loud-speaker requiring an external 6-volt battery should be provided, but the only solution to the charging problem in this case, would be to take the battery to the nearest town to be recharged.

Some suggestions are here offered for the benefit of those who take their sets to camp or summer home in anticipation unforseen of difficulties which may arise in connection with erecting the antenna, and effect good ground connections.

The simplest and undoubtedly the best aerial is one single wire stretched between two trees, or a tree and the cabin. The aerial and lead-in should be between 90 and 125 feet in length, and may be composed of seven strands of No. 22 copper wire, either bare or insulated. A temporary antenna is very apt to come into contact with trees and bushes, and for this reason, rubber-covered wire would be preferable.

If a good "ground" connection cannot be obtained, the counterpoise may be used. In fact, results with the counterpoise and aerial are equally as good as with aerial and ground, the only objection being that more wire is required, and hence more must be taken along. Also the two extra insulators.

The general scheme followed in putting up the aerial and counterpoise or what might more properly be termed a "double aerial," is illustrated in sketches two and three. The two wires should extend at a fairly good angle to each other, and the best results will be obtained if they run in opposite directions. Each is approximately 100 feet long, and their respective terminals are connected to the "A" and "G" binding posts of the receiving set.

A hilltop is the ideal place to erect this type of aerial, and if the set is located right on the top of a fairly steep hill, 100 to 125 feet of wire may be run in each direction and excellent reception be obtained.

Figure 4 shows the method of erecting an aerial on a boat, small yacht, or canoe. The mast should extend as high as possible, as its height really determines the size of the antenna. A loading-coil or a 43-plate variable condenser may be necessary to enable the set connected in this manner, to respond to the broadcasting stations operating on long wavelengths.

The "ground" consists of a metal plate (preferably copper) attached to a wire and suspended over the gunwale of the boat or canoe. This makes an excellent "ground," and probably accounts for the good results obtainable with an installation of this kind.

A loop aerial may be used, but it is only possible when several stages of radio-frequency or a reflex set are employed. An excellent loop is one 30 inches square, with center cross pieces 42 inches long. This frame is wound with twelve turns, (about 120 feet), of bare or insulated copper wire, preferably stranded wire. Electric light extension wire will serve nicely for this purpose.

Another type of marine antenna is the trailing wire type, which works equally as well with the boat under way, or at anchor. Waterproof insulation is the secret. Any heavily insulated wire will work well for a time, but rubber covering will withstand water the longest. The free end of the wire may be insulated with sealing wax or with tape and paraffine. Rubber tape is decidedly preferable, and it can be permanently fixed by vulcanizing or applying "cold patches" of the kind used in making emergency inner tube repairs.

The trailing antenna used in this way may act as a loop similar to that of a submarine, but it has more of the nature of a counterpoise. A practical length is 75 feet. Greater length will bring in slightly stronger signals, but tuning will be more difficult, and if long wave broadcasting stations cannot be heard, twenty-five additional feet may correct the trouble, however, if a splice is made, the joint must be made waterproof.

Again the "ground" for this installation may consist of a square foot of metal surface in contact with the water, or on power boats, the "ground" connection may be made to the engine or some convenient metal part of the boat which is in contact with the propeller. A strip of copper, two or three inches wide running along the keel would make a perfect "ground," but in most cases it might be considered an extravagance.

If the installation is set up beside a lake, the submerged type of aerial and water "ground" may be employed and fair distances covered.

On the beach the aerial may be supported by two poles from four to six feet high above the sand, and the "ground" obtained by running a wire down to the water, and attaching it to a metal plate.

The nearest perfect antenna is a wire kite string, and while it depends upon the wind for its support and is therefore not always reliable, it has been tested and found practical for marine aviators who wish to call for help when they are forced to land upon the water.

The automobile tourist has the least problems. His aerial may consist of a loop, or simply a 125-foot length of wire which may be suspended in a tree beside the road. A convenient method is to employ a reel on which this temporary antenna is wound when not in use. The frame of the car will serve as a "ground," but in this case the aerial wire should be at least between 160 and 180 feet to offset the less capacity afforded by the metal part of the car. It might be well, however, to carry a sharp-pointed iron rod which may be driven into moist earth.

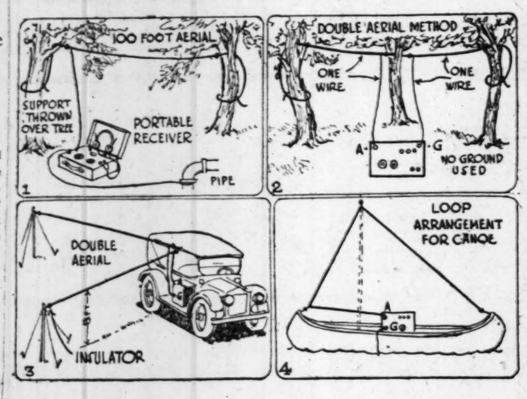
The tourist may use six-volt tubes and depend upon the battery in the car to provide the necessary current. The daytime travel will more than counteract the drain on the battery. A convenient method for making connection with the current supply is to use a plug (similar to the base of a miniature lamp) and connect it in place of the dashlight when it is desired to use the receiving set.

The final hint is to take along extra "A" and "B" batteries (especially when the smaller tubes are used), as well as spare vacuum tubes and several extra insulators. It is also well worth while to add a 43-plate variable condenser to the "spare" parts and if signals are not heard, try connecting it in series and then in parallel. One of these connections should bring results. If not, make an inspection of the aerial and ground. Often a poor connection in either of these leads is responsible for a "dead" set. Remember that every joint should be as nearly electrically perfect as it can be made, and always before joining two wires, be sure to first scrape them clean and bright.

Cause for "Squealing."

Most of the squealing heard in the set is due to overregeneration. If a tube is oscillating it is impossible to get intelligible signals over radiophone.

Suggestions For Use of the Radio Set in Summer



Many Uses May Be Found for the Self-Contained Portable Set.

AMATEUR TO OBSERVE HOW AURORA AFFECTS RADIO

Operator on MacMillan Polar Expedition to Check Phenomena and Its Relation to Wireless.

The first serious attempt to determine the effect of the Northern Lights upon radio reception and the possible relation to static, fading and other phenomena connected with broadcasting will be made next winter by D. H. Mix of Bristol, Conn., who is to accompany Captain Donald B. MacMillan to the Arctic in the employ of the American Radio Relay League.

The MacMillan party expect to make their winter quarters either at Flagler Bay near Cape Sabine or at Jones Sound. The former is located about 540 miles northeast of the Magnetic North Pole. From this point of vantage inside the circular aurora, Mix will listen for radio messages from fellow amateurs at home. He will keep a record of the intensity of reception through this peculiar natural phenomenon.

This information is to be obtained at the request of Dr. J. H. Dellinger, chief of the radio section of the Bureau of Standards. Whether the disturbances believed to be caused by the aurora can be controlled remains to be seen. In any case, study of this data may reveal the cause of electrical effects heretofore unexplained.

INCREASE IN AMATEUR LICENSES

Past Five Months Show an Increase of 1334 Stations—Ninth District Has Greatest Number.

Lest some fans believe that the reception of broadcasting is the only popular phase of the radio art, be it known that amateurs are still entering the game of "key pounding" at the rate of nearly 300 a month. Since Jan. 1 1334 amateur licenses have been granted by the Department of Commerce, and on June 5 there were 18,232 such stations in the United states.

The distribution of amateur stations by districts June 5 was as follows:

District.	Headquarters.	Total.
1	Boston	2,490
2	New York	2,629
3	Baltimore	1,994
4	Norfolk	444
5	New Orleans	941
6	San Francisco	2,173
7	Seattle	901
8.	Detroit	2,932
9	Chicago	3,729
	Total	18,232

Naval Airships Will Have Radio Compasses.

Plans for equipping the two new naval rigid airships with radio compasses so that they can navigate in darkness or in fog are under consideration. These are the great ZR ships now building. It is believed that the radio compass installations can be made satisfactorily, and that this feature will prove a valuable asset for the efficiency and safety of both personnel and material through assisting the accuracy of navigation. The location selected was adjacent to the observation platform located on top of the ship, well forward. A coil has been designed which will enable observations to be made in frequencies extending over a band of from approximately 500 to 16 kilocycles. If this installation is made satisfactorily it will be the first time a radio compass has been successfully installed upon a lighter-than-air craft.

Radio Letters From Latvia.

The Latvian Main Post and Telegraph Administration announces that radio letters to the United States may be filed at all Latvian telegraph offices. The letters will be mailed to Berlin, whence they will be transmitted by wireless to New York, and from there to the addressees by post. The letrs must contain text in English, French and German. The charges for radio letters are 35 centimes per word, plus 1 lat (equal to 1 French franc), ground fee per wire.

Be Right With Fire Insurance.

After a radio set is installed it is best to call or write the insurance company which holds the fire insurance policy on the house and tell them about the equipment. They will arrange for an inspection by the board, the usual fee for which is $1.

HOW TO GET THE BEST BROADCASTING RESULTS

Suggestions to Help Those Who Are Not Getting the Most From Their Sets.

By DR. ALFRED N. GOLDSMITH
Of the Radio Corporation of America.

There has been rapid progress in broadcasting recently. Instead of the old crowding of all stations on the two wave lengths of 360 and 400 meters, the stations are now assigned to definite wave lengths covering the wide range of wave lengths from 220 to 545 meters. This has greatly increased the possibilities of broadcast reception provided that the listener uses his receiver in such a way as to pick any desired station. Difficulty has been experienced by some in receiving the longer waves particularly. New stations have been established in certain localities thus producing very powerful signals in the receiving sets of nearby listeners and somewhat interfering with the reception of more distant stations while their local station is in operation. Then, too, a few stations have shut down or transferred thereby requiring the listeners to get their programs from more remote stations which, in turn, involves some modifications in the receiver or in the way in which it is handled. And, finally, summertime has come with its occasional diminished signal strength and "static" or electrical disturbances of distant reception. Fortunately all of the difficulties mentioned can be easily overcome to a great extent by a little care and a proper attitude.

The enjoyment obtained from radio broadcasting by the listener will be much increased if he will keep in mind and properly apply a few simple facts which are well-known to all skilled radio workers.

Summertime Reception.

While excellent radio reception is frequently possible during the summer months, yet the best long-distance records come in the winter. Signals are not quite so loud in the summer, and electrical disturbances such as lightning storms are naturally more common in the summer, and interfere occasionally with concerts, particularly those received from distant points. A reasonable attitude will help the listener here. He should remember that he cannot expect every act, in even the best vaudeville performance, to be tremendously amusing and just what he wants, nor can he expect the weather every day to be clear and pleasant. Similarly he must not expect every day to be just right for long-distance radio reception. Now and then a summer storm may interfere both with radio and picnics. The listener should become acquainted with his local stations and enjoy them during the summer, and be satisfied with the long-distance records he has made or will make in the winter. In other words, he should get the best there is in radio during all seasons, and, above all, he should be reasonable.

The Distant Listener.

If the listener lives rather far away from all radio broadcasting stations which he wants to hear, there are several things he can do. He can lengthen his aerial wires and increase their height from the ground. Both of these measures make the signals louder as a general rule. He can add an audio amplifier unless, of course, he already has this instrument. He can also increase the voltage of his amplifier "B" battery or plate battery up to 90 or even 112 volts (that is, to four or five of the usual 22½-volt units or blocks). He can use a more sensitive loud speaker, or content himself with head-set operation. He should also tune more carefully so as to get the very loudest signal which his set is capable of giving. If there is a tickler adjustment on his set, he should learn how to use it so as to get full volume of signals. And he should remember that the good results he will then get are going to be even better results in the winter.

THE NEARBY LISTENER

If the listener is very near a powerful broadcasting station, he may get excessively loud signals from that station and have difficulty in picking up other stations when the nearby station is in operation. In extreme cases it is not possible to get the distant station at all under such circumstances any more than it is possible to hear a whisper from a distance when someone else is shouting nearby. Still a good deal can be accomplished by some of the following measures which should be tried. The listener can cut down the size of his antenna or use a small indoor antenna having length of between a foot or two and say thirty feet. A few trials may be necessary to find the best length of indoor antenna in such cases. When an antenna less than 30 feet in length is used a small fixed condenser of five- ten thousandths of a microfarad (.0005 mfd.) should be connected between the aerial and ground binding posts or terminals of his set. This will permit the reception of waves of the same length as possible with an outdoor antenna. The listener should experiment until he gets the best signals and the greatest case of choice of one station or another. A little patience is required to get the desired results in some cases. It should be remembered that no one ever learned in five minutes to run an automobile skillfuly through heavy traffic. Sometimes the traffic in the ether is heavy, and it may not be easy at first to pilot the desired signals through the receiver. Paderewski took quite a little time to learn to play the piano, but it was worth while. So is time spent in mastering the capabilities of the receiving set.

The Wave Lengths Above 450 Meters

Since the longer waves have been opened to broadcasting by the Government, it is desirable to be able to receive them. It may be that the receiver on its present aerial is not capable of tuning in these longer wave lengths from about 450 meters to 545 meters which have been in use since May 15. Generally the same condenser placed between the aerial and ground binding posts or terminals, which has already been mentioned, will serve also to enable picking up the longer waves. The larger the value of the condenser, the higher the wave length which can be picked up.

There are 10 good rules for broadcast listeners:

1. Don't try to hear Australia in midsummer. Be satisfied to enjoy the nearer stations most of the time.

2. Don't be disappointed if an occasional storm interferes with your summer radio evening. There are many fine concerts coming. You can't expect to find a pearl in every oyster nor to receive a record-breaking concert every night.

3. If you want louder signals, use a longer aerial, more tubes, higher plate voltage, more sensitive loud speakers, and more careful tickler and receiver adjustment.

4. A pleasant signal filling a moderate size room should be enough to give satisfaction. It is not worth while producing signals which deafen the neighbors. It is wasteful to insist on tremendous signals which are generally less pleasant than moderate signals.

5. If your local station comes in too loudly and drowns others out, a smaller aerial will help in tuning it out, with a smaller condenser connected between aerial and ground. And if all measures to get rid of the local station fail, why not enjoy his concerts? He is working hard for you and it is nobody's fault that you are so close to him that you are bound to hear him. Broadcast stations have to be closer to some people than others.

6. For the new longer waves above 450 meters, use a condenser connected between the aerial and ground terminals of your set.

7. A little patience in learning to handle your receiver yields rich returns in satisfaction from fine signals. Remember that "Rome wasn't built in a day" and keep on getting more and more familiar with your set and how it works.

8. It is a good idea to read the radio column of a newspaper or a good radio magazine or two. It helps you to know how your set works and keeps you up-to-date in radio. Information of this sort is an aid in getting the concerts loud and clear.

9. Ask your radio dealer for advice; he can probably tell you what you want to know and will be glad to do so. The manufacturer of your set is also willing to help you get the desired results from its use.

10. Do not throw away the direction sheets or booklet that came with your set and with the tubes. Read all such material carefully now and then. If you have lost the direction sheets, write to the dealer or manufacturer for another. The direction sheets answer most of the questions which have been puzzling you and preventing you from getting the best out of your set.

SPECIAL AMATEUR LICENSES

Future Special Licenses to Be Issued by Each District Radio Supervisor.

No new special amateur licenses have been issued recently. It has been decided by the Department of Commerce that hereafter District Radio Supervisors will issue them instead of the Washington office.

The wave lengths assigned to special amateurs are between 150 and 220 meters for continuous wave telegraph. Regular amateurs operate on wave lengths between 150 and 200 meters.

Saturday, June 23rd

8:00 to 8:45 P. M.—Organ recital, orchestral concert and specialties at Missouri Theater.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Q. (1) Is it true that a Reinartz circuit is difficult to tune? (2) Is a vernier necessary on the 11-plate condenser in the Reinartz set? (3) Will a "peanut" tube operate the above mentioned circuit?
P. W.

A. (1) Any set which is highly selective requires more care and patience in tuning than the kind which tunes broadly and easily. (2) The set will function without it, but much finer tuning may be obtained with its use. (3) Yes

Q. Can an aerial be too long for good results?
O. M.

A. An ideal aerial for broadcast reception is a single wire 90 feet long connected by a lead-in approximately 35 to 40 feet in length.

Q. Is a two-wire aerial 30 feet high and 52 feet long satisfactory for receiving local broadcasting?
R. B.

A. This will depend upon the receiving apparatus used. It would be advisable, however, to increase its length approximately 50 feet.

Q. (1) What is the pay of a radio operator on shipboard? (2) Where can I get a book that would help me to qualify for an amateur license?
R. P.

A. (1) The pay is dependent upon the experience and ability of the operator, as well of the class of work required, and ranges from $60 per month upward. (2) Consult the radio dealers whose advertisements appear on this page, for books on the theory and principle of radio.

Q. (1) Could a UV-200 tube be used instead of a UV-199 in the portable set described in the Post-Dispatch of June 3? (2) Would two variable condensers be necessary if an outdoor antenna is used? (3) Can the "A" and "B" batteries be outside of the cabinet?
C. W. B.

A. (1) Yes, but the UV-200 tube requires a 6-volt storage battery for satisfactory operation. (2) No. (3) Yes.

Q. Am using a 4000 meter loose-coupler in a single tube regenerative set. Will two loading coils wound with 1500 turns of No. 22 wire, on a four-inch tube enable the set to respond to signals transmitted on 20,000 meter wave length?
L. E. B.

A. Not with any degree of efficiency. The only practical way to work on 20,000 meters is to use honey comb coils, plugging in the correct coil for the desired wavelength.

Q. I have a vario-coupler, 43-plate variable condenser and crystal detector. Local broadcasting signals are not as loud as they should be. The variable condenser is shunted across the rotor of the vario-coupler; is that correct? (2) Would the addition of a vernier attachment to the variable condenser be of any help in the tuning? (3) What kind of a vacuum tube should be used for the addition of one stage of audio-frequency amplification?
R. D. W.

A. (1) You would probably get much better results by connecting the variable condenser across the aerial and ground terminals of the vario-coupler. (2) No. (3). Any of the three-element amplifier tubes will work satisfactorily.

Q. I am using a 23-plate variable condenser in my receiving set. Will a 43-plate give more satisfaction?
H. H.

A. With no other details than you have given, it is impossible to advise.

Q. I am using a 6-volt storage battery on my receiving set. Will it be necessary to change rheostats in order to use WD-12 tubes?
J. T. B.

A. No. The present rheostats you are using will work with the 1¼-volt battery which is necessary with "peanut" tubes.

Q. (1) Would a 43-plate variable condensed be required using an outdoor antenna 35 feet at the highest point, and sloping downward at the end where the lead-in is connected? (2) Does the duo-reflex set require a "ground" for operation? (3) What is the resistance of the Bradleystat? (4) Is a vernier condenser connected in series or parallel with the larger condenser? (5) When an outdoor aerial is used how is the jack for a loop aerial disposed of?
J. W.

A. (1) You do not give the length of the aerial, but the probability is, that it would. (2) Not for local reception. (3) The original type having two connections will carry one-half to one ampere. The new type, which has just been placed on the market, having three connections, is adaptable for all tubes, on any voltage up to six. (4) In parallel. (5) The usual practice is to use a plug, the terminals of which are connected to the secondary of the vario-coupler.

Q. Please tell me what connections I can make on a crystal set to get long distance? (2) What will be necessary to put a loud-speaker on a crystal set?
H. G.

A. (1) Long-distance reception in the summertime with a crystal detector is practically impossible. (2) Two stages of audio-frequency amplification.

Q. Which is the best as a detector, the WD-12, or the UV-199? (2) Which tube has the longer life? (3) Which consumes the less "A" battery current?
W. B.

A. (1) Many enthusiasts prefer the WD-12 as a detector and the UV-199 as an amplifier. (2) The life of any tube is largely dependent upon the care it receives. Burning the filament more brightly than necessary shortens the life of any tube. (3) The UV-199.

Q. What size of wire is recommended for the ground lead? I. C.

A. For the lead to the receiving set, seven strands of No. 22 stranded copper will serve very well.

Q. What size of loop is best for a set using the "Erla" circuit?
L. M.

A. The most satisfactory loop aerial measures approximately 30 inches square with center cross-pieces 42 inches long. Twelve turns (about 120 feet) of bare or insulated stranded copper wire is wound on the frame, spaced one-half inch apart.

AUSTRALIA HEARS AMERICAN AMATEURS

Signals Heard Clearly and Distinctly in Test Conducted by West Coast Amateurs.

The first successful [illegible] the Pacific Ocean on schedule has been demonstrated according to reports that American amateur signals have been heard in Australia.

This news in the form of a telegram from H. K. Love of the Wireless Institute of Australia, set off a flurry of excitement among amateurs in California and other states many of whom made new records in the transatlantic tests last year.

Reception of amateur signals has been reported from time to time by operators on ships off the coast of Australia and China, one of these vessels having been at an American Chinese port. Never until now, however, has there been any organized effort to transmit signals across the Pacific Ocean on a definitely arranged schedule.

The tests were made at the suggestion of Australian amateurs, who, on hearing of American DX records, desired to demonstrate that they were able to receive signals from the members of the American Radio Relay League. America was to call Australia to listen.

Although no long-distance records were broken, it is significant that American signals were heard clearly and consistently and complete information from the receiving end will show that some amateurs east of the Rockies may have got their signals over unawares.

The arrangements for the tests by American amateurs was in charge of a special committee headed by J. Portis of the Long Beach Radio Club, and it was largely through their efforts that Australia has now entered the "amateur radio long distance nations."

Safety First.

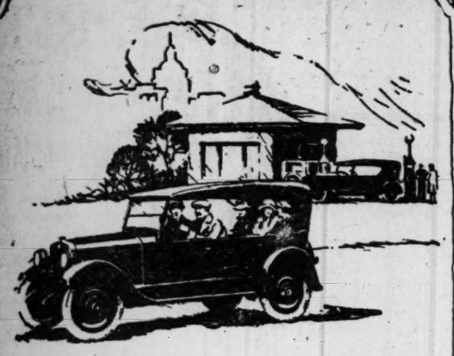
To eliminate all fire hazard when constructing outdoor aerials, be sure that the wires do not cross over or under any high tension lines, such as railway feeders, trolley wires, etc. Location must also be such that in case either the lead-in or aerial is wrecked by wind or storm no contact between them should be possible.

Radio and Its Advancement.

The Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., is a veritable house for all kinds of information about radio progress, publishing technical and scientific papers, and issuing bulletins describing the construction and operation of all types of simple receiving sets that can be made in the home. Constant research is carried on by experts of the bureaus.

Quality Brings Results.

In buying sockets, rheostats, condensers and telephone receivers, buy the best that can be afforded for the best possible results are desired.



Reduce your "weight tax"

When other cars pull up at the oil station, watch the Columbia Six whirl by!

For Columbia has combined sturdiness with light weight as few other motor car builders have been able to do—and light weight, more than any other one thing, determines gas, oil and tire economy as well as the life of a car's mechanism.

The owner of an unnecessarily heavy car pays a "weight tax" for every mile of driving—an "excess tax" in gas, oil and tires from which Columbia Six owners are conspicuously free. This economy is further emphasized by Columbia prices—the first and the only specialized Six to sell for less than $1000.

Get the facts about Columbia light weight, economy and the specialized construction that so definitely guarantees dependability. We have them for you any time you can stop in. Come soon.

SEASONABLE WEATHER STIMULATES CAR SALES

NEW YORK, June 16—Automotive Industries said this week:

"More seasonable weather is acting as a stimulus to sales of automobiles in sections of the country where a slight lagging in purchasing has been apparent. This will prove of material aid in reducing the stocks of open cars which have accumulated in dealers' hands due to a backward spring.

"Closed car business generally continues in good volume, with body manufacturing plants working at capacity to meet current and back orders. Deliveries are somewhat slow owing to the heavy pressure exerted on builders by car producers and limited facilities to cope with it.

"With automobile manufacturers, operations are keeping at a high level, although there is little expectation of meeting the May record this month. Exceptionally high schedules by some of the major producers, with an improvement in the programs of others toward the end of the month brought the aggregate output of cars and trucks in May to 405,000.

"This is estimated to be 20,000 more cars and 3000 more trucks than were built in April, which up to that time had held the production record.

MOON CONTINUES TO DO BIG BUSINESS

The sale of Moon cars continues at a high peak with a very strong demand for sport models, says Neal McDarby, Assistant Sales Manager of the Moon Motor Car Company, St. Louis.

The number of cars shipped in May came very close to the record made in April, which month was the biggest in the Company's history.

The plant is behind on deliveries of both open and closed models, although facilities for producing both types of cars have been materially increased since the first of the year.

The recent announcement that a new Noon sport model would be in production during June has created considerable interest among the trade, and many dealers have placed advance orders for this model.

"BANG! CAR GONE! GIMME 'NOTHER"

Here is a good story sent F. W. A. Vesper of the Vesper-Buick Co., from Shelby, Mont., the town where Mr. Dempsey will exchange compliments with Mr. Gibbons on July 4:

Charlie Lonewolf, a Blackfoot Indian of Northern Montana, recently became oil rich and bought himself a Buick.

A few days later the Buick dealer was confronted by Lonewolf again. The Indian was afoot. He walked with a limp and his face and hands bore various contusions and bruises. He had a pocketful of money and wanted to buy another Buick car. He was asked the how of it all and gave this explanation:

"Drive out big red car. Buy gallon moonshine. Take drink. Step on gas. Trees and fence go by heap 'fast. Pretty soon see big bridge coming down road. Turn out to let bridge pass. Bang! car gone! Gimme 'nother one!'

RICKENBACKER TO PAY THIRD CASH DIVIDEND

DETROIT, Mich., June 16—At a meeting held at the offices of the Rickenbacker Motor Company, Detroit, the Directors authorized the payment of two per cent cash dividend, payable, July 15th, to all holders of fully paid up stock of record as of June 30th.

This is the second two per cent cash dividend by this company in the current year, and is to be paid from the earnings of the Company during the past three months.

Rickenbacker Motor Company is just eighteen months old, and its success has been one of the most remarkable yet recorded in the automobile industry.

At the end of the first year a five per cent cash dividend was paid; April 1 another cash dividend of two per cent, and this dividend comes at the end of the second quarter.

$2,500,000,000 for Automobiles.

Motor vehicle owners and prospective owners are expected to pay out at least $2,500,000,000 for cars and trucks this year.

AUTO DEALERS JOIN IN VACATION DRIVE

Used Automobiles as Vacation Aids Object of Co-operative Red Tag Campaign This Week.

Automobile dealers in St. Louis are co-operating in a drive for summer trade. The slogan, "Own a Car and Take a Vacation," has been adopted. Dealers participating in "Used Car Week" report that never has there been a time when a good used car could be purchased at so low a price and on such attractive terms.

The "Used Car Week" campaign is launched today in the classified columns of The Post-Dispatch, with a wide variety of opportunities to acquire a good car.

The public has come to realize, say dealers, that a car is more than a convenience and source of pleasure; that it stimulates social prestige and opens the way to better health and greater business opportunities.

"Used Car Week," as one dealer puts it, is an opportunity for automobile dealers to co-operate in a constructive campaign and make many new friends by making it easy to own a good car.

Prominent St. Louis dealers are active in their efforts to standardize used car values. Many guarantee used cars much in the same way as new cars. In some cases, used cars are re-conditioned to an extent where it is difficult to tell wherein a rebuilt car of good make differs in service value from new cars.

All signs point to "Used Car Week" attracting wide attention, due to its timeliness. The scope of the plan is such as to offer protected buying opportunities in a field where formerly too little attention was given to educating the layman on the fine points of buying used cars.

Those who travel along Automobile Row all week will "see red" for red windows displays and red tags are the badge of this used car week.

Prophets who specialize in forecasting business movement from their trade barometers hand down the decision that June is the best month to buy an automobile, especially a used car. Dealers state that in June they always have an accumulated stock of trade-ins from car owners who follow the styles and who would regard the summer without a new car of the latest mode like Thanksgiving Day without turkey.

Then, too, there is a desire on the part of dealers to clear their commercial decks for the semi-annual inventory.

STOCKHOLDERS FORMING NEW TEMPLAR COMPANY

Stockholders of the Templar Motors Co., of Cleveland, for which a receiver was appointed several months ago, pending a reorganization, are forming an entirely new corporation to acquire the assets controlled by the Templar Syndicate and again enter actively into the field of motor car manufacturing.

The Templar factory, one of the finest and most up-to-date automotive plants in the country, has never ceased active operation. Despite the curtailing of its regular production it has been operated daily by the receiver. At the present time the plant is 30 days behind on its orders. These facts have made the stockholders optimistic as regards plans for the reorganization of the company.

It is understood that the proposed new corporation will offer its present stockhbiders $2,500,000 of 7 per cent first preferred stock at $50 a share. All the money thus obtained will be used solely for working capital to carry on the manufacture and sale of Templar cars in volume.

HUPP DEALER TELLS OF BUSINESSS IN INDIA

More American motor cars were imported into India in 1922 than those made in any other country in the world, declares John B. Pratt of T. B. Pratt (Calcutta) Ltd., Hupp distributors in Calcutta, who has been visiting the Hupp Motor Car Corporation's factory.

"A raise in import duty, first to 20 per cent and later to 30 per cent on motor cars and even higher charges on tires, tubes and petrol, is holding back greater development of motor transportation and causing strenuous and formal protest by the Motor Trades Association, one of the country's most powerful transportation organizations.

"Inflation in India was greater immediately following the war than in almost any other country. Several concerns paid cash dividends of as high at 500 per cent on stock over a 12 months' period in 1919 and 1920. Consequently, Indian has been slower to get back to a proper business basis than most countries. I look for a considerably better business market next year than this and for further improvement in 1923. The majority of surplus stocks, due to inflation, have been sold and business houses are beginning to order new materials in fair quantities."

Maxwell Retires Series B Notes.

DETROIT, June 16.—Retirement of the entire balance of its Series B notes, aggregating slightly more than $2,000,000, was made by the Maxwell Motor Corporation on June 1, from the current year's earnings.

This payment serves to emphasize again the progress which Maxwell has made since its reorganization two years ago. In this period, more than $11,000,000 of Maxwell and Chalmers funded indebtedness has been liquidated.

DODGE BROTHERS TOURING CAR

If there is one word which will sum up the average owner's impression of Dodge Brothers Touring Car, that word is dependable.

If there is a word to express the quality which Dodge Brothers have striven, above all else, to build into the Touring Car, it is —again—dependable.

Indeed, it is not too much to say that the word dependable has come to be definitely associated, the nation over, with Dodge Brothers Touring Car—and the other vehicles bearing their name.

Nor have Dodge Brothers built this enviable reputation through advertising. They have built motor cars, so dependable in fact that the word has presented itself automatically to the public mind.

SIMONIZ OFFICIAL ARRIVES IN BUICK

Gervis J. Martin, traveling salesman and advertiser for the Simoniz Co. of Chicago, reported his arrival in St. Louis to the Vesper Buick Auto Co., with his Buick roadster, last Tuesday. He is here to do some special work with C. W. Gillham, local owner, and R. A. Simon, local manager of the Missouri Simoniz Co., 4532 Delmar boulevard.

In June, 1921, Mr. Martin purchased a Buick regular six-cylinder roadster from the Clinton-Buick Co. of Clinton, Mo., for use in traveling the country. In two years' time the Buick has traveled over 34,000 miles and has been in every state in the Union, Alabama, Florida and Georgia excepted. It has also been driven extensively in Old Mexico and Canada.

The original paint job is on the car, and has been treated once every 30 days to a coat of Simoniz. Soap and water have never been used on the car, the Simonizing process being the only means used for cleaning and polishing.

In two years, the only parts replacements required were an emergency pull-rod, which had crystallized and broken at the threaded end, and a set of piston rings. The mechanic who installed the new piston rings reported that the old rings were in good shape and could have been used for a much longer time without any difficulty. The six original spark plugs are still in use, as are all of the original bushings and shackle bolts.

The Ward Motor Co., through Walter Prack, secretary, announces having leased the salesroom at 3030-32 Locust boulevard, as used car headquarters. This is another step made by his company, states Prack, to properly handle the high-grade used cars the Ward company aims to deal in.

TIRES WITH 500 NAIL HOLES LEAK NO AIR

Mr. B. Milburn of Chicago has invented a new puncture-proof inner tube, which, in actual test, was punctured 500 times without the loss of any air. Increase your mileage from 10,000 to 12,000 miles without removing this wonderful tube from the wheel, and the beauty of it all is that this new puncture-proof tube costs no more than the ordinary tube, and makes riding a real pleasure. You can write Mr. R. Milburn at 833 West 47th st., Chicago, as he wants them introduced everywhere. Wonderful opportunity for agents. If interested write him today.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE ORDERS COMING FAST

The demand for Wills Sainte Clair cars continues to exceed production and the list of unfilled orders on the books on June 1st is larger than at the same time last year. This is the information just received from the factory by I. G. McNiece, president of the McNiece Hil Motor Co.

May production was 50 per cent greater than April, and June will see a still further increase in output. The actual delivery of cars so far this year is only 25 less than the very gratifying record of the first five months of last year.

"WORLD-CIRCLING" STAR CAR VISITS ST. LOUIS

The world-circling Star car made a brief stopover in this city Wednesday and Thursday, the members of the party, Mildred Taylor, writer, feminist; her brother, Peter Taylor, radio engineer, and Blanding Sloan, artist, calling upon Acting Mayor Walter Neun, who decorated their car with the key to the city. The party carried with them a parchment scroll letter from Mayor John F. Hylan of New York, their starting point, and their destination, which they presented to the chief executive of St. Louis.

It is in the nature of a greeting from the people of New York to the people of St. Louis, and "commends to the hospitality" of the city where presented "this writer, scientist and artist in their search for knowledge of the folkways of the world." The expedition of this party around the world, with the Orient as a special objective, has been named "a venture in international friendship" by Prof. Charles Hodges of New York University, and the letter addressed to "fellow Mayors around the world" has been signed by the Mayors of Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, Danville and St. Louis.

Closed Cars Three-Fourths of Franklin's Output.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 16.—Franklin closed car production so far this year is 74.4 per cent of the total, according to H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile Co. In May closed cars constituted 91 per cent of Franklin production.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT STEEP GRADES?

Automotive College Head Says Motorists Usually Estimate a Grade Percentage as Double Actual Percentage.

"How steep is the grade on that road? Well—I should say that it is all of 30 or 35 per cent. But I didn't have any trouble in making it with my car. No sir. She pulled it like a house afire. Made it on high all the way. Passed two cars laboring along in second."

"How often, with variations," says Erwin Greer, president Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago, Ill., "do we hear these words from drivers proud of the achievements of their cars and frequently even to the disparagement of higher-priced cars from which, presumably, a better performance should be expected. After listening to statements of this kind from hundreds of tourists one is at least convinced that not one man in a hundred has the proper estimate of the percentage of a grade encountered. No reliance is to be placed on such estimates expressed by any other than one who knows from actual measurement with a gradometer.

"Approaching an ascent the grade naturally appears steeper than it actually is. This, coupled with the performance of the individual car which may or may not make the grade in high gear gives rise to an incorrect estimate of the percentage of the grade.

"Many motorists do not understand the process by which the designation of a grade percentage is arrived at, believing that a 20 per cent grade, for instance, is one which rises at an angle of 20 degrees from the horizontal. This is erroneous. The designation of 20 per cent to a grade means that in the grade there is a perpendicular rise of 20 feet in 100 horizontal feet. In other words, to generalize, the numerical percentage of a grade indicates that number of feet, perpendicular rise in 100 horizontal feet. In relation to degrees it will be found that a grade percentage properly arrived at in this way forms an angle equal to about one-half of the angle formed when the numerical expression is taken to mean degrees. Definately, a 30 per cent grade is about one-half as steep as the grade formed by a 30 degrees angle from the horizontal.

"The steepest grade on which a car can obtain traction is 45 per cent, and this is a very stiff grade, indeed. You can be reasonably certain that if you have estimated a grade as 30 or 35 per cent and your car pulls it in high gear that your estimate of the road's steepness is probably double or even more what it actually is."

JOHNSON CO. HAS NEW BATTERY EQUIPMENT

The Johnson Automobile Co., Ford and Lincoln dealers, 3667 Olive street, has recently added to their equipment the latest improved Marshall Electric Co. constant potential battery charger, which enables them to recharge each Ford or Linoln battery separately.

By this new method, batteries can be charged in eight to 12 hours, while with the old process it required two or three days—this means a big saving to their customers on rental charges.

The Johnson company is the first St. Louis Ford and Lincoln dealer to purchase this latest and most modern battery charging equipment.

"They shall not pass!"

THE red blooded American, in war and in peace, glories in the thought, "They shall not pass!" He loves to win — to keep ahead!

And he finds a new thrill in sitting at the wheel of this Auburn Six Supreme. The speed of an airplane fanning his brow, the power of a giant to laugh at the hills.

He marvels at the mechanical perfection which permits a pick-up of from five to fifty miles an hour in eleven seconds. He thrills at the speed of seventy miles an hour — yet your safety is assured by the sturdy construction of the car and the effective braking system.

Here is a car to delight the heart of every he-man! Here is a car that fulfills every motorist's dream of what real driving should be.

Even if you are familiar with Auburn quality, you'll realize a new pride of possession when you own this marvel of modern motor cars.

PACKARD "STRAIGHT EIGHT" IN THE CITY

Berry Motor Car Co. Shows Latest Sensation of Automobile World.

The new Packard car, the advent of which has been preceded by probably more speculation than has been aroused by any event in the automobile industry in years, is a "straight eight" with four-wheel brakes and with something new in ease of control. A sedan is now on exhibition at the Berry Motor Co., Twenty-second and Locust.

Official announcement of the production of the "Single Eight," has been made by the Packard Motor Car Co. and, at a number of strategic points besides St. Louis the latest Packard now is being shown. Production already is well under way.

First public tests of the car were made at Detroit by a group of automobile magazine editors, all automotive engineers and possessed of a thorough knowledge of motor cars.

With J. Edward Schipper and Harry A. Tarantous, magazine men, taking turns at the wheel the car was run over roads varying from the worst to the best and at speeds from two to 70 miles an hour or more. Tests of many kinds, including especially acceleration and stopping, were demanded by others in the car without warning and performed with startling ease.

Expressions of the whole party about the motor were summed up by Tarantous with the remark: "There is a wonderful flow of power, more than enough for any requirement with not a period of vibration from minimum to maximum speed. Of course, it is obvious that with such crank shaft design the motor would be perfectly balanced."

All the magazine editors were amazed, they said, at the simplicity of the four-wheel brakes.

A new principle for eight cylinder in line motors, used in the new car, is said to completely eliminate vibration. Packard engineers in effect have cut one four-cylinder motor in two and put a half on one end of another four-cylinder motor and the other half on the other end. This permitted a new design of crankshaft and an unusual firing order. In general lines the new car is distinctly Packard. However, the 136 and 143-inch wheel bases, long hood and the disc wheels, which are standard equipment on all models, serve to give a low racy appearance.

"Nearly three years of study and work by engineers went into the making of the 'Single Eight,'" said Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Company, discussing the new car.

"The task was presented to Col. J. G. Vincent, vice president of engineering of the Packard. He formulated a comprehensive program of research, building and testing. This was divided in three parts: First, the laying out of ideal specifications for such a car; second, study of the best that American and Europe had to offer in fine motor cars, and, third, the building and testing of experimental cars which would combine all the lessons of these investigations.

"Our engineering division built six cars and, after tests, all were rejected for one reason or another. During all the period of investigation the eight-in-line motor, because it was thought the greatest simplicity lay in such a power plant, was being studied. All such motors up to that time, however, had been simply two four-cylinder engines joined end to end, a construction from which vibration could not be eliminated.

"Because we could not consider a power plant that was not perfectly balanced we concentrated on the problem of eliminating this difficulty in previous eight-in-line motors. Our engineers solved the problem with a new type crank shaft in which the two crank pin throws at each end are set at a 90 degree angle from the four in the center.

"The first car built with the new motor proved that our engineers had met every specification which had been laid down nearly three years ago. The car had greater power, greater acceleration, greater ease in handling, greater speed and flexibility and permitted of the maximum in luxurious riding qualities, which we had set as another objective, being built into it.

"We found that the increased speed and faster acceleration and the great surge of power in the new motor made necessary something additional in the way of brakes and we completed our investigation of four wheel brakes. As an indication of the simplicity of these new brakes there is the fact that they have for all four wheels 27 different parts while most rear wheel brakes have 46 different parts."

The crank shaft on the new car is provided with nine main bearings. Cylinders are of 3⅜-inch bore and 5-inch stroke. The S. A. E. horsepower rating is 36.4 with actual block tests developing more than 80 horsepower. Lubrication is by pressure feed. Cooling is provided with the regular Packard automatic thermostatic control. Winter shutters also are provided for the radiator and an unusually large fan is used. The Packard fuelizer has been built into the intake manifold of the motor.

Aluminum pistons are used. They are so designed that expansion does not appreciably affect the clearance of the piston which is fitted closely to the bore of the cylinder.

An unusual feature of the car is the lighting arrangement. Three different ranges of light are provided in the head lamps. One is designed for ordinary city driving. The second range throws a beam of light low enough not to make a glare in the eyes of approaching motorists, but far enough in advance for normal night driving in the country. The third range throws a great shaft of light along the highway, making possible high speed on the darkest night.

Many accessories have been built into the car as standard equipment. The bumpers are permanent parts of the car. The warning stop light also is a standard part of the car. The operating switch is controlled by the foot brake, the switch being inclosed in a waterproof receptacle on the transmission case. All wires are carried in conduits. The instrument board has the usual equipment, with the addition of a gauge which gives an accurate indication of the gasoline in the tank at all times.

The five-passenger touring car will sell for $3955, runabout $4165, five-passenger sedan $4995, five-passenger sedan limousine $5045, four-passenger coupe $4890, five-passenger car $4165, seven passenger sedan $5250, and the seven-passenger sedan limousine $5300. All seven passenger models are on chassis with a 143-inch wheel base. The others are on a 136-inch wheel base. The 136-inch wheel base chassis alone will sell for $3645 and the 143-inch wheel base chassis alone for $3740. All prices delivered in St. Louis, tax paid.

Oakland Wins!

The Los Angeles to Camp Curry, Yosemite Valley, Economy Run is an annual event open to stock cars, of any size or make, under the auspices of the American Automobile Association. Because of the severity of the run—and the authenticity of records made—the automobile world accepts the results as conclusive proof of motor car economy and endurance.

Breaks Three Records in Winning Famous Economy Run for the Second Time

Oakland wins again! Shattering all previous records—a stock Oakland Six won both Sweepstakes and Class Cups—for the second consecutive time—in the annual Los Angeles to Camp Curry Economy Run under the supervision of the A. A. A.

Thirteen other makes of cars, including lighter four-cylinder cars, yielded to the Oakland Six's phenomenal record of 65.17 ton-miles—36.92 actual miles per gallon! Never before in an official contest has a motor car traveled 360 miles—up steep mountain grades and over all kinds of roads—on only 9.75 gallons of gasoline.

Here is the Official A. A. A. Record

	Class	Miles	Gallons Gas	Miles per Gallon	Ton Miles
Oakland Six	4-E	360	9.75	36.92	65.17

Commenting on Oakland's splendid victory, the Los Angeles Express said: "Repeating with a double victory this year, the Oakland Six demonstrated its consistent economical qualities—a degree of efficiency in fuel consumption, lubrication and cooling that writes a new chapter in the history of Economy and Endurance Contests."

Do you wonder that Oakland can definitely prove the superior quality of its car on the basis of "known mileage." Buy consistent economy—buy proved performance—buy known mileage! You can get all of these things only in the Oakland—the car built by a division of General Motors to be the finest light-six.

Sixty Million Miles at a Cost of Less than Two-Tenths of a Cent Per Mile for Replacements

That is the amazing record made by the 10,000 Rickenbacker Sixes now on the road.

Figuring up an average of 6000 miles per car per year—and our records show that is a low average—and taking the total of replacement and repair parts shipped from our Service Department, many of which are still in distributors' stock rooms—the results show the remarkable fact that Rickenbacker cars have covered more than sixty million miles (60,000,000) at a cost of less than two-tenths of a cent per mile.

That is another—or perhaps the primary—reason for Rickenbacker success. Other reasons for the tremendous popularity of this car are:

—Power Plus.
—Absolute absence of any periods of vibration at any speed.
—Tandem Flywheels.
—Air cleaner, which guarantees longer life and freedom from excessive carbon deposits.
—Ease of control and finally, Pride of Ownership, such as you can derive from no car other than that which carries the "Hat in the Ring" insignia on the radiator.

HAYNES ANNOUNCES NEW MODEL AT $1295

"60" Touring Car Is on Display at Wilson Motor Car Co.

A new model—the Haynes 60 standard touring car at $1295, the lowest price ever placed on any Haynes car, has been officially announced by Alton G. Seiberling, vice president and general manager of the Haynes Automobile Co., Kokomo, Ind. One of these cars is now displayed at the Wilson Motor Car Co., 2929 Locust boulevard.

For the past several days it has been driven veiled through city streets, with the wording on its cover: "is Haynes 60 price $1295? See it uncovered and quoted Sunday."

"The Haynes 60 standard touring car at $1295," says Mr. Seiberling, "is unquestionably the greatest value ever offered by the Haynes company in its long history of 30 years of automobile manufacturing. Such a car at such a price is possible only through the tremendous demand which Haynes cars have been meeting and the ability, consequently, to enter into a production on a huge scale with the resultant saving in manufacturing costs. The Haynes 60 at $1295 recalls the days of 1914 when the Haynes company startled the motor world with its Model 30 at $1485. That car was regarded as a superb dollar-for-dollar value, although it was made at a time when the present manufacturing costs were undreamed of. Then, too, the Haynes company is today offering a car with improvements and luxuries unthought of in 1914, and at a lower price."

The Haynes 60 standard touring car is built on a 121-inch wheel base chassis and is powered by the renowned Haynes-built light six motor. It is finished in the famous Burgundy wine color.

GIANT CARBURETOR IS ON DISPLAY HERE

The Automotive Electrical Service Co., distributors for the Schebler Carburetor, has on display the largest carburetor in the world. This carburetor is six foot in heighth and is an exact reproduction of the new model "S" Schebler. On the inside of the carburetor are placed several electrical bulbs illuminating all of the inside and showing plainly all the working parts. According to E. A. Gruender of the Automotive Company, the carburetor cost $1500.00 to build. It is constructed of wood and aluminum. This carburetor which is mounted on one of the Automotive Company's service cars will be on display on St. Louis streets for about two weeks.

Durant Here on Long Trip.

G. H. Clifford of New York City, with his mother and two friends, was in St. Louis during the past week on a cross-continent trip in a Durant car. The party is on the way to Los Angeles and visited H. W. Spalding of the Spalding Motor Co., Durant distributers, when here.

ROTARY REGISTRATION AT WILLYS-OVERLAND

Nine thousand five hundred delegates, coming to the convention of the International Rotary Clubs, will register at the salesroom of the Willys-Overland Co., Twenty-third and Locust streets. The entire showroom floor is being given up to the big convention for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Fifty typewriters will be installed on the floor and the difficult job of registering such a large number of delegates will proceed. The use of the Willys-Overland quarters was offered the convention by William H. Taylor, manager of the St. Louis branch of this automobile company.

Dry as Bone!

Common Sense Auto Polish—the greaseless cleanser—that's the name to remember!

It leaves a clear surface, smooth as glass, DRY AS BONE—so dry that you can sprinkle dust over the freshly polished surface and then "flick off" every particle with a silk handkerchief!—the ONE preparation you have ever seen that will pass this test.

The first application of Common Sense will add at least $150.00 to the appearance of your car! But it will cost you only $1.00! Your nearest Druggist or Accessory Dealer has it, or can get it for you, promptly. And of course, always, if necessary, you may send direct to the Laboratory. 50c, 1.00; or testing sample, 12c postage.

THE STUDEBAKER LIGHT-SIX TOURING CAR

A Real Achievement in Dollar-for-dollar Value

The thousands of Studebaker Light-Sixes in daily use are the best possible assurance of what may be expected next year—or several years hence—of the Light-Six you buy today.

For after all, the best way to judge a new motor car is by what it has done—how it has stood up in service—the satisfaction it has delivered.

We sincerely believe that the Light-Six Touring Car, with its improved all-steel body, is the sturdiest, handsomest, most comfortable, most dependable and economical low-priced car ever built.

Mechanically it is far superior to any car within its price range. The design of its improved L-head motor is an engineering achievement and its manufacture is a series of precision processes.

The machining of all surfaces of the crankshaft and connecting rods, to which is largely due its practical absence of vibration, is a practice used by Studebaker exclusively on cars at this price and is found only on a very few other cars whose selling prices are from three to ten times as high as the Light-Six.

The one-piece, rain-proof windshield with parking lights set in the base, is a joy to the driver—nothing to mar his view of the road ahead. Deep, fat cushions are upholstered in genuine leather. Curtains, bound on three sides by steel rods, open with the doors and provide closed car coziness in bad weather.

The most seasoned driver will find a new thrill in the smooth, quiet, steady performance of the Light-Six—and in its quick response to the slightest touch of the accelerator, in its ease of handling, and in the way it performs in high gear at low speeds—eliminating constant gear shifting.

The name Studebaker has stood for high grade transportation, quality, value and integrity for 71 years.

Seven cash donations increased the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund by $37 during the last three days, bringing it to a total of $755.12.

With the closing of school, many children are planning benefits for the fund. Applications for show tickets and lemonade and ice cream placards indicate a very active summer's work in behalf of the tenement children who are dependent upon the Ice Fund for help.

Plans for the annual Commission Men's Ball Game are well under way, and, weather permitting, the game will be called at 9 a. m. next Sunday, June 24, at Sportsman's Park. Third and Fourth Street Commission Row is placarded with posters announcing the contest, and an encouraging advance ticket sale is reported. Miss Mary McCormack of Cicardi Bros. is devoting considerable time to promoting the affair, which again is expected to net a substantial sum for the fund.

Tomorrow evening a lawn show for the benefit of the Ice Fund is to be given at 2024 Russell avenue. The program, which will include musical and dance numbers, is under direction of Margaret and Paul Schneider, 2024 Russell avenue, their guests, Genevieve and Marjorie Molt of Shreveport, La., and Virginia Strandberg.

PAYS FOR BEER AFTER 30 YEARS

Arkansas Man, Now "a Christian," Would "Make Things Right."

WAUKEGAN, Ill.—Paying a conscience debt 30 years old, John J. Rubin of Hot Springs, Ark., sent a letter containing 15 cents to pay for a bottle of beer that he said he took from the icebox of a boarding house operated by a man named Cobb.

"Dear Mr. Cobb," the letter read. "When I boarded with you, about 30 years ago, I took a bottle of beer from your icebox. Since I've become a Christian I am making things right. So I apologize and inclose 15 cents to pay for the beer."

Shriners Spent $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON. — Balancing up their books officials of Almah Temple figured that they had spent $300,000 to bring the Shrine convention to Washington and to entertain the visitors, that approximately $25,000,000 was left in Washington as a result of the visitation and that the city had been visited during the week by 400,000 persons from outside, with 250,000 probably as the maximum at one time.

$2,500,000 ANNEX PLANNED BY STIX, BAER & FULLER CO.

Owners of Grand-Leader Acquire Lease North of Present Store for an 8-Story Building.

WILL INCREASE FLOOR AREA 3½ ACRES

Famous-Barr Store Acquires Site for New Warehouse and Garage Near Wabash Tract.

By Berry Moore.

The Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. and the May Department Stores Co., owners, respectively, of the Grand-Leader and the Famous-Barr Stores, yesterday concluded negotiations for sites, through the Mercantile Trust Co., which contemplate large building plans.

The Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. acquired a 99-year lease of the northeast corner of Seventh street and Lucas avenue, 120x105 feet which, with 60x105 feet occupied by its power house on the east, will form the site of a modern eight-story fireproof building, similar in design to the Grand-Leader building and which will cost $2,500,000, including the site. Construction is to be started as soon as the premises become available, through the expiration of tenants' leases of old buildings now occupying the site. All except one of these leases are subject to purchase.

The acquisition gives the Grand-Leader a total frontage on Lucas avenue of 166 feet by a depth of 105 feet on Sixth street.

The proposed building is to supplement the floor space of the Grand-Leader department store, nine stories in height and embracing the entire block from Washington to Lucas avenues and from Seventh to Sixth streets, and which is held by the Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. under a 99-year lease. The fee to the site is owned by the James Campbell estate, of which the Mercantile Trust Co. is executor and trustee.

The new building will increase the floor area of the department store 231,000 square feet, approximately three and one-half acres, which will serve as an annex to the Grand-Leader and which will provide room for the receipt and dispatch of goods, exclusive of the Washington avenue building, thus constituting virtually an expansion of the department store on a large scale.

Outcome of City's Bond Issue.

The building plans which are now in process of development, are in anticipation of a greater volume of business with the expenditures incident to the $87,000,000 bond issue, which contemplates the erection of a $1,000,000 Union market, on the site of the present Union market, at the northeast corner of Sixth street and Lucas avenue, diagonally opposite the Grand-Leader.

With the Eads Bridge and the Washington avenue station practically on its east, at the head of Washington avenue, the Grand Leader occupies an unique and commanding position in the retail district, which will be further enhanced with the completion of the Loew vaudeville house, in course of construction at the northeast corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue.

This is the third time the Grand-Leader has been forced to extend its Washington avenue quarters, which now includes the building at the northeast corner of Seventh street and Washington avenue, which was reconstructed several years ago to conform with the original structure, and which gives it possession of this entire block.

The northeast corner of Seventh street and Lucas avenue, embraces 60x195 feet on the corner, owned by Mrs. Emma Brockstedt, and the two adjoining plots, 20x115 feet each, owned by Mrs. William L. Bailey. The 40x105 feet occupied by the Grand-Leader power house is owned by the Stix, Baer & Fuller Co., which acquired it from the Campbell estate when the addition was made to the Washington avenue store. The Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. now has a total frontage on Lucas avenue of 160 feet. The power house is operated as a unit of the Union Electric Light & Power Co. for the exclusive service of the Grand-Leader and will be absorbed in the new building. The John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co. represented by James T. Blake, represented Mrs. Brockstedt in the negotiation for her holdings.

The Stix, Baer & Fuller Co. also acquired a lease through the Mercantile Trust Co. of the two-story and basement building at 925-33 North Sixth street, containing 30,000 square feet and which is to be used by the lessee for warehouse purposes. The lease was made on behalf of the Koenig estate, represented by Daly & McCabe.

Another Famous-Barr Warehouse.

The May Department Stores Co. purchased through the Mercantile Trust Co. 150,000 square feet of ground adjoining the Wabash tract at Spring avenue, from the Temple Realty Co., of which W. K. Bixby is president, and the Hydraulic Press Brick Co., for $100,000. The Martin & Brettt Real Estate Co. represented the May interests.

The site is to be improved at once with a warehouse and a delivery station and garage for the Famous-Barr Store. The warehouse will contain 300,000 square feet. The buildings will be of the most modern type and will be of fireproof construction.

The growth of the Famous-Barr business, which has extended uniformly to every department of the department store, has steadily absorbed additional floors in the Railway Exchange Building.

Abe Slupsky yesterday purchased the southwest corner of Washington and Channing avenues, through Conrad Schopp, real estate agent. The site has a frontage of 50 feet on Washington avenue, the corner half of which is vacant. The purchase was made as a speculation.

The Sexton company reports having broken ground in City View place and on North Broadway, respectively, preparatory to the erection of homes for Ben Widmer and for N. Defend, the total cost of which will be $25,000.

APARTMENT SITES IN COUNTY WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

Pasadena Addition in Webster Groves Subdivided Into Lots for Sale by New York Concern.

Attention is focused on Pasadena, the family apartment addition which is to be sold to the public at open auction June 22, 23 and 24 at 2:30 p. m. daily. Pasadena is located on Big Bend road and Selma avenue, on high ground.

The tract is being subdivided into broad, deep lots, most of which are covered with shade and ornamental trees, affording spacious front, side and rear yards for the new type of apartments which will be constructed. There is an active demand for the rental of apartments and duplex buildings in Webster, with no supply available. The large lots, with deep building lines and restrictions preclude and possibility of congestion—winding drives, magnificent shade trees, beautiful surroundings and first class improvements give the general effect of single-family buildings in a well-groomed residential section.

Pasadena is located in the center of Webster's select residential district and is advantageously situated regarding schools and churches. The business district of East Webster (Old Orchard) is three blocks east and reservations for a business section in Pasadena also are provided for.

Transportation facilities are splendid, the Manchester street car giving through service to the business section of St. Louis; the South Webster station of the Frisco Railroad is also located at Pasadena, affording 24-minute commuter service to and from the city. Automobile boulevards connect Pasadena with St. Louis.

All of the lots fronting on Big Bend road and Selma avenue have street improvements already completed and can be built upon at once. The street improvements for the balance of the tract consisting of concrete curb, gutters and sidewalks, macadam street, sewer, gas, water, electricity and telephone service, guaranteed by bond issued by Southern Surety Company, will be rushed to completion and will be paid for by the present owners. The sale will be held under the direction of the Heber Harter Co. of New York, in a tent on the premises. The Alfred Baker Realty Company, agents for the property, report keen interest in Pasadena and predict a record attendance.

UNIVERSITY CITY DEAL INVOLVES $125,000

M. M. Olian and J. Franks yesterbought through Martin Olian, real estate agent, the Parview Building, at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Eastgate avenue, John S. Blake & Bro. represented the seller.

While the consideration was not disclosed the value is said by real estate men to be about $125,000.

The building contains nine stores and 17 offices, has a frontage of 100 feet on Delmar by 125 feet on Eastgate.

Martin Olian was made exclusive agent, and will manage this building.

CENTURY ELECTRIC CO. TO ENLARGE BUILDINGS

Edward L. Bakewell, mortgage loan correspondent of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., reports having made a loan of $400,000 to the Century Electric Co., which was represented by the Edward K. Love Realty Co.

This loan is secured by property of the Century Electric Co. on the south side of Pine street, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, comprising half of a city block.

Because of the rapid growth of its business, the Century Electric Co. will enlarge and reconstruct the buildings.

The Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co. has made many large loans on St. Louis real estate through Bakewell.

$1,200,000 LOAN FOR OFFICE BUILDING

Deed of trust on the Missouri Theater property at Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue was filed yesterday by the real estate loan department of the Mercantile Trust Co., securing a loan of $1,200,000. The loan is on the Mercantile Trust Co.'s serial payment plan the entire mortgage being amortized in 17½ years. Notes are in the denomination of $100 and $500.

The lot described in the mortgage fronts 130 feet on the East line of Grand and 312 feet on the South line of Lucas. The present improvements consist of the Missouri Theater, which is said to be one of the finest moving picture houses in the West.

The loan will provide funds to complete an office building, which will rise 12 stories above the ground. Each floor will have 20 offices and the ground floor will be divided into stores and shops. The present entrance to the theater will be maintained and entrance to the office building will be on Grand boulevard, at the South end of the building. There will be three high-speed elevators and one freight elevator. The plans call for a very ornate structure and the equipment will be the last word in office construction. Completed the property will represent an investment of more than $2,500,000. It will be ready for occupancy February 1, 1924.

This building will be a substantial addition to the group of office structures which have made Grand boulevard one of the best built and most valuable outlying business districts of any city in the United States.

The Real Estate Loan Department of the Mercantile Trust Co. has been a factor in the up-building of this section. It financed the construction of the Metropolitan building—the first large office building erected on this thoroughfare. Through its serial note plan, the Rialto Theater was erected and the building at the Southeast corner of Grand and Olive street converted into a business structure. It also financed the Empress Theater, as well as the business building adjoining it on the east.

Helfensteller, Hirsch & Watson are the architects for the new building and the work is being done by the James Black Masonry and Construction Company.

SALE OF BUSINESS PROPERTY ON EASTON AV. REPORTED

The De Martini Zerega Agency Co. reports the sale of three stores at 4641-43-45 Easton avenue to Sam Goldstein; northeast corner of Kossuth and Peck, consisting of store on corner and nine flats; double flats at 2573-75 Warren street; single flat of 5 and 6 rooms, 4710-12 Newberry terrace; single flat of 3 rooms at 1421 North Twenty-third street, and a 6-room brick house at 2550 Semple avenue. Also negotiated loans aggregating $30,000.

BUSINESS USE OF SOUTHERN HOTEL BLOCK PLANNED

John F. Queeny Announces Project to Convert Building Into Offices for Architects and Contractors.

Plans are being perfected for the conversion of the Southern Hotel block into an office building, with stores on the ground floor.

This announcement was made yesterday by John F. Queeny, chairman of the board of directors of the Monsanto Chemical Co., who purchased the building several years ago from the Allen estate and who already has expended more than $200,000 for its physical betterment.

Suitable for Building Industry.

The building, which is seven stories high and which occupies the entire block bounded by Broadway, Fourth, Elm and Walnut streets, will be available for offices for architects and contractors, and in fact for any of those identified with building industry.

The building now has 300 rooms above the first floor, which will be divided or adapted to conform with the requirements of the lessees.

The first floor will be subdivided into 18 or more stores which, it is believed, will be attractive for brokers in the grocery trade and for persons in kindred lines.

Queeny said that he had allotted a large amount for the conversion of the structure, contract for which, he stated, will be let as soon as the plans have been completed. He said that he was proceeding with the office building plans on the theory that the Courthouse to be erected under the $87,000,000 bond issue would be built on the site of the present Courthouse or on an adjacent block.

New Courthouse Site Suggestion.

The new Courthouse, he said, could be erected on the block bounded by Broadway, Market, Fourth and Walnut streets, as an extension to the present Courthouse, and thus avoid forfeiture of the present Courthouse block to the Lucas heirs.

Claude B. Ricketts, manager of the Railway Exchange building, will have charge of the converted hotel building.

REALTORS TO SPREAD NEWS OF BIG BOND ISSUE

Police Band Expected to Accompany St. Louis Delegation to Convention.

Members of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange are planning to advertise this city, and its $87,000,000 public improvement program, at the national convention of Realtors in Cleveland next week. The convention will be held June 26 to 30, inclusive.

The St. Louis police band is expected to accompany the St. Louis delegation, and will lead in the march to Hotel Cleveland, headquarters for the St. Louisans. The words "$8 Million" will be displayed in blue and gold letters on banners, badges and hatbands of the St. Louis men. Coins bearing the figure of St. Louis, as shown in the heroic statue in Forest Park, and the words, St. Louis to the Front, $8 Million-Dollar Bond Issue," will be distributed as souvenirs. Each man will carry a cane, and insignia will be furnished to women members of the party.

THREE-STORY BLOCK PLANNED FOR GRAND AND HEBERT

A new college, office and mercantile building is planned for Grand boulevard and Hebert street. A site fronting 88 feet on Grand boulevard by a depth of 145 feet has just been sold by the Greulich Co. for the account of Christ Frieling to Eugene Freund. The new three-story building will be of fireproof construction, with elevator and all modern conveniences. The second floor and part of the third floor will be occupied by the Speed-Da Business College and by doctors' officers. The first floor will be arranged for automobile accessories and show rooms. The building will cost about $150,000.

A further business site was sold by Greulich for Paul Wielandy at Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge, the new boulevard. Further building contracts awarded the Greulich Co. are from Mrs. Edward Sehnert, for a bungalow on Claxton avenue; H. Goerss, bungalow on Claxton avenue; Mr. Brinkmeyer, bungalow on Ruskin avenue; Mr. Norton, $20,000 residence, Arundel pl., Hillcrest; Mr. Du Benrick, apartment building on Laurel avenue.

Plans are being drawn for five other clients who will have the Greulich Company start their buildings at once.

Albert T. Terry & Co. reports having sold the five six room houses at 2217-19-21-23-25 North Tenth street, renting for $1560 a year, for John Keegan to Thomas Shapiro, who bought for investment. The firm also sold tenement property at 1721 South Tenth street for the Sam Hamburg Real Estate and Investment Co. to R. J. Fruin and Minnie Fruin for a home. It also sold a four-family apartment at 5217 Devonshire avenue, renting for $3120 a year, for the Industrial Engineering Co. to Mrs. Rose Menshaw, who bought for investment.

BENISH TO OPEN NEW DOWNTOWN CAFETERIA

Basement of Republic Building, Seventh and Olive, Leased to Restaurant Company.

Isaac T. Cook & Co., Incorporated, agents for the Republic building, on the southwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets, report having leased the basement of the building, containing about 10,000 square feet of rentable area to the Benish Restaurant Co., who will operate a cafeteria to take care of the overflow from their main restaurant in the basement of the Chemical Building.

The Benish company opened their present restaurant in the Chemical Building about eight years ago and have enjoyed rapid growth.

The present leases in the building made it impossible to obtain more space at this time and necessitated leasing the Seventh and Olive street location for a branch cafeteria.

Workmen are now remodeling the Republic Building basement and expect to have it completed and ready for opening about Aug. 1.

The Cook company also reports leasing the store room on the northeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets to Charles F. Schokmiller and William Franke for a hardware specialty store. The property is owned by Malcolm W. MacDonald and Helen H. MacD. Jones.

The Tweedie Boot Top Co. have taken a long term lease on the entire fourth floor of the building at 1423-29 Olive street, known as the High School Building.

All the parties in the above transactions were represented by Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc.

Mann and wife to Israel Rosenberg and wife; vacant lot in the Lee-Mar subdivision of 35' for the Lindell Fairgrounds Realty & Investment Co. to John A. and Virginia C. Gerst; a vacant lot fronting 35 feet on Farlin avenue in the Lee-Mar subdivision for the Lindell Fairgrounds Realty & Investment Co. to William L. Zoellner and wife.

DAVID BAILEY AND H. G. M'KIM OPEN REAL ESTATE OFFICE

David Bailey and H. G. McKim have opened an office at 602 Wainwright Building for conducting a general real estate business, including sales, leasing, rent collections, loans and insurance. For the last three years Bailey has been connected with the sales department of Edward L. Bakewell's office, and for 14 months prior to that was Ordinance Department representative in the Real Estate Service of the War Department at Washington. He previously was connected with the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co. as salesman. McKim for a number of years was with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., in the financial department, and recently was associated with Lynton T. Block & Co., insurance writers. He will specialize in the sale of residences, flats and apartments.

RESALES IN WESTMOOR SAID TO RESULT IN LARGE PROFIT

Resales in Westmoor, Clayton road and Pennsylvania avenue, according to the Joseph Darst Realty Co., selling agents, have resulted in some large profits. Offers for some of this subdivision property the past week ranged as high as $100 a foot, the firm states.

Commenting upon this, an officer of the company said that it showed that Westmoor would net every buyer a substantial profit when the improvements were completed. For, he continued, if this property is bringing as high as $130 a foot when the improvements are not completed, it can be seen that prices should continue to go up to still higher levels after the subdivision has been entirely improved.

TWO LEASES REPORTED BY MULLIN-WALTERS REALTY CO.

Mullin-Walters Realty Co. reports the following leases during the past week: The Keen & Woolf Oil Co. of Shreveport, La., have taken a long term lease on the entire ground floor and basement at 4004 Duncan avenue, where they will be located after July 1. The company will use this building as an office and stock room. The Forget-Me-Not Shop has taken a lease on the ground floor and basement in the building at 402 North Nineth street. This store will be used as a salesroom.

DARSTMOOR LOTS SAID TO BE SELLING RAPIDLY

Ten Bought by Builder as Site for California Style Bungalows.

The Joseph Darst Realty Co. sold 10 lots last week in Darstmoor, located on the southeast corner of Clayton road and North and South road, to Roy L. Woerheide, a builder, who was represented by Kempland-Rodemeyer Real Estate Co. These lots will be utilized for the erection of ten up-to-date California style bungalows.

According to Woerheide, these will be of five and six rooms, with hardwood finish, attractive electric light fixtures, a good heating plant, seven-foot concrete basement, and the latest plumbing fixtures. Each bungalow will be stuccoed and of a different design.

Although the Kirkwood-Ferguson car line is close to Darstmoor, it is being freely predicted that the new bus line will eventually run out Clayton road and give Darstmoor residents additional transportation facilities.

An attractive playground has been laid out in the center of the subdivision in order to give the children a place to play and keep them off the streets. This playground, in addition to solving the children's problem will add a great deal of value to the property owners facing it, according to Darst. The lots facing this park, and on the little rise in back of it from which a good view of the countryside is available, are being eagerly sought after by the prospective home builders, it is said at the Darst office.

The business lots are reported to be selling freely. A plan of increasing the price of each unsold lot $100 every month has been adopted to hasten the sale of the subdivision.

One Hundred and Thirty-Seven MILLION DOLLARS
SANTA CLAUS COMING TO
St. Louis property owners. Last October the Terminal Railroad Association increased its capital stock from $30,000,000 to $100,000,000. Plenty of money to pay liberal prices for new railroad passenger station sites, etc., and on top of that the city has voted an $87,000,000 bond issue. The following are good prospects for enhancing values:
Market, s. e. cor. Tenth; 2 stores with rooms above and rear building.
924 and 926 Market, adjoining the above, two 3-story buildings, stores and rooms.
Market, adjoining corner Ninth, 6 stores, rooms above and rear buildings.
Market, near Tenth; 3-story fireproof commercial building; electric elevator.
A new passenger station may be erected on south side of Market near Ninth. You can't keep St. Louis from growing.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

J. O. G.—See answer to "A. W. S."

C. B.—A half dollar of the date 1855 is worth from 50c to 55c.

NO NAME.—The Federal prohibition commissioner for East St. Louis is located in the Federal Building, East St. Louis, Ill.

GRANITE CITY.—On the United States one dollar bill of 1917 there is no cross or picture of the Virgin Mary.

ROSE.—The method by which rose jars are prepared was published under the signature "D. H." in the column of June 13.

J. B. B.—A special election for the purpose of voting on an additional bond issue to complete the payment of the soldiers' bonus was called for July 10, but has been deferred indefinitely. See Editor.

A. W. S.—There is no Checker Club existing at present in St. Louis. However, the game of checkers is played at the Railroad Branch of the Y. M. C. A. and you might consult Dr. Humphrey (Olive 1687) for further information.

MRS. D. R. O.—The Municipal Theater will not open this year on same location in Forest Park as that on which the Pageant and Masque took place. The St. Louis Pageant and Masque was produced on Art Hill.

MRS. C.—To size a rug dissolve one part of common glue with 10 parts of warm water. Hang the rug over a pole and paint the wrong side of it with a paint brush dipped in the solution. It is best to do this out doors where the rug can dry quickly.

1—2—3.—The religious practices of every denomination is uniform throughout the world. We do not know of any religious organizations which require its members to sleep in coffins. Write to the Chief of Police of Lincoln, Neb., asking him for information for you.

J. J. W.—In removing ink stains the material requiring treatment should first be soaked in clean warm water and superfluous moisture squeezed out. Lay the article over a clean cloth. Now allow a few minims of liquor ammoniae fortis, specific gravity 0.880, to drop on it and be sure then saturate a tiny tuft of absorbent cotton-wool with acidum phosphoricum dilutum B. P. and apply repeatedly and with firm pressure over the stain; repeat the procedure three or four times and finally rinse well in warm water afterwards drying in the sun when every trace of ink will have vanished. This method is equally reliable for old and fresh stains, is rapid in action and will not injure the most delicate fabric.

A. J. M.—A polished hardwood floor should be dusted and never scoured. Do not so much as wipe it with a dampened cloth. The dust should be removed with a broom over which is placed a cloth, and the corners of the room are investigated with a soft dry cloth. If there are foot marks which will not yield to the dry cloth, dampen it very slightly with cold water, and erase that one spot. Once a fortnight have everything taken out of the room and wipe the floor with dusters made of old silk. Following is a good formula used to keep the hardwood floor: Melt together in a bowl set in hot water ½ of a pint of turpentine, 2¼ ounces powdered resin, ¾ of a pound of beeswax. Do not let the ingredients come in contact with fire while melting, as they are inflammable. When melted apply to the floors with a soft brush, and polish with a brush.

MRS. D. F.—Fruit for canning should be fresh, firm, of good quality and not over-ripe; if over-ripe some of the spores may survive the boiling, then fermentation will take place in short time. Pack the canning fruit allow one-third its weight in sugar and two and one-half to three cups of water to each pound of sugar, boil the sugar and water 10 minutes to make a thin syrup then cook a small quantity of the fruit at a time in the syrup, by so doing the fruit may be kept in perfect shape. Hard fruit like pineapple, is cooked in boiling water until nearly soft and then put in the syrup to finish the cooking; sterilized jars are then filled with the fruit and enough syrup added to cover; now the jar if there is not sufficient syrup add boiling water as the jars must be filled to overflow. Introduce a spoon between the fruit and the jar so that no bubbles may rise to the top and break; then quickly put on the rubbers and screw on sterilized covers; let stand for a few minutes and screw again, being sure this time that the jars are airtight. While filling the jars place them on a cloth wrung out of hot water.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

RICH.—We do not give advice of this character.

J. E.—We do not know the composition, its merits or demerits.

J. K.—Graham bread and salty crackers are fattening.

TOM.—Tattooing can be removed but it should only be attempted by a competent dermatologist.

M. C. M.—White iodine is used in the same manner as the ordinary iodine.

H. S. E.—We suppose that you refer to varicose veins, if so, such veins should be supported by an elastic bandage or stocking.

TURKISH BATH.—Turkish baths aid in the reduction of flesh due to the profuse perspiration induced. Individuals differ as to the time and frequency of the bath depending upon physical reaction. The dependable method of reducing the bust is to reduce the general body fat.

MRS. T. P.—You should take your baby to a physician. The condition may be eczema or a recurring case of boils. Evidently, also he has some bronchial trouble. Do not try home treatment on your child.

B. O. B.—For itching and burning of the skin try mopping with zinc oxide and calamine lotion, every three hours and let it dry on. Repeat your question making a request for the names of physicians and enclose a stamped addressed envelope for reply.

MRS. T. M.—We do not feel competent to offer any advice in such a complicated condition as you describe, which has extended over such a length of time. Such a case would require exhaustive examination and intensive study of a high class medical man. We suggest that you consult such a one.

R. H.—Styes on the eyes are matters of infection and reinfection. The eyes should be frequently bathed in a solution of boric acid and any existing styes when ready should be opened and drained. Care should be taken of the fingers, and cloths such as handkerchiefs, etc., to prevent reinfection. In stubborn cases vaccines may be used.

USED CAR WEEK

10 Years in Business
Is Back of Every
Lewis Used Car

During our ten years in the automobile business we have made it our earnest endeavor to satisfy completely every buyer of a car. That we have been successful is proven by the immense number of St. Louisans who have purchased car after car from us. Hundreds have bought used cars from us and, entirely pleased, have come back again for new cars or other used cars. In our selling we have traded in a number of cars in splendid condition. These we are selling now during Used Car Week. Every one is backed by the satisfaction we have created through ten years of satisfying our large army of customers. At our Used Car Department you will find some remarkable values in used cars, reconditioned, ready to serve you in business or to make those you love happy on these beautiful Summer days, when riding is such a delightful pastime.

Wonderful Values in Used Cars From $150 to $1000

Come to our Used Car Department and see the splendid values and good selection we are offering. Any car you buy will please. Terms arranged to suit your pocketbook. See these cars, described below, and others, space does not permit our describing here.

1920 CHANDLER TOURING, 5-PASSENGER, $550. Come early if you want this splendid buy. Good black paint. First-class mechanical condition. Good tires and Ferguson lock.

1921 DODGE TOURING, 5-PASSENGER, $550. First-class mechanically. Paint good. Tires in excellent shape. Top and upholstery are entirely O. K. See it and you will scarcely believe the price possible. See it today.

1920 LIBERTY TOURING, 5-PASSENGER, $375. Certainly a mighty low price for such a splendid car. Freshly painted. Has good upholstery and top, and first-class tires. Come and see it today.

1918 OLDSMOBILE EIGHT TOURING, 7-PASS., $300. Somebody is going to get a real car for the money if they buy this. In good mechanical condition, good paint and good tires. Look it over.

1920 CHANDLER DISPATCH, 4-PASS., $600. Sport model. Just out of paint shop. Finished in leather brown, with red wheels. Put in first-class condition mechanically. Top and upholstery in good shape. Also tires, Ferguson and Johnson locks and sunvisor. A real buy.

1920 CHANDLER CHUMMY ROADSTER, 4-PASSENGER, $500. Just repainted and gone over thoroughly by our mechanics and reconditioned. Good tires. Top and upholstery first-class. Parking light and Ferguson lock come with this car. Somebody will grab it quickly. Why not you?

1921 CHANDLER COUPE, 4-PASSENGER, $975. Good paint. Upholstery and top in splendid condition. Seat covers. Five good cord tires. Equipped with bumper, stop-light and Ferguson lock. A great bargain for someone.

1919 DODGE SEDAN, 5-PASSENGER, $550. Just out of the paint shop and mechanically O. K. Good upholstery and excellent tires. Equipped with two bumpers, parking and stop light, seat covers, special steering wheel and Johnson lock. One of the best bargains we have ever offered.

USED CAR WEEK

EVERYBODY DRIVES A USED CAR

Did you ever stop to think that everybody drives a used car? Frequently there are opportunities to buy a high-grade car that is only slightly used, and buy it at a price far below its real value.

We offer you an opportunity every day of the week to buy a good dependable motor car that will give you thousands of miles of good service at a low cost. Listed here are several examples of the sort of values you will find in our Used Car Department any time you call.

Knocking 'Em Cold

1920 - THE FABLE OF YAHLEM - 1923

I'm a plain guy and I talk plain United States.

There's nothing fancy about me except the way I knock 'em for a row of pins when it comes to staging a used car sale, and I modestly admit that at that kind of a pastime, I'm the cumquoits, which is highbrow language for infant grapefruit.

Nearly 3 years ago I pokes my nose into the used car skirmish and the knocks I get from my fellow dealers makes the battle of Bull Run look like a pink tea social. They says I'm goofy—I'm crazy—I'm bugs; I can't last the season—I'll go broke; I'm meat for the auctioneer—I'm a candidate for the squirrels, and other sweet nicknames.

And what's the big idea? All because I had the nerve to announce that I am for the working man; that I was going to sell cars so cheap and on such long and easy terms that no one could have an excuse for not owning an Auto.

When I announced to the blear-eyed universe that I was going to charge NO INTEREST, there was a gentle snicker of boos and ha-ha's that Pussy Foot Johnson hears it plumb over in Piccadilly and beats it back figuring the 18th commandment has went foul on him.

Anyhow, I plead guilty to putting it over. Ask any one of my 3000 satisfied customers. Ask any one of the boys who know that I am batting better than 125 used cars per month. What do they think of

NO INTEREST — NO BROKERAGE — LONG TERMS —

WONDERFUL ASSORTMENT AND A GUARANTEE?

What's the answer? You said it.

YAHLEM is now a household word and it spells "The Workingman's Friend." "The Price Wrecker." "The Used Car King." "The Guy Who Put the Cheap in Used Cars."

And now, in this Red Tag Sale, Oh! Boy—I'm a little leary myself at the low prices I'm offering, but I must and will be the leader regardless of the sacrifice.

USED CAR WEEK

USED—BUT USEFUL

30 splendidly reconditioned Automobiles offered at a tremendous sacrifice for immediate sale.

These Cars have been carefully gone over and at their price and condition establish a new standard for Used Car Value.

We have cut our price to the quick for this sale because our semi-annual inventory comes in a few days and we want to clear out our Used Cars. Despite reductions, we expect to offer the same quality of service, back up our cars with the same assurance of satisfaction that has made the name, "DIESING," synonymous with pleased customers throughout the St. Louis territory.

Listed below are just a few of the remarkable values we offer now.

We don't want more people than we can handle so are not quoting the very low prices at which we are selling these Cars.

4	Ford Coupes, 1918 to 1921.	3	Hudson Coupes, 1919 to 1923.
2	Hudson Speedsters, 1919 to 1921.	1	Essex Coach, 1923.

Reduced Prices

We have reduced our prices on used cars during this sale to a point where you will wonder how such prices are possible.

The first half of the year is almost over and we take stock soon. We hope that we are not compelled to list a single used car in our inventory—that's why we are quoting sacrifice prices to sell them all.

If you want a bargain in a used car, to enjoy your vacation, now is the time to get it. Never again will we offer used cars at such prices. The best season in the year to enjoy using a car is now.

Below are listed a number of cars that will meet your approval and save you money.

We have traded some of these cars in on new Studebakers at lower prices than other dealers offered for them, because their owners wanted Studebakers.

These are plain, cold facts. During this sale we do not expect to get every cent we allowed for them. We want to clear out our stock. We must sell a large number of cars, and that is the reason for the low prices.

You can help us and benefit yourself by buying a car at the low prices at which we offer them.

Every car has been overhauled by our mechanics, and the paint is in AA1 condition—practically as good as a new car.

If you buy a car and are not fully satisfied within three days, come back with it, and we will give you credit for every cent you have paid in, on any other used car in our stock.

Come and see today how far your money will go, how every dollar of it will buy more car than has ever before been offered you. Terms to satisfy your pocketbook are offered.

DOUBLE KILLING LACKS POSITIVE SOLUTION

Cousin Denies Knowledge of How Mr. and Mrs. Seid Alloway Came to Death.

Police investigation yesterday failed to establish positively a generally believed solution of the shooting of Seid Alloway, 35 years old, and his wife, Helen, 26 years old, who were found dead in their bedroom at 1929 Hickory street early yesterday morning.

A succession of revolver shots, first five and then two more after an interval during which Mrs. Alloway was heard to speak, indicated to detectives that she shot her husband and then either killed herself or was slain by Hammie Shane, cousin of the dead man, who roomed in their apartment.

Shane was caught as he ran from the place in his undershirt. The garment was bloody. He suffered an epileptic stroke during a struggle with police officers and now is a prisoner at the City Hospital. He has denied any knowledge of the affair.

Mrs. Ida Vogel, her son Chris, 22, and her daughter, Ida, 19, who occupy rooms behind the Alloway apartment, told police they heard the shots fired and the conversation and are of the opinion that events happened in the sequence outlined by the prevailing theory.

They reported that after the first shots they heard someone move the sliding doors which separate the room Shane slept in from the Alloway quarters. Then Mrs. Alloway said, 'Hannie, Seid is shot." There was silence and then two more reports.

Two empty revolvers were found, both smelling of freshly exploded powder. Shane was carrying one when arrested and the other was discovered on a table in the room.

The Alloways had been married about a year. Neighbors say Mrs. Alloway was jealous of her husband and frequently accused him of flirting. He was a confectioner. Shane is 25 years old and a war veteran.

Laborer Ends His Life.

Frank Millerson, 60 years old, a laborer, was found hanging at 2 p. m. yesterday in his room at the house of Mrs. Mary Mead, 4557A McKinley avenue. He had strangled himself by tying a rope to the door hinge and throwing his weight upon it. The body was taken to the morgue. Millerson, so far as known, has no relatives.

21 YEARS IN BRIDGE FIGHT AND STILL AT IT

Frank Gerhart on Job Early and Late at City Hall—Succeeds in Getting Action.

A canvass of the city hall to determine the busiest man there in recent weeks probably would result in the description being attached to the bustling personage of Frank H. Gerhart, real estate dealer and so-called "father of the free bridge." This despite the fact he is not listed in any of the pay rosters of the "phalanx's thousands."

His recent activity has centered, as usual, about the free bridge, in whose battles Gerhart has figured for 21 years. Early and late he has been at the city hall in the last four weeks, seeking action on the proposed northeast railroad approach, of which he is chief advocate, and ousting of the Terminal Railroad Association from the west railroad approach.

Arrives Early.

Gerhart has spent more time there than many of the department heads. He has showed up when the earliest comers, Comptroller Nolte and Director Fisk, brush the janitors out of the way, and remained through the day as long as any of the department heads resisted the lure of Sportsman's Park, or afternoon inspection tours "in the field."

The bridge question has been kept constantly before the five directors of the Board of Public Service and Gerhart has appeared regularly at sessions of that board, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, the Board of Aldermen and its Public Utilities Committee, as well as battling for the approach, which is a bond issue project, before the Citizens' Supervisory Committee, of which he is a member. President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, said Gerhart called on him three and four times a day when a bridge ordinance was being drafted.

He succeeded in both moves and reached a climax Friday when the Board of Aldermen passed an ordinance directing an early start on condemnation of the site of the northeastern approach. At the same time he was on the defensive in a hot verbal fight in the Citizens' Supervisory Committee, resulting from a demand by members that Gerhart explain charges, made in connection with that bill, that members of the committee opposed the approach because they were friendly to the Terminal.

Resignation Demanded.

His resignation was demanded as a result of the charges, but no action was taken. After the tilt ended in the Supervisory Committee Gerhart went to the aldermanic chambers, where he was congratulated by several Aldermen on passage of the condemnation bill.

"I have been on the job at the City Hall constantly for four weeks," Gerhart told a reporter, "and virtually have been sleeping at the hall."

Gerhart, in response to a question estimated he had spent about $16,000 in the various Free Bridge issues in the 21 years, sometimes supporting projects affecting it and bitterly opposing others which, in his opinion, would hamper its operation. Included in the activities, he said, were more than a dozen trips to Washington on legislative matters, particularly keeping alive the Federal grant which enables the city to condemn ground for the bridge in Illinois.

AUTOS HIT MAN AND WOMAN

Both in Serious Condition As Result of Injuries.

Mrs. Mary Curbar, 50, a housemaid at 6137 Delmar boulevard, and Edward Holland, 54, of 5521 Cook avenue, were taken to the city hospital last night in a serious condition with injuries suffered when they were struck by automobiles.

Mrs. Curbar, who was cut about the scalp and thigh, was knocked down by a westbound machine on Delmar west of the Wabash depot and Holland, who suffered scalp wounds, was struck by a southbound automobile at Grand boulevard and Page avenue.

CAR FRACTURES GIRL'S SKULL

Marie Gelter, 10, Struck by Automobile, Is in Critical Condition.

Marie Gelter, 10 years old, of 707 Carroll street, suffered a fractured skull at 4 p. m. yesterday when struck by an automobile at Seventh and Carroll streets.

The driver of the car, Henry Rodden of 3230 South Ninth street, told police the little girl dashed from the east to the west side of Seventh street directly in the path of his machine. At the city hospital it was said her condition is critical.

Champion "Steer Roper" Killed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PAWHUSKA, Ok., June 16.—The body of Henry Grammer, 41 years old, former world's champion "steer roper" who died of a broken neck sustained in an automobile accident here yesterday, will be interred in a mausoleum at Ponca City. Grammer was married to Ida Alexander, one of the wealthiest women in the Osage Indian tribe. He owned or controlled 2,500 acres of Osage range and farm land.

Dies of Injuries From Fall.

Henry Konersmann, 26 years old, of 3937 Schiller place, died at City Hospital at 6:30 a. m. yesterday from a fracture of the skull suffered Friday night in a fall down the steps of his brother's home at 3641 Schiller place. He complained of feeling ill when he returned home at 5:30 p. m. Friday, and later went for a stroll. He apparently fell backward while ascending the concrete steps in front of his brother's home.

POLICE HOPE TO FIND MAN WHO SHOT NEGRO

Auto Salesman Tells How White Man Began Quarrel at Inn With Cabaret Singer.

Although a Coroner's verdict of homicide by a party unknown to the jury was returned yesterday in the case of Isaac H. Young, negro cabaret singer, who was fatally shot early Tuesday at Suburban Inn, the police have obtained information through which they believe they will be able to establish the identity of the slayer.

Waldron F. Crowley, an automobile salesman, informed the police that he gave Young a "lift" from Link's roadhouse on Manchester Road to Suburban Inn, where Young was going to visit some negro entertainers and, that as he entered the inn Young was approached by a white customer who demanded "what's this negro doing here?"

The white man evidently presumed that Young was entering the inn as a customer, Crowley said. As Young and the man who had intercepted him became eng

Bright Gems of Humor From The Pen of O. Henry

"You have tought well, Sir Knight," said the King. "If there is any boon you crave, you have but to name it."

The rent problem as a vital topic 25 years ago—Clever take-off on the romantic style of Anthony Hope—The Connecticat Yankee and the rip-snorting Texas bad man—Perils of having a mind-reading wife—A tale of wintry blasts with an odd twist :: :: :: ::

TO THE millions who have enjoyed the intimitable short stories of O. Henry it has only recently become known that many of his earlier writings were not included in book editions of his works. The series now being printed in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine is a valuable addition to the O. Henry library. This is the fourth installment of sketches and stories that originally were published in the Houston Post more than 25 years ago. More will follow.

A BRILLIANT IDEA.

HE was seated on an empty box on Main street late yesterday evening, during the cold, drizzling rain. He was poorly clad and his thin coat was buttoned up high under his chin. He had a woeful, harassed appearance, and there was something about him that indicated that he was different from the average tramp who beats his way by lies and fraud.

The Post man felt a touch of sympathy and went up to him and said:

"There's a place around the corner where you can get a lunch and lodging for a small sum. When did you strike town?"

The man gazed at the reporter out of his small, keen eyes and said:

"You're a new man on the Post, are you not?"

"Yes, comparatively."

"Do you see that block of three-story buildings over there?"

"Yes."

"Well, I own them and I was just sitting here studying what I'm going to do."

"What's the trouble?"

"Why, the walls are cracking and bulging out on the sides, and I'm afraid I'm going to have to put a lot of money into repairs. I've got over 100 tenants in those buildings."

"I'll tell you what to do."

"What?"

"You say the walls are bulging out?"

"Yes."

"Well, that makes more room everywhere. You just raise all your tenants' rent on account of the extra space."

"Young man, you're a genius. I'll put rents up 20 per cent tomorrow."

And one more capitalist was saved.

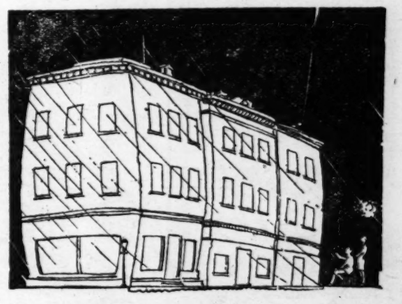
THE PRISONER OF ZEMBLA.

By Anthony Hoke.

SO THE King fell into a furious rage, so that none durst go near him for fear, and he gave out that since the Princess Astla had disobeyed him there would be a great tourney, and to the knight who should prove himself of the greatest valor he would give the hand of the Princess.

And he sent forth a herald to proclaim that he would do this.

And the herald went about the country making his desire known, blowing a great tin horn and riding a noble steed that pranced and gamboled; and the villagers gazed upon him with awe and said: "Lo! that is one of them tin-horn gamblers concerning which the chroniclers have told us."



"The walls are bulging out on the sides and I'll have to spend a lot on repairs."

And when the day came, the King sat in the grandstand, holding the gage of battle in his hand, and by his side sat the Princess Astla, looking very pale and beautiful, but with mournful eyes, from which she scarce could keep the tears.

And the knights who came to the tourney gazed upon the Princess in wonder at her beauty, and each swore to win her so that he could marry her and board with the King. Suddenly the heart of the Princess gave a great bound, for she saw among the knights one of the poor students, with whom she had been in love.

"You can't fool me," she said. "You were thinking of a red-haired girl named Maud."

The knights mounted and rode in a line past the grandstand, and the King stopped the poor student, who had the worst horse and the poorest caparisons of any of the knights, and said:

"Sir knight, prithee tell me of what that marvelous shaky and rusty-looking armor of thine is made?"

"Oh, King," said the young knight, "seeing that we are about to engage in a big fight, I would call it scrap iron, wouldn't you?"

"Ods bodikins!" said the King. "The youth hath a pretty wit."

The tourney lasted the whole day, and at the end two of the knights were left, one of them being the Princess' lover.

"Here's enough for a fight, anyhow," said the King. "Come hither, O knights; will ye joust for the hand of this lady fair?"

"We joust will," said the knights.

"The two knights fought for two hours, and at length the Princess' lover prevailed and stretched the other upon the ground. The victorious knight made his horse caracole before the King and bowed low in his saddle.

On the Princess Astla's cheek was a rosy flush; in her eyes the light of excitement vied with the soft glow of love; her lips were parted, her lovely hair unbound, and she grasped the arms of her chair and leaned forward with heaving bosom and happy smile to hear the words of her lover.

"You have fought well, Sir Knight," said the King. "And if there is any boon you crave you have but to name it."

"Then," said the knight, "I will ask you this: I have bought the patent rights in your kingdom for Schneidear's celebrated monkeywrench, and I want a letter from you indorsing it."

"You shall have it," said the King, "but I must tell you that there is not a monkey in my kingdom."

With a yell of rage the victorious knight threw himself on his horse and rode away at a furious gallop.

The King was about to speak when a horrible realization flashed upon him and he fell dead in the grandstand.

"Zounds!" he cried, as he expired. "He has forgotten to take the Princess with him."

THE "BAD MAN."

A BOLD, bad man made a general display of himself in a Texas town a few days ago. It seems that he'd imbibed a sufficient number of drinks to become anxious to impress the town with his badness, and when the officers tried to arrest him he backed up against the side of a building and defied arrest.

A considerable crowd of citizens, among whom were a number of drummers from a hotel close by, had gathered to witness the scene.

The bad man was a big, ferocious-looking fellow, with long, curling hair that fell on his shoulders, a broad-brimmed hat, a bucksin coat with fringe around the bottom and a picturesque vocabulary. He was flourishing a big six-shooter and swore by the bones of Davy Crockett that he would perforate the man who attempted to capture him.

The City Marshal stood in the middle of the street and tried to reason with him, but the bad man gave a whoop and rose up on his toes, and the whole

The Strange Case of the Late Herr Becker

The German diplomat whose funeral was held twice, with a different corpse each time, caused the police of a South American city a long chase before an undiplomatic error he committed brought about swift and tragic solution of a mysterious murder in which he figured as both victim and perpetrator

By BEN LUCIEN BURMAN.

(This story of what is unquestionably one of the most remarkable crimes in recent South American history was told the writer by Senor Arturo Venegas, Chief of Police of Valparaiso, Chile, while attending the International Police Conference in New York City.)

IN A HIGH tower close by the stately German legation at Santiago, Chile, a clock sounded 2. An attendant opened the door of the Chancellor's impressively furnished chamber.

"Herr Becker!" he called.

No response. The attendant glanced quickly about. Thinking the official in another room, he was about to depart, when his eye caught a long object stretched out under the great oaken table monopolizing the center of the office. He drew closer, then bolted back in horror. The long object was the bloody, lifeless body of the man whose name only an instant before he had pronounced, Herr William Becker, Chancellor of the German legation.

Terrified, the attendant fled to his chiefs and, trembling, reported the ghastly discovery. The police arrived, for a close, shocked scrutiny; the Germans watched and shuddered at the butchery before them. For the head of their all-potent master had been staved in with some heavy instrument, his body ripped open with a knife, his left leg shattered, his face charred almost beyond recognition.

Not a clew to the motive actuating such appalling savagery. Becker's money and watch rested in his pockets undisturbed. Obviously the reason was not personal robbery. The officers argued, theorized. Perhaps the motive lay far deeper, diplomatic intrigues, a foreign Government wishing to steal secret, mysterious papers, whose agent, suddenly discovered, had slain to conceal the theft.

A vigilant inventory of the archives was instituted. Not a document was missing. Thwarted blackmail was advanced as a hypothesis. Becker's past was microscopically investigated. No scandal was unmasked, no enemies found who might have desired his death. In fact, the Chancellor's life seemed singularly calm, spotless. Every employe of the legation—panicstruck scrubbers, sweepers, typists, secretaries—was subjected to a wearing inquiry. All had seen nothing, heard nothing. A master, this murderer.

A single clew for a moment appeared: On the day of the crime a Chilean lackey at the legation, one Tapia, unaccountably had vanished. Searchers scattered throughout the country. Their labors were vain. Not a trace of the lackey was found. Moreover, never had he been considered of the criminal type—a meek individual whose associates were peaceful, law-abiding. The disappearance, therefore, had to be regarded as a coincidence, striking, but only a coincidence.

Days passed. Two attitudes toward the crime were possible: One, that the assassin was a fiend, a degenerate, who killed for the joy of killing; the other, that he had slain for some bizarre reason never to be known, enrolling the crime as one more volume in the library of the world's mysteries.

Meanwhile, Becker's body, after lying in the state befitting an Ambassador, was borne at the head of a slow, black procession and sealed in the marble tomb set apart for the nation's great. Frau Becker, prostrated, dazedly rose from her bed to attend the funeral.

Interment of the victim did not end the quest for the perpetrator. The police could not have dismissed the case had they willed. The Chilean populace was aroused at what they deemed a scar deep in the nation's honor—a foreign envoy slaughtered in the capital—and demanded action. The press at first satirized, then grew violent, assailing the police, the Police Chief. The officers attempted no reply to the criticisms. They knew them true. The public judged by results, not by difficulties, and they had obtained no results.

"The object was the lifeless body of the man whose name only a moment before he had pronounced."

Sitting one afternoon in his office, the Police Chief was picturing again the mutilated body which for weary hour after weary hour had possessed his brain, hoping that thereby inspiration and a new method of attack might be born, when a young journalist of his acquaintance sauntered into the chamber. The usual formalities were exchanged. The youth pulled up a chair.

"Chief," he began quietly, "I've news for you. Good news. Your man Becker is alive. I saw him two days ago."

"Carrajo!" the older man sputtered, for an instant astounded; then he laughed bitterly. "Ah, yes! You joke. You and your press are not kind to me. Not kind. But I say nothing. I deserve all."

"I do not joke, Chief. Becker, Herr William Becker, I saw alive. Two days ago."

The Chief shook his head, gloomily, and protested by a wave of his hand. "Non! Non! Non! On such a subject with me you cannot joke. Becker is dead. Many days is he in his tomb. With sorrow I helped, myself, to place him within. Non! Non!"

Negatives, however, could not daunt the journalist. He insisted, and the Chief, perforce, listened. Sent for information to a small town, isolated, but not far away, the youth declared, he was walking along the street, when a man hurried past. Happening to glance around, he was instantly impelled to stare in astonishment at the pedestrian's fleeting face. It was the missing German Chancellor. Or, at least, his double. To make the identification sure, he had followed the man several hundred feet. There could be no doubt. He knew the face. The journalist's duties had brought him to assemblies where the German dignitary was a familiar figure.

The Chief, incredulous, but willing to credit the impossible, if it might aid in solving the riddle, began the investigation anew. He called together Becker's wife, his intimates who had viewed the corpse, to demand again whether they were certain the body was that of husband and friend. All were positive. Human eyesight was fallible, he knew, and he was not satisfied. Learning of the dentist who cared for Becker's teeth, he summoned the practitioner to headquarters.

"You were the dentist for Herr Becker?"

"Yes, senor."

"You would be able to recognize his teeth?"

"With much ease, senor. I have in the office a record; and yet, without it, distinctly I recollect the teeth of Senor Becker. In the lower jaw at the left, are three fillings of gold. This I know. No other but these hands of mine did regulate them."

"Bueno," smiled the Chief.

In a few days, with difficulty, an order was obtained for exhumation. Wife and friends again were assembled, the corpse was lifted from its coffin. "Is this the body of Herr Becker?" "Yes, Chief." Once more the answer was unanimous. Now the dentist stepped forward. He stooped over the corpse, pulled back the lower jaw and peered within the colorless mouth which had long since ceased to breathe. The scrutiny lasted but a moment. He stood up.

"The three teeth corresponding to those I filled with gold, instrument has never touched; these teeth

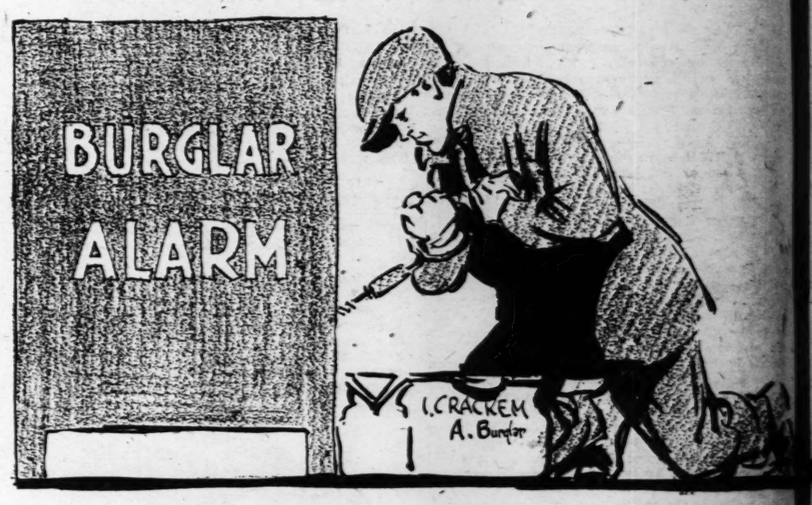
THE NEVER ENDING BATTLE OF WITS BETWE

Underwriters have trusted and honest employes trained to all the tricks of the cracksman's art—How alarm systems and safety locks are put through rigid tests—Attacks of the laboratory engineers are realistic and sometimes venturesome—Art designs on window panes not always what they seem :: ::



MATCHING wits with burglars has become part of the activities of the Underwriters' Laboratories, a corporation organized for service, not profit, by the great insurance companies of the United States to safeguard life and property.

One odd development of this service is that the organization, in order to attain the maximum of efficiency, has trained many of its employes to become adept in all the skillful and cunning devices and tricks of the real burglar. Before alarm systems and theft-proof safes are approved by the laboratories they must undergo rigid tests by men who have never committed a crime, but who, by intensive training in the school of crime prevention are capable of doing anything that can be done by the most expert housebreaker, lock picker or cracksman.

Systematic work to thwart the burglar was begun after an unusually large number of robberies from factories, warehouses and stores in Chicago in the winter of 1920-21, so that it will be seen that this development of efficient insurance protection is of comparatively recent date, though sporadic efforts along the same lines had been made earlier.

A chapter on "Making Burglary More Difficult" is one of the interesting features of a book entitled "The Symbol of Safety," written by Harry Chase Brearley and just issued by Doubleday, Page & Co., from which the following account of the battle of wits is taken.

Burglar alarm systems had been used for about 30 years, but seemingly without much improvement in the average protection afforded. This was due largely to the fact that prospective users were at a loss in choosing from many equipments, because there were no "standards" of design and construction and no scientific discounts on burglary insurance rates. The same thing was true with regard to vaults, safety deposit boxes and locking devices.

Inventive brains had not been idle, new products were forthcoming from time to time, representing various degrees of ingenuity and efficiency, and in each case enthusiastic manufacturers claimed, no doubt sincerely, that the problem of burglar resistance had been solved; but how was one to be sure until the product was tested by some skillful cracksman—and then it might be too late. The situation cried aloud for the obtaining of exact information, for tests to be made by the most highly proficient burglars, at times and under conditions when property would not be imperiled, with resulting classification of a thorough and impartial nature. Proficient burglars, if found, could not be trusted, hence, proficient "burglars" must be developed out of men who could be trusted, and their equipment must be equal to the finest at the command of the artists of the underworld.

It was not long before engineers at both the Chicago and New York testing stations astonished manufacturers of supposedly impregnable systems by "burglarizing" simulated business premises with apparent ease. They had already found weak points. But that was not enough: they suggested specific improvements, which were adopted one by one. A number of confidential reports of criticism written to manufacturers brought back evidence that the industry was alert to profit by the technical study given to its problems by Underwriters' Laboratories.

It was quickly appreicated that even the most skillful and determined burglar needs more than the cover of darkness: He must have time to accomplish his design, and security from knowledge of his presence. Therefore the problem of burglary protection resolves itself into two phases:

1. Prevention or interruption of the attack, through immediate detection of the burglar's presence.

2. Mechanical resistance to the attack.

These are the fundamentals of the investigations now in constant progress.

The first phase involves the use of alarm systems, with indicators, gongs, tell-tale lights, or other warnings, supplemented in cases by the summoning of armed guards; while the second calls for effective locks, bars, plates, boxes, doors and vaults.

All this comes under the problem of protection against the burglar, who is essentially a secret worker, but there is also the necessity for defense in the case of armed daylight bank and store robbers. Against the latter there have been developed special protection systems, with sounding devices to bring reinforcements from the street. These may be considered under burglar-alarm systems, with which they are often combined.

It is the function of Underwriters' Laboratories to determine the effectiveness of all such means of protection as are submitted to it. The first group of devices and systems must be absolutely reliable, for an alarm that does not always work is worse than none at all. The second group can never furnish absolute protection; their value consists in the time required to defeat them, and, in this group, the laboratories determines the degree of resistance offered.

In coping with the problem of protection from burglars, first attention must be given to their prompt detection; in other words, to the alarm system. If this be adequate there may be no need for calling into play the burglar-resistant qualities of the safe, strong box or other container of valuables. Consequently it is recognized as folly for banks, jewelry stores and other places where valuables are stored to neglect this form of precaution.

Various are the methods adopted. Windows and doors are wired; glass panes are decorated with tin-foil ribbon, apparently for ornament, but really to carry an electric current as part of the system of protection; window and door openings are filled with wooden lattice work, so wired as to send in an alarm at the least disturbance; alarms are concealed under thresholds and floor rugs; they are connected with show cases and vaults; they find expression through horns, sirens, gongs and lights, or in indicators at some central station; ingenious burglar traps are thus spread every night in thousands of business places, and in not a few residences as well. No one realizes this better than does the cracksman. If he is to succeed at his chosen calling he must keep abreast of developments in the art of protection. Hence the skillful operators of a generation ago became adept at locating and cutting the electrical connections of these alarms. To circumvent them the manufacturers thereupon devised alarms in which the electric current was continuous while in use, so that its interruption would give warning. Burglars countered this by having batteries which could be connected with the system in order to continue the current while the main connection was being broken, and the manufacturers thereupon produced alarms sufficiently delicate to register the effect of a variation in the strength of the current such as would be almost certain to occur between the regular supply current and that of the portable battery.

It is natural that alarm systems should be of many different kinds. One used to protect a bank vault may cost as high as $5000 or $10,000 and should be able to last for a number of years without calling for repair—especially as to its electric lining, which usually is embedded in concrete walls. On the other hand, a mercantile alarm system cannot be too costly, because small establishments usually hope to outgrow their premises; and also because the walls, floors and doors and windows of ordinary business premises are not sufficiently resistant to warrant elaborate systems; that is to say, a common burglar could quickly "smash, grab and run," whether the system were simple or elaborate. Another consideration is that protective devices are frequently portable and almost always exposed. Take-down screens are sometimes placed in the way of porters, who may shove boxes against them. They must be replacable at small cost. Thus a comparatively new but active branch of the laboratories' work is constantly dealing with a great variety of protective devices for purposes of classification and label as in the other departments.

Alarm systems are classified in two ways: First, as to kind of risk, into bank alarm systems, which must be very sensitive, durable and in many ways highly refined; and mercantile alarm systems, which meet somewhat less exacting requirements. The second classification is into local systems, which are self-contained, and central station systems, which are connected to an office from which patrols are rushed when the signal is flashed.

Every system is graded according to a schedule of credits. It must "pass" its examination, like a small boy in school or a candidate for a civil service job. There are certain credit points for each of the necessary features, and if the system does not win a sufficient number of these points, it does not secure its diploma, i. e., the listing.

A local mercantile system which wins less than 500 points out of 1000 gets no recognition at all. From 500 to 700, it is graded "C" and the minimum requirement for grade "B" is 700 points. For central stations and bank systems there are similar schedules, but the requirements are stricter. These for bank systems form a lengthy document which covers hundreds of items. Central station systems present an additional factor, for the physical equipment is supplemented by the service rendered or supposed to be rendered by the company. As to the latter, claims made in advertisements count for nothing; the basis of the grading is performance. For instance, to get at the important item of "average elapsed time in answering alarms," engineers not only go through the company's records but remain night and day with its forces.

In order that a system may be listed by the laboratories, its follow-up supervision, as in all other lines, must be agreed to by the company. Underwriters' Laboratories' supervision includes the usual periodical inspections at factories, as to materials used, workmanship, uniformity, etc. In addition, the laboratories keeps on examining various installations in use and making inquiries, to counterchek the service rendered by the alarm company.

The most easily understood type of alarm system is the "local" and the simplest classification recognized is that of "mercantile." But even in local mercantile systems there are several broad requirements, all of which must be met. These are as follows:

1. It is not sufficient for a system to be well designed and well made: it must be maintained in good order by the company.

2. The rods or wiring must not be far enough apart for the burglar to be able to spread them and crawl through.

Finally, the gong or siren must be heard at least 500 feet under favorable conditions.

These three requirements seem obvious, yet many devices on the market do not possess them all. This is one of the principal reasons for the laboratories' investigations. In testing a submitted system, the engineers study, first of all, its general design and construction. Occasionally they tell the manufacturer at this point that unless certain improvements are made further investigations would be a waste of time.

Next in order has come the consideration of the system's practicability as to its installation, use and maintenance in business premises—a matter of considerable work.

Following this, there are a number of laboratory tests, most of them made to determine the durability of the various parts of the system as well as of the entire installation unit. As an instance of the durability investigation there may be taken the case of a glass pane protected with tinfoil ribbon applied near its edges in an ornamental way. The manufacturer has supplied several of a standard size, and the engineers, disregarding their beauty, put them through a strenuous experience.

One pane is taken to the vibration apparatus, and its foil is connected so that a buzzer will sound when a break occurs in the circuit. The pane itself is held loosely in steel grooves, and the loose play is increased until it rattles as much as one-tenth of an inch. At the end, if the buzzer has remained silent, observations are made nevertheless for any looseness that will indicate faulty method of foiling.

Another standard foiled sash is clamped vertically and washed 12 times, with hot and cold water and common cleaning compounds such as ammonia, scouring soap, etc. This rarely results in a break in the circuit, but the engineers always look for scratches, discolorations, turning-up of edges of foil strips, etc. Then come tests by moist heat, dry heat and other reproducing conditions of service, and, finally, the burglarious attack tests.

One of these consists in a number of attempts to muffle the gong or otherwise to put it out of commission. This is what many burglars try first to do, and, in duplicating their efforts the engineers make use of clay, tarpaulin, liquid or other materials. As everyone knows, these gongs are frequently inclosed in boxes so wired that tampering will ring the gongs. In making this test, the housing is set up and connected as in use. One of the laboratories' experts, familiar with it—as burglars may be—and provided with proper tools, announces his readiness. "Time!" calls the observer. The "burglar" works swiftly, skilfully and without noise, because this is an "expert premeditated attack." Suddenly the gong shatters the silence. "Fifty seconds," comments the observer. A second method of attack is tried, but just as the engineer seems able to insert a stick in the housing the gong clangs once more. Foiled again! Is this device burglar proof? Not yet, for the expert smiles and tries a third method, which proves successful. A confidential report containing suggestions will be sent to the alarm company.

After using methods involving skill and knowledge of the system, others are tried, representing the efforts of unskilled burglars. These "amateur" attacks consist in desperately speedy drilling, sawing, chiseling, hammering, prying, and so on. All this work is attended with more or less suspicious noise, and depends for its chance of success upon the speed with which it is carried forward. This taking of time is therefore an important part of the test.

The next series of attacks is made upon the protection wiring. This may at first appear to be impregnable, but engineers thoroughly acquainted with the system now get to work and eventually are able to pass through without sending an alarm. However, if it proves to be a long and difficult process, the system is regarded as affording much more than the usual degree of protection.

Where electricity is involved, the fire hazard cannot be overlooked, for no business man wishes to pay for burglary protection the price of a possible fire. Underwriters' Laboratories therefore investigates and tests the system from that angle.

The "central station" systems lay an especial emphasis on the well-known human equation. Of what avail is it for the burglar to incite the alarm and for the alarm faithfully to register that fact in a central station, unless there be a speedy response by able and courageous guards? Here, indeed, is a class of investigations so complicated and technical because of the factors it involves, that no attempt will be made even to give its headings, more than to say that it concerns both the physical equipment and the protection service.

In their usual meticulous fashion the engineers put all the physical elements through the necessary tests, and to this study they add that of the forces employed by the company, inside and outside, clerical, technical and special—their selection, experience, qualifications and special training, and their sizes and distribution; the equipment of the guards and the travel facilities provided for them and the relations of the company with the police department of every city in which it operates central offices.

"Yeggs" and the "snatch robbers" do not try to defeat alarms; they simply plan to get away before the alarm is answered. In a recent fairly typical instance, the same store was robbed four times within two months, while policemen were only two blocks away. In each case the thieves watched their chance, smashed the window with a padded brick, grabbed what was within reach and made their escape by automobile. The alarms operated, but quick work made it possible to get away.

In the robbery of a New York warehouse the robbers evidently knew the exact limits covered by the alarm system reporting to a central office. Going in a motor truck to a point as far away as possible from the building they expected to rob, they broke a window with a brick, thus sending in an alarm, and sped on to their real objective. The first alarm sounded in the central office and armed guards were at once dispatched in a waiting automobile. But on reaching this place, they found merely a broken window, which they reported on their return to the central office. In the meantime, the second alarm had come in from a point a number of blocks distant and before the guards could reach this second point, the robbers had had six minutes in which to make their haul.

For such reasons, many inventors are now working on efforts to combine alarms with apparatus for furnishing resistance, in order to delay the burglar while the alarm is being answered. Thus the battle of wits progresses.

One of the greatest obstacles to the success of alarm systems is the fact that so many of them operate too easily; in other words, they signal when there is no attack. In one central office it was estimated that there were 49 false alarms to every one that was due to thieves.

Such conditions, naturally, are demoralizing. One of the engineers of Underwriters' Laboratories, in making a California inspection, caused a store alarm to be sounded, then stood within the window and watched a policeman who was about 20 feet away. The gong rang steadily for five minutes and the officer never even turned his head. Later he stated that he paid no attention to alarms because they were "always ringing."

Other Things At West Point May

Half wail, half chant, the upper classmen at West Point sing an old song which tells of Benny Havens, rum-runner on the reservation back in the 40's.

Benny Havens, rum-runner, has been dead for 50 years but the cadets at U. S. Military Academy keep his memory green in song which may be heard there today—What the embryo Army officers did to prevent conceit in descendants of Grant and Sheridan—General Sherman, on a visit to his alma mater, and the loose brick in the fire-place —"Thunders of Silence" for administrative officers whose bearing has been offensive :: :: ::

"IN THE army, there's sobriety,
Promotion comes so slow;
We'll sing of reminiscences
Of Benny Havens-O."

Poking about among the historic ruins of Fort Clinton or getting a breeze in the little summer house on Ghee's Point, the visitor to West Point may be greeted by the half-chant, half-wail which extols to those who listen the doubtful virtues of the above-mentioned Mr. Havens.

Knowing that the singing, funereal in its slowness, comes from the group of slim-waisted cadets, the listening visitor may come to the conclusion that Mr. Havens was one of the most famous graduates of what is officially known as the United States Military Academy.

The visitor would be sadly mistaken, for though Benny Havens' fame has been immortalized in song, he wasn't a cadet at all. Instead, along about 1840, Benny was what would be known nowadays as a rum-runner. At least, he was an old fellow who used to be found at different strategic spots on the boundaries of the West Point military reservation, always ready to sell the cadets just those things that the authorities decided the embryo officer could get along without.

Gen. Grant knew Benny, as did "Uncle Billy" Sherman, Jeff Davis and Robert E. Lee. Whether or not these distinguished soldiers were patrons of Benny does not appear in the records, but, if they were not, they probably were very lonesome.

Just who Benny was is shrouded in mystery, but his fame is secure and he is just as much of a West Point institution and tradition as are the "Plain," the "Area" and the little guardhouse, with its "poop-deck," where tactical officers, better known as "Tacs," were wont to watch formations and hand out demerits with all-too-lavish hands.

Benny Havens has been dead more than a half-century. It may be that the restrictions of his day which made his business possible have been removed in whole or, at least, in part. At any rate, he never had a personal successor. Somewhere, he rests in peace, but his memory is always renewed as each class at the academy reaches upper-classdom and is permitted to sing or chant or wail the Havens requiem.

The visitor's ear for and knowledge of music must determine the classification. And, marching songs, football lyrics and other compositions, more popular now, perhaps, while they may have edged Benny toward the edge of the West Point musical map, never can completely push him off it.

Army conditions have changed considerably in the past two decades and, as conditions in the fighting force undergo revision (upward or downward, depending on your individual beliefs as to the proper fighting strength of our army) conditions at West Point also have undergone various vicissitudes. It might be hard for a 1900 man to recognize the old "grey castle on the Hudson" now, for 20 years have wrought even shifts in the time-honored curriculum and modern buildings have, in many cases, replaced those inhabited by the great Generals of yesteryear.

But tradtions at West Point never change. Customs, infinite in their variety, but, from the cadet's standpoint, never stale, continue in force as they did when Hiram Ulysses Grant considered himself fortunate to graduate not too far from the foot of his class and "jine the cavalree."

There is an incident told of Gen. Sherman which illustrates this. When Sherman became the commanding General, after the Civil War, he headed a delegation of famous visitors to the Point. An inspection of barracks was made. In a certain room in a certain "division," came the General and his guests. The two cadets who occupied the room sprang to "attention."

Sherman saluted, as is the custom, and then said, drawlingly:

"Any contraband in this room?"

When neither of the cadets replied, the General, with a smile on his face, stooped down before the fireplace and, reaching up, removed a loose brick. Putting in his hand, he drew forth several packages of cigarettes. This was in the days when no smoking was allowed.

"Thought so," said the General. "I used to hide 'em there myself." It was Sherman's old room. Of course, the General didn't report the find. That wasn't Sherman's way.

It is the general rule that the leader in everything in this world is the most honored. While it is true that at the Point class leaders are respected and, to a certain extent, looked up to, it also is the fact that the last man in the class has certain inalienable rights to honors.

This last man in the class is called "The Goat," no matter what his appearance may be. The fact that he is at the foot of the class gives him the title. Now, at the graduation ceremonies in June, when the diplomas are given out, No. 1 in the class gets his sheepskin first and, of course, is the recipient of deserved applause. But the biggest ovation is reserved for "The Goat"—the man who just "scraped through."

There is logic in this, because "The Goat" probably had to work harder to stay than No. 1 did to finish in the lead. As the classmate once expressed it: "There are only two groups of cadets who have to work hard—the first 10, in order to continue to be the first 10, and the last 10, in order to stay at the academy at all."

In the years between 1900 and 1904 there were several sons of famous men at the academy. Their fathers or grandfathers had won fame on many a hard-fought field or sea. The deeds of these ancestors were part of United States history. In contrast, there were cadets who came from obscure sections and whose parents, honorable citizens though they were, had not "writ large" in the annals of the land. It might be surmised that the sons of the famous were more heartily greeted and welcomed than were the others. Nothing could be farther from the facts.

The case of U. S. Grant III is one in point. There can be no doubt that young Grant's grandfather had brought honor to West Point. And Ulysses III, now a high-ranking officer of engineers, has proved worthy of his forbears. He was a slim youth when he entered in 1899, tall and handsome. Naturally brilliant in West Point's chiefest study—mathematics—he took a high stand almost from the start, and without seeming effort.

Ulysses III was the son of Gen. Fred Grant. Now, if the truth be told, as it shall, when Gen. Fred was a cadet he never was in danger of ousting anyone from the leadership of his class. In fact, he had rather a hard time. It so happened that Gen. Fred was in a high post in the Philippines when his son, Ulysses, was a cadet.

The General, 12,000 miles from the Point, became worried as to the boy's standing in his classes. So he cabled the late Col. Larned, then dean of the faculty. Col. Larned had been in service many years and had been an instructor of the General's. On receipt of the cable Col. Larned replied:

"Don't worry, Fred. Ulysses stands better in everything than you ever did in anything."

To the General's credit, he considered the story too good to be kept.

Well, young Grant entered along with a hundred others, and he was immediately welcomed in true "plebe" style. He was questioned frequently as to his age, weight and P. C. S., or previous condition of servitude. So, he intended to be a General, too, did he? Well, wasn't that nice? And so on, ad lib, and probably to the new cadet, ad nauseam.

Oh, there was hazing in those days. Young Grant can testify to that. Perched on a post in his "plebe camp," the boy sat for hours at a time declaring that "I will fight it out on this line, if it takes all summer," or informing the world that "I propose to move immediately on your works."

Harm? Not at all. He was paying the penalty for having had a famous soldier for a grandfather. The year before, in the same camp, a visitor hiding in the shadows of the trees which inclosed the summer encampment might have seen a short youth, astride a broomstick, dashing madly up one company street

The grandson of General Grant, perched on a post, had to tell them repeatedly: "I will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

Change—But Not The Old Traditions and down the other and crying aloud: "Turn, boys, turn, we're going back!"

It was Phil Sheridan, son of the General who, with these ringing words, turned defeat into victory at Winchester. Julian Schley, nephew of the great Admiral, drew many sets of plans showing the strategy used by his famous uncle in walloping the Spaniards at the battle of Santiago.

Twenty-some years ago hazing at West Point attracted the attention of Washington. A cadet who had resigned had died a year after his resignation. Relatives believed hazing had been a primary cause of the boy's unfortunate death and congressional and army investigations were ordered.

Hazing was probed deep and it was conclusively proven it had nothing to do with the former cadet's untimely taking off. The report of these two investigating committees filled thousands of pages, and it was the thought of many that the reason for these voluminous reports might have been found in the testimony of a certain red-headed cadet from Texas. This boy had a fund of the dryest humor imaginable and, while he respected authority according to regulations, he really could not be abashed by any constituted body, be it congressional or composed of high military officers. He was on the witness stand for days and his testimony added considerably to the number of pages in those report volumes.

The "calling-out" system was under discussion. This was the procedure taken by the upper classes to make a "plebe" fight when he persistently offended tradition. There was a regular code and everything was absolutely fair. An upper classman, as near the weight and height of the "plebe" as possible, was chosen and the two fought, generally early in the morning, with seconds and all the trappings of the duello.

This Texas cadet was quizzed on this point to great length.

"Did you ever have a fight?" he was asked by a grizzled Colonel.

"Yes, sir," was the answer.

"Win?"

"No; got licked. You see, sir, plebes come here feeling pretty cocky and expect to be met at the station with a brass band and a troop of cavalry. Something's got to be done."

"Well," pursued the questioner, "what did you think after your fight?"

Quick as a flash came the reply: "I thought there was at least one better man in the corps than I, sir."

This same chap was a thorn in the flesh of the "Tacs." If two men are rooming together, one of them is responsible for the cleanliness of the quarters, which must be swept out and cleaned up generally every day. Now, at this time, there was a "Tac" there who "rejoiced" in the nickname of "Dusty Joe." He was an officer of cavalry—won fame later in the Great War, but, at this period, had the world's record as a discoverer of dust or dirt in a cadet's room.

The cadet responsible for the room—the tour of duty is a week—is called the orderly. Into the Texas cadet's room, one day, stalked "Dusty Joe." He looked around and discovered, under the washstand, a lot of lint and dirt. He didn't look at the "orderly board" to see who was responsible, but asked:

"Mr. D., did you sweep out today?"

"No, sir."

"Did you sweep out yesterday?"

"No, sir."

"Turn, boys, we're going back!" shouted the descendant of the hero of Winchester, as he dashed up and down the compan street, astride broomstick.

"Well, Mr. D." (peevishly), "how long is it since you swept out?"

"About a week, sir."

"Dusty Joe" exploded. "Do you mean to tell me, Mr. D., that you have not swept out for a week?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well," said the exasperated officer, with cold politeness, "will you be good enough to inform me just why you haven't swept out for a week?"

"Certainly, sir," was the unruffled comeback, "my roommate is orderly, sir."

About a week later "Dusty Joe" came in the room again on an inspection tour. He wasn't going to be fooled this time, so looked up at the "orderly board" and saw Mr. D.'s name. Now, he had him.

Of course, he discovered dirt—this time under the radiator.

"Mr. D., did you sweep under there?" he asked, pointing.

"Oh, yes, sir," D. assured him. "I swept it all under there."

Many a time and oft did the nephew of Admiral Schley draw the diagrams which showed how the Spanish fleet was defeated in the battle of Santiago.

D., the debonair, is dead now, murdered in the Philippines.

It was this same "Dusty Joe" who was floored by the reply of a pretty visitor, the cousin of a cadet. It was all "framed." "Dusty" was rather fond of his influence with the ladies.

Now, the branches of service assigned at graduation depend somewhat on the class standing of the graduates. Of course, the high rankers, generally the first 10, have their choice of any branch, but, as a rule, these brilliant cadets choose the engineers, the other branches following in this order: Light artillery, heavy artillery, cavalry and infantry. Cavalry and infantry are linked and assignments fall to the lower-stand men. "Dusty" was in the cavalry.

One night, walking with this girl, he asked how her cousin was getting along in his classes.

"Fine," was the answer, "but I'm going to tell him to try and be stupid, so he can get in the cavalry."

But when the Great War came, "Dusty Joe" was in the forefront of the fighting, carrying out the traditions of his alma mater in the finest way. Then he had no time to look for dust nor, the official reports say, was his mind on anything but the victory which he so greatly helped to win.

There's another side to West Point life—a solemn side to the tradition of the historic school. Careers have been blasted, others have been helped, by this tragic touch.

It is distinctly a West Point affair—is this "silence."

It is a method used by the cadets to show the extreme of disapproval of a tactical officer's way of enforcing regulations. There are plenty of these regulations. The Black Book contains the "Regulations, U. S. M. A." and the Blue Book has within its covers the "Regulations, U. S. Corps of Cadets." Sometimes these regulations clash humorously. The Blue Book prohibited personal calling cards for cadets while the Black Book stated that a cadet calling on the Superintendent should send in his card. It sometimes took some tall figuring to determine which book to follow.

Now, there are ways of enforcing regulations—and other ways. No "Tac" was criticised for doing his duty, nor was that held against him in any way. But, to paraphrase an old cockney ballad, "it wasn't exactly what he did, it was the narsty way he done it."

When, therefore, a "Tac" offended the code, orders were passed for a "silence," and this was the manner of it.

The officer of the day was one of the tactical department, each one taking a turn. It was part of the

FOOLS AND THEIR MONEY: Ding the L

How "Calvin, the great astrologer," with only a New York post office box address, got money in sums large and little for "investment" on the Stock Exchange by pretending to "read the stars" for tips and promising quick fortunes for his dupes—The pathetic story of the Western woman who sent the mysterious "friend" $113 to invest, so that she could build a new house before winter came—The unsolved mystery of a rogue whose assumed name was a household word 50 years ago :: :: :: :: ::

ON THE envelope was the address "Calvin, Postoffice Box 5027, New York City." The postmark showed that the missive was mailed in a town somewhere in the Far West. Inclosed was a sum of money. The brief but significant letter was signed by the wife of a hard-working citizen.

"This $113 is all we have," wrote the woman. "Please watch the stars well, as we want a new house for the winter."

"Calvin," whoever he was, smilingly extracted and pocketed the cash inclosure. The torn envelope he tossed into the capacious waste basket which his heavy correspondence required. The little sheet of notepaper he filed for future reference. In a blank book he set down carefully the name, address and amount received.

Calvin was his own bookkeeper, for reasons sufficient. His system was neither single nor double entry—it was multiple entry. Yet, for all that, there was no column for outgo: everything was income. To be sure, there was a rather large expenditure for stationery and postage, but Calvin kept those items in his head. The income items he noted down in his book, because they were likely to prove useful. So big was his business, so varied its ramifications, that no man living could have carried all those items in his memory without forgetting some of them to his own disadvantage.

And yet, notwithstanding, Calvin's business was a simple proposition. It was easy, for a man like Calvin. Briefly put, it was the business of discovering easy marks and making them pay for being so: it was a mere matter of finding fools of a certain sort and making them part with their money.

"Dear Friend," wrote Calvin in reply to the Far West woman who had sent him all the family savings, "your $113 is deposited in an old and safe bank here in New York, where it will earn 8 per cent interest until it is invested in stock. We have not only the stars in our favor, but I have a personal friend in Wall street who will give me the benefit of his advice. With this happy combination we are sure of success."

After a few weeks, with no further word from Calvin, the Western woman sat down and wrote another letter to the same address. It was a mild message of inquiry. She was not doubting Calvin, not at all, but winter was coming on, and the old house was hardly serviceable for another cold season. She herself had drawn up a plan for a new house, a modest dwelling, but better than the old one. She hoped to surprise her husband by presenting to him both the plan and the building fund.

"You see," she wrote to Calvin, "he doesn't know I have sent you the $113 to invest in Wall street, and unless I get the big profits right soon now I am afraid he may find out about it and be worried, for he refuses to believe in astrology. He is a rather matter-of-fact man, and laughs at such things. But I have great faith in you and in our lucky stars. Now, please believe I am not hurrying you, but I do so much want to get the house built before cold weather sets in. So, please let me know at once just about when I can expect the money."

Calvin read this pathetic appeal without a smile. The reason he failed to smile this time was that he saw plainly that the woman had no more money to "invest" with him. But he must send her a word of encouragement, lest she kick over the traces and tell her husband. The latter, possibly, might have matter-of-factness enough to make a wild howl.

"Dear Friend," wrote Calvin, "I have been keeping a sharp lookout, but as yet I cannot find a sure thing, so we will not invest until we are sure of victory. The interest on your $113 will be paid semi-annually, and that means you will get the first interest about four months from now. But, in the meantime, no doubt, the stars will favor us. Keep up a good heart, dear friend."

Later the woman wrote, again and again. She got no further reply. Even though her husband might howl, he was too far away to be heard in New York, and of a surety he didn't have money enough to pay his way to that city and accompany his howl with a Wild Western kick. Besides, even if he had the hardihood to beat his way to New York, he couldn't find Calvin, whose habitation was even more mysterious than his name. Not even the Postmaster at New York knew the real name of the holder of Box 5027. All this, you are to understand, happened away back yonder in the middle '70's. Fifty years ago the Postoffice Department was somewhat careless about the identities and the intentions of its patrons.

History does not record the sad sequel to the tragedy of the fond but foolish wife who hoped to get something big for almost nothing and to give her husband a happy surprise. Let the imagination run riot amongst the possibilities. Very likely the man eventually inquired of the woman what had become of the $113 he and she had saved up by scraping and skimping, and she tearfully confessed. If he was a mean husband he beat up his wife. If he was half saint and half sinner he told her she was a silly Sadie, to go and do a thing like that. If he was a true saint he gulped a few times, put on his worn old hat, picked up his battered but not overladen dinner pail, and remarked as he left the weatherbeaten old house for his job:

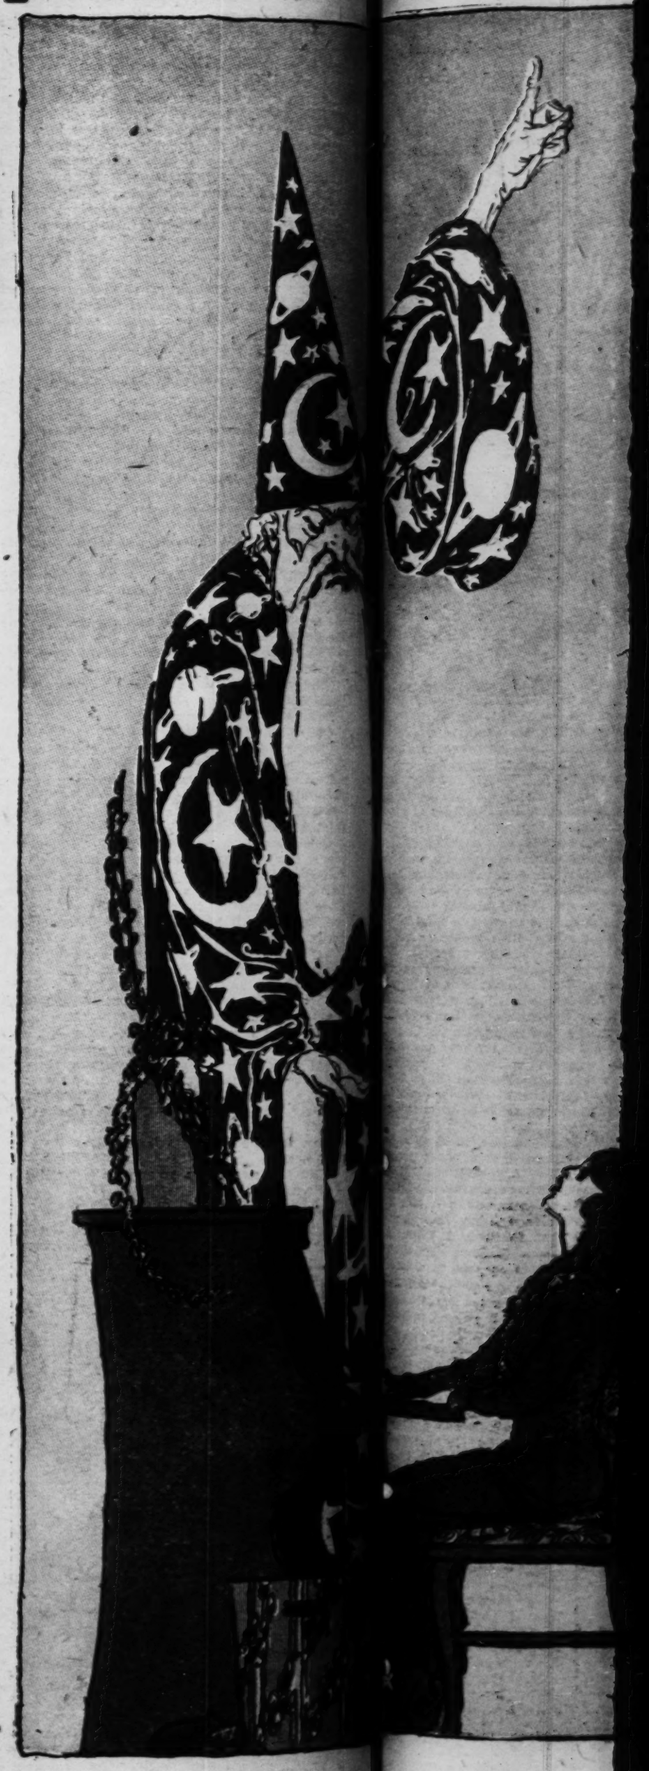
"Well, Sadie, looks kinder like we might have a cold wave 'fore night, maybe."

In any event, Tragedy was there, and with a tall T. But if it be true that misery is fond of company, as certain wise ones have insisted, that poor couple away out West had a lot of company to love in their misery if they had but known it. East, West, North, South, gulf to lakes, ocean to ocean, misery company was here, there, everywhere—brought to misery through the same agency of persuasion, that of Calvin the astrologer. In thousands of American cities and towns, at many a crossroads place, on multitudes of sequestered farms, dwelt their unknown companions in misery.

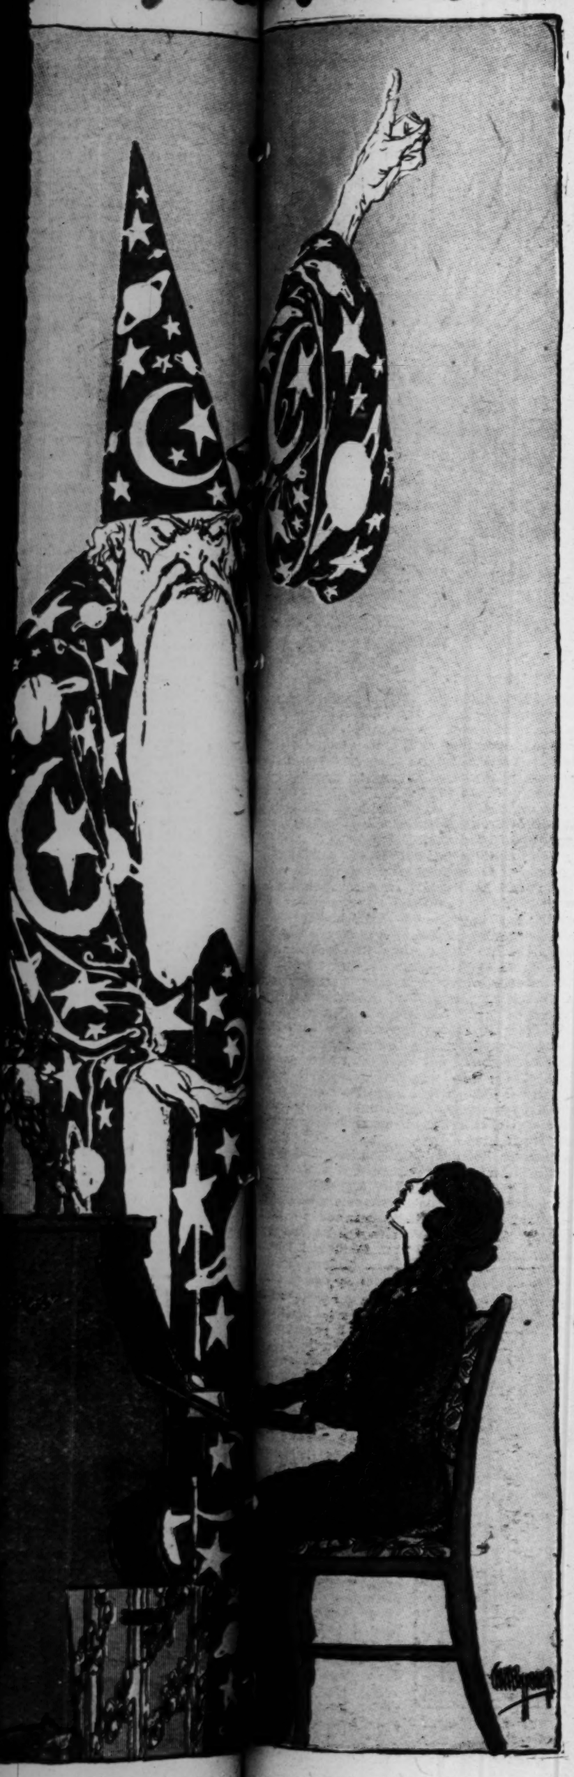
And back in New York—somewhere in that city, apparently, or perhaps in some high-flying suburb—dwelt Calvin, living like a lord in the old days when a lord was wealthy enough to marry for love rather than for money.

Now, just who was Calvin? That is one of the unanswered questions of the ages. It has been 47 years since Calvin, who for a couple of years flourished mightily, disappeared—decamped—dissolved. The United States Government pursued him, more or less half-heartedly, for a few years and then charged him off to profit and loss. Calvin proved to be too elusive for the sleuths of the Postoffice Department. Similarly elusive was he to all the other sleuths who sought him. And for this there was a reason.

The reason was that they didn't know who he was nor how he looked. Much of this same reason was a factor in the noncapture of the late Jesse James of Missouri. The Pinkerton detectives and the State authorities knew who Jesse was, but they didn't know how he looked. Calvin, as you see, had about



...Y: Using the Planets for Wall Street No. 5



50 per cent the advantage of the eminent Missourian in the matter of immunity from capture.

Nobody in the hunt knew whether Calvin was named Smith, Jones, Johnson or Nebuchadnezzar in private—that is, real—life. For all that the detectives knew, he may have been a Wall Street broker down on his luck, who took to astrology as a means of beating back. He may have been a society man in good standing at the clubs. He may have been a group of men, a gang of crooks, though the theory that he was one lone individual is supported by the nature of his operations.

It is enough to say that for some years the name Calvin was a household word in a great many families. The person who used that name in his scheme to defraud had a wider notoriety in the middle '70's, at least amongst those who believed in lucky stars, than had the celebrated Genevan of the same name, who, three centuries earlier, brought about the burning of Michael Servetus at the stake. In America there were many who would have liked to burn Calvin of the New York postoffice box number, but his writings were not acknowledged by him, as were those of the unfortunate Servetus, so there was no definite evidence against him.

The writings of the Calvin of 1874-6, such of them as came to light, were similar to the letters quoted above, in which he acknowledged the receipt of the $113 and gave renewed encouragement to the woman out West. But these Calvinistic communications varied according to circumstances. The fellow was a student of human nature. While for many of his victims he employed mere set forms, for certain cases he wrote original prescriptions. Chief of his literary stock in trade at first was a circular which he sent through the mails to large lists of names and addresses.

In this circular Calvin averred that he was the seventh son of a seventh daughter. Calvin, you were to know, was "the well-known astrologer," famous in his day and age, a man with the gift of foresight. He could read the planets, and from such readings he could advise men and women on the right course to take in love, friendship, courtship, marriage, even divorce. He could tell a young man whether the girl he fancied was rich or poor. He could tell a girl the same thing about the man for whom she had set her cap. He could tell anybody whether a business venture would result successfully or be a failure.

In fact, it was highly important that Calvin be consulted before one embarked on any undertaking. He had advised people, he said, all over America. If anybody needed counsel, all he had to do was to write to Calvin, Postoffice Box 5027, New York City, giving age, exact date of birth, including the very hour, if possible, and inclosing the small sum of $3. If it was business advice that was sought, the fee was $5. Lovers got a $2 cut. Calvin sympathized with lovers.

But the fee for star-reading was just a beginning. After Calvin had raked in many fees of $5 and $3 he branched out. Why continue to carry on a business that brought such little dribs of cash? Calvin the astrologer, the soothsayer, the seer! It was believed that one of his small-fee victims unconscously suggested the stock-dealing enterprise. This individual, it seems, had asked Calvin to invest a little money for him in Wall street, using his astrological ability to determine when to buy or when to sell. Calvin leaped at the suggestion and caught it, clutched it to his breast, nurtured it tenderly until it grew and it grew and it grew. After that he had no time for the chicken-feed business.

Calvin got lists of people throughout the country and began bombarding the names with his new proposition. He pointed out the vast fortunes that had been made, were being made, could be made on the stock market. Some investors, he was free to admit, lost. Some even went broke. But that was because they trusted to blind luck, or something. Calvin never trusted to luck, blind or visioned. He trusted only to the stars. He could read the stars, and by them he could tell just when to invest. Those who sent him their money to invest must win, for there was no hazard whatsoever for those who put their faith in Calvin and his stars. So ran the second circular, and the lines of Calvin fell at last in pleasant and profitable places.

Money began to pour into Box 5027. Sometimes it was but a few dollars. Other times it was a few hundred dollars. Occasionally it went into four figures. But so numerous were the contributions that Calvin's bank account, wherever he kept it and under whatever name, soon grew tremendously. The probability is that he kept several bank accounts, thus diverting suspicion. That he lived high and spent money lavishly is not to be disputed, for men of that ilk have that habit, as a rule. There is nothing ascetic about them, nor anything miserly. But Calvin got too much money to spend all, and it was assumed that when he made his leap into oblivion he landed on a mattress of financial velvet.

When an investor who gave signs of being fairly prosperous showed anxiety in a second letter, Calvin would write to him—or to her:

"The stars are favorable at last. We have invested in such a way that we simply can't lose. We cannot say exactly what your return will be, but it is sure to be a considerable sum."

Those who got that letter jumped for joy. Some mortgaged their homes and sent the wizard more money to invest. Others wrote that they were so delighted with the golden prospects that they were coming to New York to thank their benefactor in person, and he could hand over their profits then. Where could they see him? To these, Calvin wrote:

"Dear Friend: I beg you not to undertake such a journey just now, as I have consulted the stars, and they show that there is death or a disease awaiting you in this city."

That protected Calvin. Everybody who believed in his astrology believed implicity that Calvin was right in that dreadful warning. You couldn't have pulled those folks into New York City on a double-header train.

When an investor showed fresh anxiety, Calvin would send a letter stating that, thanks to the stars and to the friend in Wall street, the deal had returned a handsome profit. He suggested, even urged, reinvestment of the whole sum. The stars were just right for huge turnovers. Why stop at thousands when one might arrive at millions? Frequently the investor sent along such other money as he could rake or scrape. Some poor fish are said to have borrowed from friends, letting them into the great secret and promising a division of profits. Others borrowed without revealing the source of their to-be-vast winnings. When Calvin sent the money, then they would flaunt it in the faces of those who were careful, the stay-at-homes who never took a chance, not even a chance on a sure thing like that offered by the great and famous Calvin.

Now and then Calvin was requested—at times it was even a demand—to send the money at once, principal and profits. One investor wrote frantically that a child of his was dying, and he must have money to pay funeral expenses. One poor fellow's wife was lying dead. Others were badly in debt and were being pressed for payment. To these pathetic appeals Calvin sent the most remarkable letter of all his list:

"Dear Friend: A divining or money rod has come into the country quite recently. It has been used with great success in the Australian gold field. It is a foot and a half long, is composed of gold and silver and is of an elegant and grave workmanship. I can get it for you for $200."

The price demanded for the "money rod" was always more than Calvin had received from the desperate investor. Sometimes it was only $50, at other times as high as $500. Though some of the hard-up victims declined to bite, probably as much because they couldn't find the money as for any other reason, a number of them actually did contrive to raise the price and forward it to Calvin. The money rod was sent promptly. It was a stair rod of brass, with a glass bulb on one end. The directions were to take the rod out on moonlight nights and stick it in the ground. If there was any gold or buried treasure within three feet, grains of sand would be found adhering to the glass bulb when the rod was drawn out of the ground.

Now, if anybody doubts that such fools existed in America only half a century ago, he is cited most respectfully to the well-authenticated instance of the potato-bug killer whose inventor was nipped in the flower—after he had received many thousands of dollars through the mails—by the Postoffice Department not more than 20 years ago. This swindler advertised that for a dollar he would send a sure-thing potato-bug killer, one never known to fail, and guaranteed. He sent two small blocks of wood, with these directions:

"Place bug between blocks and mash."

Calvin, illustrious precursor of the potato-bug genius, apparently perceived that his game could not go on forever. Some day it would reach the ninth inning or the eighteenth hole and Calvin would get knocked out by a passed ball or fall into the hole. He must invent some way out. Accordingly, when clients wrote that the money rod was not working well, or when others made sharp demands that he return their money forthwith or take the consequences, he sent out to the whole far-flung horde of his victims a new letter in a new handwriting:

"Dear Friend: The astrologer is getting very infirm. He has just been stricken with pneumonia. It is feared he is not long for this world."

Occasionally one of the investors, after that, would receive a letter from their old "friend," in which he bemoaned the lot of a man—even an astrologer—who must grow old.

"Everything," he wrote, "goes against me in this year 1876. What has come over me? At times I fail to see the future that even the most commonplace person could see. Alas! I cannot, at this time, recall what I told you. My memory, even that, is failing!"

Probably before he had mailed out all he had intended to mail of these last letters, the goblins got him; that is to say, the postal authorities cut off his boxholding privilege and confiscated some of his outgoing mail. They did not really get Calvin. That mysterious swindler is supposed to have betaken himself to the Far West, though it is to be assumed that he steered clear of the town where lived the woman of the episode of the $113 and the new house that never was built.

Three Infants Who Went To College: A True Fairy Sto

Like the magical transformations in old tales where the changes which came to little youngsters, taken from orphan asylum into State school at Stillwater, Ok., so that girl students might get practice in caring for babies — Each of the trio now has a nice home, legal parents and has been named as heir :: ::

IN THE loved romances of our youth, the kind-hearted fairy used to wave her wand above the little beggar maid and in a twinkling change her to a Princess. Or a beggar boy was changed into a Prince. The tatters vanished, to be replaced by beautiful garments. Poverty and woe were succeeded by wealth and happiness. Often, a fine castle was thrown in for good measure, where they lived happily ever after.

Just fairy tales, of course!

But here shall be set down the story of transformations quite as complete, and as interesting, as the ones described by Andersen and the brothers Grimm. All have occurred within the last two years—and more are on the way.

A nursing-bottle and other paraphernalia of the well-appointed nursery served as the wand. The fairies were a few dozen pretty college girls, aided and abetted by various kindly disposed adults.

Thrice have the college girls said their incantations and performed this miracle: a boy infant sometimes in ailing health, has been taken from an orphan asylum, been lodged in a cottage on the campus of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Stillwater, been cared for and properly fed until he looked like an entry in a baby show and then been relinquished to a well-to-do couple who legally adopted him.

From drab charity, unbrightened by any sort of family ties, to a comfortable home and devoted parents-in-law; from destitution to being formally named as heirs by people who will leave substantial estates behind them—such is the magical road which these three small boys, one at a time, have traveled.

Whether, thanks to the bright-faced co-eds and the adults concerned, the laddies will live happily ever after, remains to be seen. It can't be promised them. But, at least, everything that loving forethought can do in their behalf has been done. Their health has been brought up to par, their new parents are "hand-picked," nice homes for the present and inheritances looming up in the future provide the material background.

Doesn't it sound like the old fairy tales?

One might as well admit, in the beginning, that these magical transformations affecting three small inhabitants of Oklahoma were but incidental to something else. The fairies enjoyed performing their magic, and are awfully proud of the results. But the magic, if you please, was just a part of their regular school course. They had to serve as fairy godmothers, or they wouldn't have been graduated!

To Miss Ella Nora Miller, dean of the School of Home Economics, belongs more credit than to anybody else. She was the first college teacher in the United States who had the idea, and put it into effect, of using a real, live baby in the courses of infant feeding and training.

J. B. Eskridge, president of Oklahoma A. and M., didn't exactly throw his hat in the air and give three cheers when Dean Miller first proposed securing a young orphan, so that the girls might gain practical experience in caring for a baby. It was a somewhat surprising proposition. But the president's permission was soon forthcoming, and he and Mrs. Eskridge have been among the most frequent callers at "Home Builders' Cottage," where the baby lives.

Even during a brief interview, Dean Miller gives the impression of being a go-getter. While looking around for a suitable orphan, she discovered that morphine was being given to some infant orphans, to keep them quiet. Thereupon Dean Miller started a rumpus, the echoes of which have not entirely subsided. She says sweetly that no morphine is being administered to orphans in Oklahoma—now.

The first baby was taken over by the School of Home Economics in the fall of 1921. Upon him they bestowed the name of David. Dean Miller says the only reason for choosing that name was that "it is a good, Biblical name," and that the girls liked it. At once he became the center of interest at "Home Builders' Cottage," and a personage on the campus generally.

A little anecdote will prove the genuine interest which all the student body took in this tiny addition to the college family. There was no appropriation for his support, and no prospect of getting one. In fact, the Legislature never has voted anything for David I or either of his two successors.

So the girls, mainly those in the School of Home Economics, organized a "tag day" for the benefit of Baby David. Even students who were working their way through school could spare a dollar or two to help buy the things needed for David's comfort. And the rich class called the "oil students" dropped from $5 to $50 into the hat. There was no trouble at all in getting a sufficient sum.

But Dean Miller has little liking for "tag days," and next year the club of faculty women assumed the financial end of David's support. Now the Beta chapter of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority has undertaken the burden, although they don't call it by that word. Eventually, it is hoped to dignify David's position in the life of the school with a regular appropriation from the Legislature.

The interest of the general student body in the three Davids who have dwelt in succession at "Home Builders' Cottage" has not been just a spasmodic affair of giving money, according to Dean Miller. She says that, from the beginning, David I, then David II and afterwards David III received much attention. There were numerous callers at the cottage asking to see him. Even the football squad, on their way to daily practice, would halt at David's home for a few minutes, to see the baby, or, if he were asleep, to ask about him.

So declares Dean Miller. The idea of hard-boiled football men, on their way to scrimmage work, turning into the cottage so that they might dandle a squirmy little infant is somewhat staggering. There was another reason for their attentions to David, besides general benevolence, although the latter has to sherlock it out Dean Miller. That reason may be explained.

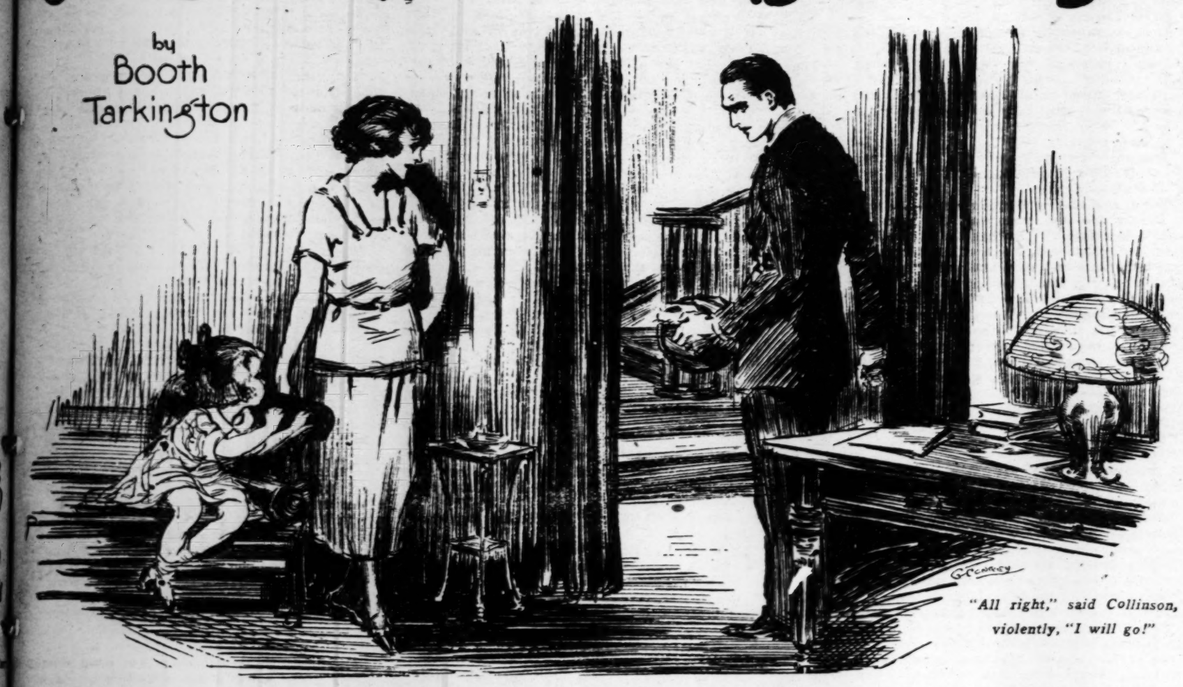
The One Hundred Dollar Bill

by Booth Tarkington



"All right," said Collinson, violently, "I will go!"

THE new $100 bill, clean and green, slid over the glass of the teller's counter to a fat hand, dingy on the knuckles, but brightened by a flawed diamond. This interesting hand was a part of one of those men who seem to have too much fattened muscle for their clothes; his shoulders distended his overcoat; his calves strained the sprightly checked cloth of his trousers; his short neck bulged above the glossy collar. His small eyes twinkled surreptitiously between those upper and other puffs of flesh that mark the too faithful practitioner of unhallowed gaieties.

Obviously the man's small head had a sportive plan in it, for the twinkle between his eye-puffs hinted of liquor in the offing and lively women impressed by a show of masterly riches. Here, in brief, was a man who meant to make a night of it. He was happy, and went out of the bank believing that money is made for joy.

The splendid $100 bill was taken from him unsteadily, before nightfall that very evening. At the corner of two busy streets he parted with it to the law, though only after a cold-blooded threatening on the part of the lawyer. This latter walked away thoughtfully, with the $100 bill in his pocket.

Collinson was the lawyer's name, and in years he was only 28, but already of slightly harried appearance. His dark, ready-made clothes, his twice-soled shoes and his hair, too long for a neat and business-like aspect, were symptoms of necessary economy; but he did not wear the eager look of a man who means to "get on for himself." Collinson's look was that of an employed man who only deepens his rut with his pacing of it.

An employed man he was, indeed; a lawyer without much hope of ever seeing his name on the door or on the letters of the firm that employed him; and his most important work was the collection of small debts. This $100 bill now in his pocket was such a collection, small to the client, though of noble size to himself and the long-pursed debtor from whom he had just collected it.

The banks were closed; so was the office, for Collinson was on his way home when by chance he encountered the debtor: there was nothing to do but to keep the bill overnight. This was no hardship, however, as he had a faint pleasure in the unfamiliar experience of walking home with such a thing in his pocket; and he felt a little important by proxy when he thought of it. As Collinson walked on northward he passed a cluster of shops, where the light was bright, and at one of these oases of illumination he lingered a moment, with a thought to buy a toy in the window for his 3 year-old little girl. The toy was a gaily colored acrobatic monkey that wildly climbed up and down a string, and he knew that the "baby" would scream with delight at the sight of it. He had $12 of his own in his pocket, but the toy was marked "35c," and he decided he could not afford it. So he sighed and went on.

When he reached home, the baby was crying, and his wife, pretty and a little frowsy, was, as usual, irritated by cooking, bored by the baby and puzzled by the dull life she led. Other women, it appeared, had happy and luxurious homes, and during the malnutritious dinner she had prepared she mentioned many such women by name, laying particular stress upon the achievements of their husbands. Mrs. Theodore Thompson's husband had bought a perfectly beautiful little sedan automobile. Mrs. Will Gregory had merely mentioned that her old Hudson seal coat was wearing a little and her husband had instantly said: "What'll a new one come to, girlie? Four or five hundred? Run and get it!" Why were other women's husbands like that—and why, oh, why, was hers like this?

"My goodness!" he said. "You talk as if I had sedans and sealskin coats on me! Well, I haven't; that's all!"

"Then go out and get 'em!" she said, fiercely. "Go out and get 'em!"

"What with?" he inquired. "I have $12 in my pocket, and a balance of $17 at the bank; that's $29. I get $25 from the office day after tomorrow—Saturday; that makes $54; but we have to pay $45 for rent on Monday; so that'll leave us $9. Shall I buy you a sedan and a sealskin coat on Tuesday, out of the $9?"

Mrs. Collinson began to weep a little. "The old, old story!" she said. "Six long years it's been going on now. I ask you how much you've got, and you say '$9,' or '$7,' or '$4,' and once it was 65 cents! Sixty-five cents; that's what we had to live on! Sixty-five cents! - Why can't you do what decent men do?"

"What's that?"

"Why, give their wives something to live for. What do you give me, I'd like to know! Look at the clothes I wear, please!"

"Well, it's your own fault," he muttered.

"What did you say? Did you say it's my fault I wear clothes any woman I know wouldn't be seen in?"

"If you hadn't made me get you that platinum ring"——

"What!" she cried. "Look at it! It's platinum, yes; but look at the stone in it, about the size of a pinhead. A hundred and sixteen dollars is what this magnificent ring cost you, and how long did I have to beg you before I got even that little out of you? And it's the only thing I ever did get out of you!"

"Oh, Lordy!" he moaned.

"I wish you'd seen Charlie Loomis looking at this ring today," she said, with a desolate laugh. "I saw him keep glancing at it, and I wish you'd seen Charlie's expression!"

Collinson stared at her gravely; then he put down his fork and said:

"So you saw Charlie Loomis again today. Where?"

"Oh, my!" she sighed. "Have we got to go over all that again?"

"Over all what?"

"Over all the fuss you made the last time I mentioned Charlie's name. I thought we settled it you were going to be a little more sensible about him."

"Yes," Collinson returned. "I was going to be more sensible about him because you were going to be more sensible about him."

She gave him a hard glance. "Oh, my, but you do make me tired! As if it was a crime my going to a vaudeville matinee with a man kind enough to notice that my husband never takes me anywhere!"

"Did you go to a vaudeville with him today?"

"No, I didn't!" she said. "I was talking about the time when you made such a fuss. I didn't go anywhere with him today."

"I'm glad to hear it," Collinson said. "I wouldn't have stood for it."

"Oh, you wouldn't?" she cried, and added a shrill laugh as further comment. "You wouldn't have stood for it!"

"Never mind," he returned doggedly. "We went over all that last time, and you understand me; I'll have no more foolishness about Charlie Loomis."

"How nice of you! He's a friend of yours; you go with him yourself; but your wife mustn't even look at him, just because he happens to be the one man that amuses her a little. That's fine!"

"Never mind," Collinson said again. "You say you saw him today. I want to know where."

"Suppose I don't choose to tell you."

"I want to know where you saw Charlie Loomis."

She tossed her curls again, and laughed. "Isn't it funny!" she said. "Just because I like a man, he's the one person I can't have anything to do with! Just because he's kind and jolly and amusing and I like his jokes and his thoughtfulness toward a woman, when he's with her, I'm not to be allowed to see him at all! But my husband—oh, that's entirely different! He can go out with Charlie whenever he likes and have a good time, while I stay home and wash the dishes! Oh, it's a lovely life!"

"Where did you see him today?"

She looked at him plaintively and allowed tears to shine along her lower eyelids. "Why do you treat me like this?" she asked in a feeble voice. "Why can't I have a man friend if I want to? I do like Charlie. I do like him"——

"Yes! That's what I noticed!"

"Well, but what's the good of always insulting me about him? He has time on his hands of afternoons, and so have I. Our janitor's wife is crazy about the baby and just adores to have me leave her in their flat. Why shouldn't I go to a matinee or a picture show sometimes with Charlie?"

"I want to know where you saw him today!"

Mrs. Collinson jumped up.

"Oh, hush up!" she cried. "He came here to leave a note for you."

"Oh!" said her husband. "I beg your pardon. That's different."

"How sweet of you!"

"Where's the note, please?"

She took it from her pocket and tossed it to him. "So long as it's a note for you it's all right, of course," she said. "I wonder what you'd do if he'd written one to me!"

"Never mind," said Collinson, and read the note.

"Dear Collie: Dave and Smithie and Old Bill and Sammy Haag and maybe Steinie and Sol are coming over to the shack about 8:30. Home brew and the old pastime. You know! Don't fail.

"CHARLIE."

"You've read this, of course," Collinson said.

A Truly Tarkingtonian Tale of a Luck Piece

"I have not," his wife returned, covering the prevarication with a cold dignity. "I'm not in the habit of reading other people's correspondence, thank you!"

"Well, you can read it now," he said.

Her eyes swept the writing briefly, and she made a sound of wonderment, as if amazed to find herself so true a prophet. "And the words weren't more than out of my mouth! You can go and have a grand party right in his flat, while your wife stays home and gets the baby to bed and washes the dishes!"

"I'm not going."

"Oh, no!" she said, mockingly. "I see you missing one of Charlie's stag parties!"

"I'll miss this one."

But it was not to Mrs. Collinson's purpose that he should miss the party; and so, after carrying some dishes into the kitchenette in meditative silence, she reappeared with a changed manner. She went to her husband, gave him a shy little pat on the shoulder and laughed good-naturedly. "Of course you'll go," she said. "You work hard the whole time, honey, and the only pleasure you ever do have, it's when you get a chance to go to one of these little penny-ante stag parties. I want you to go."

"Oh, no," said Collinson. "It's only penny-ante, but I can't afford to lose anything at all."

"If you did lose, it'd only be a few cents," she said. "You'll work all the better if you go out and enjoy yourself once in a while."

"Well, if you really look at it that way, I'll go."

"That's right, dear," she said, smiling. "Better put on a fresh collar and your other suit, hadn't you?"

"I suppose so," he assented.

When he had completed his toilet it was time for him to go. She came in from the kitchenette and kissed him.

"There, honey," she said. "Run along and have a nice time. Then maybe you'll be a little more sensible about some of my little pleasures."

He held the $100 bill folded in his hand, meaning to leave it with her, but as she spoke a sudden recurrence of suspicion made him forget his purpose. "Look here," he said. "I'm not making any bargain with you. You talk as if you thought I was going to let you run around to vaudevilles with Charlie because you let me go to this party. Is that your idea?"

It was, indeed, precisely Mrs. Collinson's idea, and she was instantly angered enough to admit it in her retort. "Oh, aren't you mean!" she cried. "I might have known better than to look for any fairness in a man like you!"

"See here!"

"Oh, hush up!" she said. "Shame on you! Go on to your party!" With that she put both hands upon his breast and pushed him toward the door.

"I won't go. I'll stay here."

"You will too, go!" she cried, shrewishly. "I don't want to look at you around here all evening."

"All right," said Collinson, violently. "I will go!"

"Yes. Get out of my sight!"

And he did, taking the $100 bill with him to the penny-ante poker party.

Charlie Loomis was one of those neat, stoutish young men, with fat, round heads, sleek, fair hair, immaculate, pale complexions and infirm little pink mouths—in fact, he was of the type that may suggest to the student of resemblances a fastidious and excessively clean white pig with transparent ears. Charlie was particularly indulgent to pretty women and their children. One of his greatest pleasures was to tell a woman that she was "the dearest, bravest little girlie in the world," and he would often bring a really magnificent toy to the child of some friend whose wife he was courting. At 33 he had already done well enough in business to take things easily, and he liked to give these little card parties, not for gain, but for pastime. He was cautious and disliked high stakes in a game of chance.

"I don't consider it hospitality to have any man go out o' my shack sore," he was wont to say. "Myself, I'm a bachelor and got no obligations; I'll shoot any man that can afford it for anything he wants to. Trouble is, you never can tell when a man can't afford it, or what harm his losin' might mean, to the little girlie at home and the kiddies. No, boys, penny-ante and 10-cent limit is the highest we go in this ole shack. Penny-ante and a few steins of the ole home brew that hasn't got a divorce in a barrel of it!"

Penny-ante and old home brew had been in festal operation for half an hour when the morose Collinson arrived this evening. Mr. Loomis and his guests sat about the round table under the alabaster drop light; their coats were off; cigars were worn at the deliberative poker angle; colorful chips and cards glistened on the cloth; one of the players wore a green shade over his eyes; and, all in all, here was a little poker party for a lithograph.

"Ole Collie, b'gosh!" Mr. Loomis shouted, humorously. "Here's your vacant cheer; stack all stuck out for you 'n' ever'thin'! Set daown, neighbor, an' Smithie'll deal you in, next hand. What made you so late? Helpin' the little girlie at home get the kiddy to bed? That's a great kiddie of yours, Collie."

Collinson took the chair that had been left for him, counted his chips and then, as the playing of a hand still preoccupied three of the company, he picked up a silver dollar that lay upon the table near him. "What's this?" he asked. "A side bet? Or did somebody just leave it here for me?"

"Yes; for you to look at," Mr. Loomis explained. "It's Smithie's."

"What's wrong with it?"

"Nothin'. Smithie was just showin' it to us. Look at it."

Collinson turned the coin over and saw a tiny inscription that had been lined into the silver with a point of steel. "Luck," he read, "Luck hurry back to me!" Then he spoke to the owner of this marked dollar. "I suppose you put that on there, Smithie, to help make sure of getting our money tonight."

But Smithie shook his head. "No," he said, "it just came in over my counter this afternoon, and I noticed it when I was checkin' up the day's cash. Funny, ain't it: 'Luck hurry back to me!'"

"Who do you suppose marked that on it?" Collinson said, thoughtfully.

"Golly!" his host exclaimed, "it won't do you much good to wonder about that!"

Collinson frowned, continuing to stare at the marked dollar. "I guess not, but really I should like to know."

"I would, too," Smithie said. "I been thinkin' about it. Might 'a' been somebody in Seattle or somebody in Ipswich, Mass., or New Orleans or St. Paul. How you goin' to tell? It's funny how some people like to believe luck depends on some little thing like that."

"Yes, it is," Collinson assented, still brooding over the coin.

The philosophic Smithie extended his arm across the table, collecting the cards to deal them, for the "hand" was finished. "Yes, sir, it's funny," he repeated. "Nobody knows exactly what luck is, but the way I guess it out, it lays in a man's believin' he's in luck, and some little object like this makes him kind of concentrate his mind on thinkin' he's going to be lucky, because, of course, you often know you're goin' to win, and then you do win. You don't win when you want to win, or when you need to; you win when you believe you'll win. I don't know who it was that said, 'Money's the root of all evil;' but I guess he didn't have too much sense! I suppose if some man killed some other man for a dollar, the poor fish that said that would let the man do it and send the dollar to the chair"——

But here this garrulous and discursive guest was interrupted by immoderate protests from several of his colleagues. "Cut it out!" "Do something!" "Smithie, are you ever goin' to deal?"

"I'm goin' to shuffle first," he responded, suiting the action to the word, at the same time continuing his discourse. "It's a mighty interesting thing, a piece o' money. You take this dollar, now. Who it belonged to? Where's it been? What different kind o' funny things has it been spent for, many times? What funny kind of secrets do you suppose it could 'a' heard if it had ears? Good people have had it, and bad people have had it; why, a dollar could tell more about the human race—why, it could tell all about it!"

"I guess it couldn't tell all about the way you're dealin' those cards," said the man with the green shade. "You're mixin' things all up."

"I'll straighten 'em all out, then," said Smithie cheerfully. "They say 'money talks.' If it could talk, what couldn't it tell? Nobody'd be safe. I got this dollar now, but who's it goin' to belong to next, and what'll he do with it? And after that? Why, for years and years it'll go on from one pocket to another, in a millionaire's house one day, in some burglar's flat the next, maybe, and in one person's hand money'll do good, likely, and in another's it'll do harm. We all want money; but some say it's a bad thing, like that dummy I was talkin' about. Goodness or badness, I'll take all anybody"——

He was interrupted again, and with increased vehemence. Collinson, who sat next to him, complied with the demand to "ante up," then placed the dollar near his little cylinders of chips, and looked at his cards. They proved unencouraging, and he turned to his neighbor. "I'd sort of like to have that marked dollar, Smithie," he said. "I'll give you a paper dollar and a nickel for it."

But Smithie laughed, shook his head and slid the coin over toward his own chips. "No, sir. I'm going to keep it—a while, anyway."

"So you do think it'll bring you luck, after all!"

"No. But I'll hold on to it for this evening, anyhow."

"Not if we can clean you out, you won't," said Charlie Loomis. "You know the rules o' the ole shack: only cash goes in this game; no I O U stuff ever went here or ever will. Tell you what I'll do, though, before you lose it: I'll give you $3.35 for your ole silver dollar, Smithie."

"Oh, you want it, too, do you? I guess I can spot what sort of luck you want it for, Charlie."

"Well, Mr. Bones, what sort of luck do I want it for?"

"You win, Smithie," one of the other players said. "We all know what sort o' luck ole Charlie wants your dollar for: he wants it for luck with the dames."

"Well, I might," Charlie admitted, not displeased. "I haven't been so lucky-that way, lately—not a doggone lucky!"

All of his guests, except one, laughed at this; but Collinson frowned, still staring at the marked dollar. For a reason he could not have put into words just then, it began to seem almost vitally important to him to own this coin if he could, and to prevent Charlie Loomis from getting possession of it. The jibe, "He wants it for luck with the dames," rankled in Collinson's mind; somehow it seemed to refer to his wife.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Smithie," he said. "I'll bet $2 against that dollar of yours that I hold a higher hand next deal than you do."

"Here! Here!" Charlie remonstrated, "Shark rules! Ten-cent limit."

"That's only for the game," Collinson said, turning upon his host with a sudden sharpness. "This is an outside bet between Smithie and me. Will you do it, Smithie? Where's your sporting spirit?"

So liberal a proposal at once roused the spirit to which it appealed. "Well, I might, if some o' the others'll come in, too, and make it really worth my while."

"I'm in," the host responded, with prompt inconsistency; and others of the party, it appeared, were desirous of seeing the talisman. They all "came in," and, for the first time in the history of this "shack," what Mr. Loomis called "real money" was seen upon the table as a stake. It was won, and the silver dollar with it, by a fat man with a walrus mustache that made him known in this circle as "Old Bill." He smiled condescendingly, and would have put the dollar in his pocket with the "real money," but Mr. Loomis protested.

"Here! What you doin'?" he shouted, catching Old Bill by the arm. "Put that dollar back on the table."

"What for?"

"What for? Why, we're goin' to play for it again. Here's $2 against it I beat you on the next hand."

"No," said Old Bill, calmly. "It's worth more than to $2 to me. It's worth $5."

"Well, $5, then," his host returned. "I want that dollar!"

"So do I," said Collinson. "I'll put in $5 if you do."

"Anybody else in?" Old Bill inquired, dropping the coin on the table; and all of the others again "came in." Old Bill won again; but once more Charlie Loomis prevented him from putting the silver dollar in his pocket.

"Come on, now," Mr. Loomis exclaimed. "Anybody else but me in on this for $5 next time?"

"I am," said Collinson, swallowing with a dry throat, and he set forth all that remained to him of his $12. In return he received a pair of deuces, and the jubilant Charlie won.

He was vainglorious in his triumph. "Didn't that little luck piece just keep a tryin' to find the right man?" he cried, and read the inscription loudly. "Luck hurry back to me!' Righto! You're home where you belong, girlie! Now we'll settle down to our reg-lar little game again."

"Oh, no," said Old Bill. "You wouldn't let me keep it. Put it out there and play for it again."

"I won't. She's mine now."

"I want my luck piece back myself," said Smithie. "Put it out and play for it. You made Old Bill."

"I won't do it."

"Yes, you will," Collinson said, and he spoke without geniality. "You put it out there."

"Oh, yes, I will," Mr. Loomis returned mockingly. "I will for $10."

"Not I," said Old Bill. "Five is foolish enough." And Smithie agreed with him. "Nor me!"

"All right, then. If you're afraid of me, I keep it. I thought the ten'd scare you."

"Put that dollar on the table," Collinson said. "I'll put ten against it."

There was a little commotion among these mild gamesters; and someone said: "You're crazy, Collie. What do you want to do that for?"

"I don't care," said Collinson. "That dollar's already cost me enough, and I'm going after it."

"Well, you see, I want it, too," Charlie Loomis retorted cheerfully, and he appealed to the others. "I'm not askin' him to put up ten against it, am I?"

"Maybe not," Old Bill assented. "But how long is this thing goin' to keep on? It's already balled our game all up, and if we keep on foolin' with these side bets, why, what's the use?"

"My goodness!" the host exclaimed. "I'm not pushin' this thing, am I? I don't want to risk my good luck piece, do I? It's Collie that's crazy to go on, isn't it?" He laughed. "He hasn't showed his money yet, though, I notice, and this ole shack is run on strictly cash principles. I don't believe he's got $10 more on him!"

"Oh, yes, I have."

"Let's see it, then."

Collinson's nostrils distended a little; but he said nothing, fumbled in his pocket, and then tossed the $100 bill, rather crumpled, upon the table.

"Great heavens!" shouted Old Bill. "Call the doctor. I'm all of a swoon!"

"Look at what's spilled over our nice clean table!" another said. "Did you claim he didn't have ten on him, Charlie?"

"Well, it's nice to look at," Smithie observed. "But I'm with Old Bill. How long are you two goin' to keep this thing goin'? If Collie wins the luck piece, I suppose Charlie'll bet him fifteen against it, and then"——

"No, I won't," Charlie interrupted. "Ten's the limit."

"Goin' to keep on bettin' ten against it all night?"

"No," said Charlie. "I tell you what I'll do with you, Collinson; we both of us seem kind o' set on this luck piece, and you're already out some on it. I'll give you a square chance at it and at catchin' even. It's 20 minutes after 9. I'll keep on these side bets with you till 10 o'clock, but when my clock hits 10, we're through, and the one that's got it then keeps it, and no more foolin'. You want to do that, or quit now? I'm game either way."

"Go ahead and deal," said Collinson. "Whichever one of us has it at 10 o'clock, it's his, and we quit!"

But when the little clock on Charlie's green painted mantelshelf struck 10, the luck piece was Charlie's and with it an overwhelming lien on the $100 bill. He put both in his pocket. "Remember, this ain't my fault; it was you that insisted," he said, and handed Collinson four $5 bills as change.

Old Bill, platonically interested, discovered that his cigar was sparkless, applied a match and casually set forth his opinion: "Well, I guess that was about as poor a way of spendin' $80 as I ever saw, but it all goes to show there's truth in the old motto that anything at all can happen in any poker game! That was a mighty nice $100 bill you had on you, Collie; but it's like what Smithie said: a piece o' money goes hoppin' around from one person to another—it don't care—and yours has gone and hopped to Charlie. The question is: Who's it goin' to hop to next?" He paused to laugh, glanced over the cards that had been dealt him, and concluded: "My guess is 't some good-lookin' woman'll prob'ly get a pretty fair chunk o' that $100 bill out o' Charlie. Well, let's settle down to the ole army game."

They settled down to it, and by 12 o'clock (the closing hour of these pastimes at the old shack) Collinson had lost $4.30 more. He was commiserated by his fellow gamesters as they put on their coats and overcoats. They shook their heads, laughed ruefully in sympathy, and told him he oughtn't to carry $100 bills upon his person when he went out among friends. Old Bill made what is sometimes called an unfortunate remark.

"Don't worry about Collie," he said, jocosely. "That $100 bill prob'ly belonged to some rich client of his."

"What!" Collinson said, staring.

"Never mind, Collie; I wasn't in earnest," the joker explained. "Of course I didn't mean it."

"Well, you oughtn't to say it," Collinson protested. "People say a thing like that about a man in a joking way, but other people hear it sometimes and don't know they're joking, and a story gets started."

"My goodness, but you're serious!" Old Bill exclaimed. "You look like you had a misery in your chest, as the rubes say; and I don't blame you! Get out in the fresh air and you'll feel better."

He was mistaken, however; the night air failed to improve Collinson's spirits as he walked home alone through the dark and chilly streets. There was, indeed, a misery in his chest, where stirred a sensation vaguely nauseating; his hands were tremulous and his knees infirm as he walked. In his mind was a confusion of pictures and sounds, echoes from Charlie Loomis' shack; he could not clear his mind's eye of the $100 bill; and its likeness, as it lay crumpled on the green cloth under the droplight, haunted and hurt him as a face in a coffin haunts and hurts the new mourner.

It seemed to Collinson then, that money was the root of all evil and the root of all good, the root and branch of all life, indeed. With money, his wife would have been amiable, not needing gay bachelors to take her to vaudevilles. Her need of money was the true foundation of the jealousy that had sent him out morose and reckless tonight; of the jealousy that had made it seem, when he gambled with Charlie Loomis for the luck dollar, as though they really gambled for luck with her.

It still seemed to him that they had gambled for luck with her, and Charlie had won it. Collinson began to wonder how he could have risked money that belonged to another man. What on earth had made him do what he had done? Was it the mood his wife had set him in as he went out that evening? No; he had gone out feeling like that often enough, and nothing had happened.

Something had brought this trouble on him, he thought; for it appeared to Collinson that he had been an automaton, having nothing to do with his own actions. He must bear the responsibility for them; but he had not willed them. If the $100 bill had not happened to be in his pocket—— That was it! And at the thought he mumbled desolately to himself: "I'd been all right if it hadn't been for that." Smithie's romancing again came back to him: "In one person's hands money'll do good, likely; in another's it'll do harm." It was the money in his hands had done this harm to himself.

He had to deliver a hundred dollars at the office in the morning, somehow. There was a balance of $17 in his bank, and he could pawn his watch for $25, as he knew well enough by experience. That would leave $58 to be paid, and there was only one way to get it. His wife would have to let him pawn her ring. She would have to!

Without any difficulty he could guess what she would say and do when he told her of his necessity. The $100 bill had cost him the last vestige of mastery in his own house; and Charlie Loomis had really won not only the bill and the luck, but the privilege of taking Collinson's wife to vaudevilles. And it all came back to the same conclusion: The $100 bill had done it to him. "What kind of a thing is this life?" Collinson mumbled to himself, finding matters wholly perplexing in a world made into tragedy at the caprice of a little oblong slip of paper.

Then, as he went on his way to wake his wife and face her with the soothing proposal to pawn her ring early in the morning, something happened to Collinson. Of itself the thing that happened was nothing, but he was aware of his folly as if it stood upon a mountain top against the sun—and so he gathered knowledge of himself and a little of the wisdom that is called better than happiness.

His way was now the same as upon the latter stretch of his walk home from the office that evening. The air was clean, with a night wind that moved briskly from the west; in all the long street there was only one window lighted. When he came to it he paused, and, frowning, he perceived that this was the same shop window that had detained him on his homeward way, when he had thought of buying a toy for the baby.

The toy was still there in the bright window; the gay little acrobatic monkey that would climb up or down a red string as the string slacked or straightened; but Collinson's eye fixed itself upon the card marked with the price: "35c."

He stared and stared. "Thirty-five cents!" he said to himself. "Thirty-five cents!"

Then suddenly he burst into loud and prolonged laughter.

The sound was startling in the quiet night, and roused the interest of a meditative policeman who stood in the darkened doorway of the next shop. He stepped out, not unfriendly.

"What you havin' such a good time over, this hour o' the night?" he inquired. "What's all the joke?"

Collinson pointed to the window. "It's that monkey on the string," he said. "Something about it struck me as mighty funny!"

So, with a better spirit, he turned away, still laughing, and went home to face his wife.

Three Infants Who Went to College

tions of invitations to dinner. Thus, Dean Miller vouches for the fact that no jeering nicknames have been devised for them by the undergraduate body. Even the crude wit of the sophomores has abstained from David as a target.

So many visitors called at the cottage that strict rules were put into effect. Thus, he may not be seen by visitors if he is asleep. They may not even tiptoe onto the porch where he lies dreaming. He is to be handled as little as possible, and he cannot be "borrowed." He must not be kissed, by anybody.

The five seniors at the cottage take turns in caring for David. For about a week, each girl is individually responsible for him. She prepares his food, bathes him, dresses him and attends to all the other duties necessary. She occupies a room adjoining David's sleeping porch, and if he wakes during the night she must get him to sleep again. No matter how much she must do for David in the daytime, nor how many times she may be up during the night, she has to attend all her regular classes for that week. Thus is the treadmill of the real housewife imitated.

Of course, the girl may leave David for an hour with some other senior when she attends a recitation, but the responsibility cannot be delegated. She has to sit in the classroom, wondering if David is crying, or if he has fallen out of the crib or if the cottage is on fire.

The milk which David drinks is from a thoroughbred Jersey cow, which is given a blood test once a month and fed on a carefully balanced ration. Also, the man who does the milking is tested, too. So the food which the college baby receives is as pure and as suitable for the purpose as modern science can make it.

Although the three Davids have thrived on artificial feeding, Dean Miller is firmly opposed to the practice except in cases where it is absolutely unavoidable.

"Artificial feeding is just a makeshift, and in most cases a poor one," declares Dean Miller. "Unfortunately, it is on the increase, too. The doctors are mostly to blame for that increase, because they order artificial feeding when they see that the mothers want them to. But what about the rights of the baby?

"In my belief, a baby which is artificially fed has 10 years of its life cut off. Cow's milk is not, and cannot be made, a perfect substitute for natural feeding. It does not give the baby a chance to build up the constitution and stamina which he should have, and he succumbs to all kinds of diseases much more easily, if artificially fed.

"Of course, in most places there are laws to regulate the quality of milk and other food products. But often the laws are lax, and more laxly enforced. As for some of the manufactured milk preparations on the market, the makers ought to be in jail. Natural feeding is best, and in almost all cases it is possible, if the doctors will only insist upon it.

"It was the high death rate among Oklahoma babies which made us give such a prominent place to our courses in infant feeding and care. Conditions are much the same in other states, I believe, but in Oklahoma we have investigated, and we know that seven out of every 100 infants die from improper feeding alone.

"We have used the utmost care in feeding our Davids. All were happy, smiling babies, and they did not cry. There is an old superstition that a baby needs to cry, to develop his lungs and vocal cords. What nonsense! Of course, sometimes his clothing is too tight, or a pin might be sticking into him. But generally a baby cries because he is improperly fed and his stomach hurts.

"Let me repeat it, and emphasize it: a baby which is well fed and well cared for does NOT cry."

There are only two requirements which an orphan baby must meet before he or she is taken over by the School of Home Economics at Stillwater. The infant must be of white blood, and it must pass the syphilis test. Otherwise, the general rule is rather to take the one which needs intelligent care the most. Two of the babies have been 3 1-2 months old when taken, but hereafter preference will be shown to those only a few weeks old, and they will be given out for adoption at the age of about 8 1-2 months. It is then, according to Dean Miller, that children first begin to know one person from another, and she says it would be unkind to send a baby away after it had formed an attachment for certain persons.

She tells of a college on the Pacific coast where a 1-year-old orphan was taken by the infant-training department, kept for a year and then returned to the orphan asylum. Not only did the child grieve, but it was so shamefully neglected that it soon became seriously ill. The college woman who had had charge of the baby remonstrated, in vain. Then one day she marched into the orphan asylum, lifted the baby from its crib and took it away for good. She had no authority for the act, which was a piece of brazen kidnaping, but nobody dared to say a word to her, then or afterwards.

David I was taken into "Home Builders' Cottage" at the age of 3 1-2 months, and kept until 8 1-2 months old. Then he went on probation to a wealthy lawyer and his wife. Two weeks later they adopted him, and their will makes him the heir.

David II, who thrived at the cottage from the time he was 2 weeks old until he was 8 months, was adopted by an older couple, who had one real grandchild. All that their will gives to David is a valuable 280-acre farm near Cherryvale, Kan. The [illegible] grandchild gets an equivalent share of the estate.

David III has been adopted by a well-to-do [illegible] er and his wife at Medford, Ok. They own a [illegible] acre farm, and David is named as the heir.

For the future, it is planned to take two infants each year into "Home Builders' Cottage," and there will be no difficulty about finding parents-to-be for them. Already, the Davids for the next [illegible] years are bespoken. Not everybody can get a David, for the applicants, even to be considered, must have no children of their own, must be people of means and must prove that they are vitally interested in the baby's welfare.

How do the girls themselves like this most unusual of "laboratory" courses? "It's awfully hard work, but the best course on the campus," said one of the senior girls, after she had finished her month at the cottage. "I never dreamed that I was that good care to my mother," said another senior, as she finished her stay at the cottage.

Still another girl, who "hated babies," and wouldn't even hold her sister's child, moved into the cottage under protest, and only because she could graduate without doing all the required work, of which the cottage training was part. The experience changed some of her ideas. From loathing David, she came to love him.

The kind-hearted fairy, who she transformed little beggars into Princes or Princesses, had a pleasant custom of decking them out in jewels, too. Each of the three Davids has been given jewelry, by their fairy godmothers have given each of them at least a start on the family plate in the form of a [illegible] lined silver cup. It has two handles, just right for a baby's uncertain grasp.

The cup bears the name of David, with the proper numeral following, his age and weight when he came to the college, his age and weight when he left, and the official seal of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College.

Traditions at West Point Don't Change officer of the day's duties to inspect the mess hall at meal times.

It isn't hard to imagine the clatter of dishes and the added noise of talk when 500 young men are gathered in one room. All of them are hungry and ready to relax after a hard day. To say, then, that the room is noisy, is hardly describing it.

When a "silence" is ordered, the preliminary noise is greater than ever. Then, the mess hall door opens and in walks the unpopular officer. He turns and shuts the big door. That is the signal.

The noise stops instantly. Every cadet sits immovable in his place. Not a dish is touched; not a word spoken. The entire assemblage might have been stricken dead. The "silence" really is deafening, so great is the contrast.

The officer knows what it is. He has been a cadet and he knows. It indicates to most of them that their usefulness as an instructor is at an end.

They take it differently. One Captain, his face blanched, walked to the Cadet First Captain, who acts as superintendent of the mess hall, and demanded in a strained voice: "Is this insult intended for me, sir?"

The First Captain, not a muscle of his face showing the tenseness, rose, saluted and replied, stonily: "I can construe it in no other way, sir."

Out of the mess hall walked that offtcer. He asked to be relieved from duty at the Point the next day, and his request was granted.

Another man, now a general officer with several decorations, was "turned out a silence." He paid no attention except to direct the First Captain to order the men to eat their supper. Then he [illegible] continued his round of the mess hall and went out apparently unperturbed. He was perturbed, however, and, though he did not ask to be relieved he was—well, a different sort of tactical officer after that. One hint, strong as it was, was enough, and this same Lieutenant, as he was then, became one of the most popular officers at the Point.

"Thunders of Silence," it has been called. The designation is most fitting and the method of application in the old days at the Point was most effective.

Things have changed in 20 years. Many of those mentioned in this little reminiscence lie "In Flanders Fields" under the poppies, awaiting the last reveille. Life at West Point has changed. It is possible that cadets of today are more comfortable than those were in the times recalled by this tale.

But West Point tradition is the same. It never changes. Right today, perhaps, a gaoup is gathered at dusk down by the siege-gun battery, singing "Auld Lang Benny Havens or chanting this ditty:

"To ethics, mineralogy and engineering, too,
We'll say goodby without a sigh
And don the army blue."

The Strange Case of the Late Herr Becker

are perfect," he whispered to the Chief. "This is not the body of Senor Becker."

The young journalist had been proved correct, to an extent at least. Yet was Becker alive? Or was the man seen on the street of the little town his double, another manifestation of some devilish plot whose end only the devil knew? If Becker was alive, why did he not speak? Was he in captivity? Was Becker himself the murderer?

Straightway upon the dentist's pronouncement, two of the country's cleverest detectives were dispatched to the town named by the journalist. Frequenting alleys and obscure taverns they shortly encountered men and women who had beheld the stranger answering Becker's description. Yes, he had been in the town, a hermit, making none his confidant. Now he had departed in the direction, they thought, of Chillon, toward the mountains. But they couldn't be sure. On to Chillon rode the sleuths. Here, too, they picked up the trail, but the traveler had remained only a few days, then headed for Victoria. News which caused the trackers to spur their horses. Victoria meant passports; passports meant the Argentine border and safety.

Arrival at Victoria confirmed the belief; the man was clearly on his way out of the country. He had stopped at the customs office, obtained a passport, and emerged from retirement enough to dissipate and spend much money in the taverns and bawdy houses. Time was getting short. Along the narrow mountain paths, high up in the snow-beaten Andes, the pursuers raced. It was near Lonquiemay, the furthest settlement in Chile, with Argentine only a few miles away, that the hunters caught up with their quarry. Whoever the man, he rode leisurely. His manner was not that of a fugitive, rather that of an experienced traveler who reveled in the sight of the towering peaks and the sweeping valleys with their insect men and trees below.

The two detectives separated. One whipped on a few feet ahead of the stranger, the other trailed a few feet behind. The foremost officer stretched back in his saddle.

"How far to the border?" he inquired, cordially, of the solitary rider.

"Pah! How should I know?" the questioned one grunted, his tone leaving no doubt he did not wish to converse. The second detective, however, gave his taciturnity no respite.

"Caballeros," he purred, drawing a small box from a pocket. "May I have the pleasure of offering to you a cigarette?"

"Non!" The reply was even surlier than before. There was no rejoinder. Instead, the officer's hands proferring the cigarettes shot out, seized the hands of the horseman, and pinioned them behind.

"You are under arrest, Senor Becker," he barked.

The sleuth in front hastened to aid. It was not necessary. The stranger, who at the first touch of the attacker's hands, had begun to struggle furiously, when the name Becker was pronounced, slumped in the saddle, white-faced, inert. The horseman was William Becker.

Leagues of travel down roaring gorges, through matted forests and upon screaming railroads brought the trapped fugitive to Santiago and prison, where he confessed. He had wanted money, much money. Stealing from the legation's funds in such fashion the emberzlement could not be detected for [illegible] at the same time he insured his life for [illegible] pesos, knowing that upon his supposed death, Frau Becker would receive the total of the policy. The wife, wholly ignorant of the scheme, was to be informed later by letter; both would become wealthy, comfortable residents of a city anywhere but in Chile.

Casting about for an easy victim to represent himself, Becker decided upon the lackey, Tapia. In stature his counterpart. Slaying the servant from behind, he charred the face to make recognition impossible, dressed the body in his own clothes and placed it in his office. The left leg he shattered because his own had been badly fractured in a well-known accident; a sound limb might have spoiled discovery. The body he tore open with a knife to make the crime seem that of a degenerate.

The instant these scientifically accurate preparations were completed, Becker disappeared. The sequel testified to his foresight. Only one fact he could not explain: why he had not fled the country at once, but remained in hiding only a few miles away?

"That was my misfortune," he wistfully told the Judges.

The sentence was death. According to the Chilian custom, he was led into a room where five soldiers with loaded rifles, stood waiting against a wall, grim, sinister. He was placed in a chair, a bandage tied about his eyes. A quick command. Five bullets sped through the air—and stopped.

While poor Frau Becker, her eyes dull with weeping, a second time rose from her bed for a funeral which did not end at the tomb of state.

er and the police turned pale again, the skinny little man adjusted his cles with both hands, and stepped the edge of the sidewalk and took a good look at the bad man. Then he deliberately struck across the street at a funny, hopping kind of a run, right up to where the terror stood.

The crowd yelled at him to come back, and the desperado flourished his six-shooter again, but the little man went straight up to him and said something. The crowd shuddered and expected to see him fall with a .45 bullet in him, but he didn't. They saw the desperado lower his pistol and run his hand in his pocket and hand something to the little man. Then the desperado walked sheepishly down the sidewalk, and the little man came back across the street.

"Bad man?" he said. "I guess not. He wouldn't hurt a fly. That's Zeke Skinner. He was raised on the farm next to me in Connecticut. He's selling some kind of a fake liver medicine, and that's his street rig he's got on now. I loaned him $8 in Hartford nine years ago, and never expected to see him again. Thought I knew his voice. Pay? I reckon he paid me. I calculate I always collect what's owing to me."

Then the crowd scattered and the 12 policemen headed Zeke off at the next corner and clubbed him all the way to the station house.

A STARTLING DEMONSTRATION.

WHAT a terrible state of affairs it would be if we could read each other's minds! It is safe to say that if such were the case most of us would be afraid to think above a whisper.

As an illustration, a case might be cited that occurred in Houston. Some months ago a very charming young lady came to this city giving exhibitions in mind reading, and proved herself to be marvelously gifted in that respect. She easily read the thought of the audience, finding many articles hidden by simply holding the hand of the person secreting them, and read sentences written on little slips of paper by some at a considerable distance from her.

A young man in Houston fell in love with her, and married her after a short courtship. They went to housekeeping and for a time were as happy as mortals can be.

One evening they were sitting on the porch of their residence, holding each other's hands, and wrapt in the close communion of mutual love, when she suddenly rose and knocked him down the steps with a large flower pot.

He arose, astonished, with a big bump on his head, and asked her, if it were not too much trouble, to explain.

"You can't fool me," she said, with flashing eyes. "You were thinking of a red-headed girl named Maud, with a gold plug in her front tooth and a light pink waist and a black silk skirt, on Rusk avenue, standing under a cedar bush chewing gum, at 20 minutes to 8, with your arm around her waist and calling her 'sweetness,' while she fooled with your watch chain and said, 'Oh, George, give me a chance to breathe,' and her mother was calling her to supper. Don't you dare deny it. Now, when you can get your mind on something better than that you can come in the house, and not before."

Then the door slammed and George and the broken flower pot were alone.

A PATHETIC INCIDENT.

IN A GREAT city what sharp contrasts of wealth and poverty do we see, what a kaleidoscope of jewels and rags, glittering gold and commonest fustian. Standing muffled in our overcoat, reflecting on the unequal distribution of fortune's favors, we witnessed this scene a night or two ago out in Rusk avenue.

A great house, brilliantly lighted. From the drawing rooms there stole upon the frosty air the weird, fantastically sweet strains of a foreign waltz. Through the windows could be seen passing forms of beautiful, white-clad women, attended by gallant men. All inside was warmth, luxury and happiness. Outside near the gate stood two forms. She was thinly clad and shivering with the cold. He stood with a bitter smile upon his face, listening to the music within and holding her hand. Her face was fair, fairer, perhaps than any within those halls of joy and plenty, but her lips were drawn with the cold and the thin dress she wore was no protection against the chill north wind that blew.

"Oh, Jack," she whispered, "let us go! I am so cold."

He placed his strong arm about her waist and pressed a kiss upon her cold lips.

"Be it so," he said. "I believe the next dance is ours."

And they went back into the house

MAKING JEWELS IN THE LABORATORY

THE play of light and fire in rubies and sapphires which thousands—even millions—of lovers of jewels are enjoying and are able to possess at nominal sums, has been made possible by chemistry.

"The modern synthetic gems," says Dr. Alexander Silverman, head of the department of chemistry of the University of Pittsburg, and a member of the American Chemical Society, "are as good as native gems as far as their practical and esthetic value is concerned."

Dr. Silverman recently collected natural and synthetic gems worth $50,000 for display before the Pittsburg Academy of Science and Art. He has also made a study of the history of jewels from Biblical times to the present, together with legends concerning their endowment with "talismanic, curative and supernatural powers" and their supposed influence upon the stars and planets.

He has traced the history of the diamond through India, Brazil and South Africa, where the most extensive deposits have been found.

"The South African fields were discovered accidentally by the curiosity of a farmer concerning a bright pebble with which some Boer children were playing," said Dr. Silverman. "This pebble subsequently was sold for £500 in Paris."

After discussing other nonprecious forms of diamond used for grinding, cutting and drilling, Dr. Silverman described the Moissan, de Boismenu and Parsons experiments for the preparation of diamonds. He mentioned the Franz Fischer theory, which may in time lead to commercial manufacture of the diamond. Diamond and other forms of carbon were shown to be chemically identical, through combustion experiments.

"The discovery of a method for artificially making rubies and sapphires was made by August V. L. Verneuil in 1893," he said. "The industry subsequently was established by L. Heller, at Geneva, Switzerland, where rubies are now made by playing the oxy-hydrogen blowpipe, through the flame of which various metallic oxides pass, on a heated point, to build up the 'boule,' or inverted pear-shaped mass from which the stones are cut by diamond dust.

MENTAL CHEMISTRY

THINK Mental Chemistry is the science of the mind, it is the mind which builds every house, wi writes every book, which paints every picture; it is the mind which creates every science a every art, it is the mind which suffers and enjoys. An understanding of the functions of the mi so as to achieve greater results, is then the knowledge of first importance to the human ra Creative power is the ability to bring into manifestation things which did not heretof exist. It is therefore the greatest power there is, because it means an actual contribution to the wealth of the world. If you deve this kind of power, you can hold a certified check on the bank of civilization for a fortune.

Wealth is the Product of Labor

WEALTH, HONOR, RICHES

Do not depend upon opportunity or intellectual brilliancy of any kind because it is well known that uneducated people often acquire great wealth, while cultured and talented people remain in poverty.

Again they do not depend upon capital, because many men with capital lose what they have, while others with no capital acquire phenomenal wealth.

Whatever finds a place in human experience is the result of the operation of natural laws, and the determining factors are therefore within your own control.

This may seem "too good to be true," but if you will consider that by the touch of a button or the turn of a lever science has placed almost infinite resources at the disposal of man, it becomes evident that there may be still other laws not generally known which contain even greater possibilities.

ECONOMICS

Is the science which treats of the production and distribution of wealth, but the astronomer makes his investigations in the most painstaking and scrupulous manner. He takes infinite pains to know that his calculations are exact, for he knows that the law of cause and effect is exact and immutable. Do our statesmen use the same care, the same exact scientific knowledge in conducting the affairs of state? Is not the regulation of human affairs, the relation of men to other men, the harmonious adjustment of society, of as much importance as a knowledge of astronomy? And yet we can determine the movement of the most remote stars with precision, but the movement of Senators, takes, and Incomes is shrouded in mystery.

Greatest Discovery in 100 Years

Prof. Wm. James of Harvard University said that the power of the subconscious mind was the greatest discovery in 100 years.

The whole world is on the eve of a new consciousness, a new power and a new realization of the resources within the self. The last century saw the most magnificent material progress in history. The new century will see the greatest progress in mental and spiritual power.

Mental Chemistry is an amazing revelation, and should be in the hands of every thinking person.

Gold in the Mind Converted Into Gold in the Hand

Thought is the method by which the undifferentiated is being differentiated and this differentiation is brought about by appropriation, and appropriation comes through recognition. It is therefore recognition which sets causes in motion, which bring about the experiences which constitute the life of the individual. If we expect nothing we get nothing, if we demand much we receive the larger portion. The world is harsh only to those who cannot compel room for their ideas.

Mental Chemistry explains the method by which the law of attraction is put into operation, it tells how gold in the heart may be converted into gold in the mind and in the hand.

BUT UNFORTUNATELY THOSE WHO LABOR MOST GET THE LEAST WEALTH.

This is because the distribution of the wealth produced by labor has been delegated to those who do the thinking. Modern science is now directing attention to the fact that ideas are responsible for every form of wealth. We now know that every condition is the effect of a cause which had its origin in an idea.

When two or more molecules are grouped a new individuality is created and this individuality possesses characteristics which are not possessed by either of the elements which gave it being.

What is true in the inorganic world is equally true in the organic. Certain conscious thought processes will invariably be followed by the same consequences. As the possible combinations of thought are infinite, the results are seen in an infinite variety of circumstances, conditions and experiences.

DISEASE

Individual, National or International, Physical, Mental, Moral or Psychical, Financial, Social or Economical is but the non-coordination of the members as an organic whole. The cure consists in the removal of the cause, rather than in the treatment of symptoms, or the substitution of one form of distress for another.

MENTAL CHEMISTRY

Explains the fundamental law of cure, it explains the therapeutic value of all remedial agencies, it tells how to establish harmonious relations in the various fields of human endeavor, it tells of the silent revolution which is taking place in the minds of men.

Mind Turns the Wheel of Fortune

The mind is the torch that lights the fire that creates the steam, that turns the wheel of fortune, upon which our conditions depend, and this thought is born in the individual consciousness. Actions are the blossoms of thought, and conditions are the result of actions and joy and suffering are the fruit.

Mental Chemistry, a new book by the author of The Master Key System, is a most illuminating work on the mental process. The chapters on psychoanalysis, psychology, mental medicine, suggestion, metaphysics, philosophy and religion, give the reader an interpretation of the power of mind never heretofore revealed.

Much Gathers More

That much gathers more is true on every plane of existence, and that loss leads to greater loss is equally true. Life is an unfoldment, not accretion. What comes to us in the material world is the result of what we have created in the thought world. The thought processes are always at work; the only question is, are we to be simply passive recipients of this activity, or are we to consciously direct the work? Shall we have a vision of the destination to be reached, the dangers to be avoided, or shall we simply drift?

Mental Chemistry Explains:

The Law of Causation, the Law of Attraction, the Law of Opulence, the Law of Compensation, the Law governing Idealization, Concentration, Visualization, Transmutation and Realization; Psychology, Psycho-Analysis, Suggestion, Bio-Chemistry, Metaphysics and Mental Medicine. In fact, every one of the twenty separate and distinct parts has a value far in excess of the merely nominal charge which is made for the entire work. You should therefore not fail to mail the coupon at once! Now!!

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
UNITED STATES
Public Health Service
Baltimore, Md., Feb. 15, 1923.

Dear Mr. Haanel:
Find herewith amount due for your wonderful book, "Mental Chemistry." I have lots of books, this is a treasure I prize above all. May its readers increase and benefit therefrom.
Fraternally yours,
DANIEL M. FITZGIBBONS.

The National League for the Prevention of Spinal Curvature, In F. P. Millard, D. O., President.

Mr. Charles F. Haanel is one of the few men who understand psychology sufficiently to be entitled to the classification of authority on that subject. His new book "Mental Chemistry," will make everyone think. After all, if you can secure "practical vision" from one who is an authority, you will have gained additional knowledge that is priceless.
F. P. MILLARD.

MRS. OLIVE E. ROBBINS
Lecturer and Teacher of Practical Psychology
Lakewood, Ohio, Feb. 10, 1923.

My dear Mr. Haanel:
Your new book "Mental Chemistry" is simply tremendous. Its first perusal has been a wondering delight and its deep study will be a glorious privilege. It is dynamic, full of power and yet goes so to the very fundamentals that it reduces these stupendous truths to the clearness of simplicity, and illumines the whole subject of Man and his relation to the Universe, his powers and dominion as with a searchlight.
No one can afford to be without this wonderful book.
OLIVE E. ROBBINS.

D. LLOYD CLAYCOMB
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
Altoona, Pa., Jan. 4, 1923.

My dear Mr. Haanel:
I am the happy possessor of your very valuable book entitled "Mental Chemistry." I have had it but a few days for examination but the moments that I have spent in carefully examining the work have been to me among the greatest moments of my life.
Your analysis of the science of thought and of being is nothing less than the product of an inspired genius. It is served to illuminate many phases of thought that to me heretofore have been very obscure.
It has thrown a flood of light on lines of thought that I believed I had heretofore comprehended but of which I had only touched the outer rim.
It should be in the possession of every one who is interested in the science of living, and I predict for it a world-wide circulation. I cannot speak too highly of it.
Very truly yours,
D. LLOYD CLAYCOMB.

Marshall Business College
Marshall, Texas.

You have indubitably proved your case and with admirable skill, invincible logic and demonstrable truth, you have opened to the view the secret of divine power and wisdom, by which the comfort and happiness of every living creature is secured.
There will be an almost universal demand for this book, and its effects in the freedom, happiness, health, wealth and harmony of the human race will be limited only by the number of those who avail themselves of its wonderful secrets by demonstrating its truths in their lives.
C. C. REDDOCH.

Sparta, Tenn., Jan. 10, 1923.

Chas. F. Haanel,
Dear Sir:
Some books are epoch-making because they gather and focus public sentiment. Other books are epoch-making because they make a new epoch in history. Among the latter class are such works as the "Principia" of Newton, and the "Origin of Species" of Darwin.
"Mental Chemistry" is in the latter class and it will rank as a new thing in the world, because it takes the theme out of the realm of speculative metaphysics and dreamy idealism, and places the subject in the realm of philosophy.—SCIENCE.
MONROE REALS.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 18, 1923.

Dear Mr. Haanel:
I have just finished my third reading of your marvelous book "Mental Chemistry." This is the wonder book of a decade. It contains the cream of all that has been thought and written on the mental processes and much else besides.
One who has read it holds the key that will unlock the doors to the ancient mysteries to modern psychology, metaphysics, new thought, auto-suggestion, psychoanalysis etc.
Yours truly,
JOHN CAMPBELL, JR.

No Gray Hair

—You Needn't Tell the Secret

My method of restoring the original color to gray hair is so sure and simple that every woman can do it herself. There is no outside aid required, no expert skill needed. No one need know your secret.

My restorer is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water, and as pure and dainty. It is easily and quickly applied by combing through the hair. The restored color is perfectly even and natural, and permanent. There is no greasy sediment to make your hair sticky and stringy, nothing to wash off or rub off.

Once I Was Gray

I perfected my scientific restorer to bring back the original color to my own prematurely gray hair. Millions have since used it. So will millions more. It is the most popular and biggest-selling preparation of its kind in the world.

Recently my laboratories have made another discovery, in the shape of a new preparatory powder which acts as a tonic and antiseptic, putting your hair in perfect condition for restoration.

FREE Trial Bottle

Simple Single Lock-Test

My special patented Free Trial outfit contains a package of this new powder together with a trial bottle of the restorer and full explanations and directions for making the test on a single lock of hair.

She Found A Pleasant Way To Reduce Her Fat

She did not have to go to the trouble of diet or exercise. She found a better way, which aids the digestive organs to turn food into muscle, bone and sinew instead of fat.

She used Marmola Prescription Tablets, which are made from the famous Marmola prescription. They aid the digestive system to obtain the full nutriment of food. They will allow you to eat many kinds of food without the necessity of dieting or exercising.

Thousands have found that Marmola Prescription Tablets give complete relief from obesity. And when the accumulation of fat is checked, reduction to normal, healthy weight soon follows.

All good drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar a box. Ask your druggist for them, or order direct and they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

MARMOLA COMPANY

Are you cheating yourself with an imitation of health?

INSUFFICIENT fresh air—lack of proper exercise—constant nervous wear and tear—the human body today has to meet a series of unnatural strains.

Every year we pay millions of dollars for drugs which whip the exhausted system into a temporary semblance of health.

And every year thousands of men and women still young die from "old-age" diseases—brought on chiefly by ignorance of the true laws of health.

Only the proper food can keep your body free from poisons

Few people realize how directly our food is responsible for health or disease. We no longer eat the raw foods of the forest for which our bodies were built. Instead, modern civilization demands a more delicate, concentrated diet which leaves the muscles of our intestines with no real work to do.

The result is inevitable: the muscles of the intestinal walls become as soft and flabby as the muscles of the arms without exercise. There is nothing to stimulate them to remove the waste which drains into the intestines every day. They fail to act. And we become literally clogged with poisons from these waste products which stagnate in the system.

Trying to cure the trouble by drugs which increase it

Habitual use of drugs and cathartics is worse than useless. Their artificial irritation weakens our intestinal muscles still more—and we have to take larger and larger doses in order to blast a way through.

The only real remedy lies in gently encouraging these muscles to act themselves—in exercising them as Nature intended.

That is why physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active, and that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action. It is a nourishing food—not an indigestible medicine—and like any other food, it must be eaten regularly to secure results.

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water.

What this does to the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does to the muscles of your intestines—gives them normal healthy exercise

Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

THE TIRED BUSINESS WOMAN

(COPYRIGHT)

By W. E. HILL

Given a good dance floor and a jazzy orchestra, one tired business woman can tire out half a dozen tired business men and still be fresh as a daisy.

"My dear, DID you ever see such perfect legs? Isn't he MARVELOUS?" Nowadays the managers have to keep an eye out for what will please the tired business woman—"The Follies" for the T. B. M. and a "Hamlet" with perfect columnar supports for the T. B. W.

The distant relative of the business woman, who believes that woman's place is in the home alongside the gas range, and who can't help but feel that Mabel's contact with the outside world is just a bit coarsening. At least, Mabel might be chaperoned to and from the office.

The friend of the business girl who knows perfectly horrible stories about girls who worked—or tried to work—for their living. Knows of one girl who had to leave three jobs in succession because her employers tried to sit in her lap—and then there was another girl whose ear was bit by a sales-manager — Think of it—by a sales-manager!

"By golly! I saw right away the little blonde was falling for me, and I said, 'Kid,' I said, 'I'm off blondes for good!'" This is a pretty good answer as to what, in an office, makes the tired business girl tired.

The private secretary, having spent a bitter day acting as buffer between a head of the firm and the outside world, is on her way to the so-called rest and seclusion of an outlying boarding house.

"We had such an interesting manuscript sent today," says the T. B. W., who works in a publishing house, to the T. B. W., who dittoes with an advertising concern. They will talk business out of business hours.

"Either of these little frocks looks pink in the daylight, madame." The tired saleslady at the end of a perfectly terrible day, just naturally begins to lose interest in the stock. You can't blame her for lying a little about the two plum-colored dresses when you stop to think that her feet hurt her.

The tired business girl goes back to the home town for a week-end rest. All the Main Street ladies are so glad to see dear, dear Lillian home from the city. And under the sweetest of smiles is the look that says, plain as day, "Are you the same good little girl you used to be before you went to the big, bad city?"

GENTLEMEN, LET'S CLEAN UP OUR HOSPITAL DEBT! LET'S GET UP ANOTHER DRIVE FOR CONTRIBUTIONS; AND MAKE IT 100% THIS TIME, BY NOT OVERLOOKING ANYBODY!!

YOU SAID IT, MAYOR — HURRAH FOR OUR MAYOR!!

I'LL START THE BALL A-ROLLING, AND I WANT YOU GIRLS TO GO RIGHT DOWN THE LINE, FROM MAIN STREET TO EVERT LITTLE ALLEY, AND COLLECT FROM MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD — EVERT LITTLE HELPS!

LEAVE IT TO US, MAYOR.

NOW DON'T BE STINGY, CHIEF!

YOU CAN HAVE EVERY CENT I'VE GOT, MISS!

POLICE

I COULDN'T REFUSE YOU, MY DEAR!

THAT'S THE TICKET — "SAY IT WITH GREENBACKS," CHIEF!

YOU'RE A BRICK, TONY!

FEEFTY CENTS FOR DA GOODA CAUSE!

I' DOT A PENNY FOR A LOLLYPOP, BUT I' RUTHER GIVE IT FOR THE HOSPITAL!

NOW WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THAT? — THANKS, PRECIOUS!

COME ACROSS, MAYOR!

WHY I'VE ALREADY DONE MY BIT, BUT I S'POSE ANOTHER LITTLE DONATION WON'T BREAK ME!

I MUST HAVE BEEN STONE BLIND WHEN I PICKED THAT OLD DAME TO CANVASS — MY POLICY IS ALWAYS TO DELEGATE BEAUTIES FOR SUCH WORK — THEY BRING IN MORE MONEY!!

THE ONLY PERSON IN THE WHOLE TOWN I COULDN'T TAG WAS GROVER PINCHPENNY — I'VE BEEN HANGING AROUND HIS HOUSE, HERE, ALL DAY!

HE'S NOT AT HIS OFFICE, EITHER!

THE HARD-BOILED EGG HAS PROBABLY LEFT TOWN TO AVOID THIS DRIVE — IT'S JUST LIKE HIM!

WELL, I GATHERED $49.98 — I S'POSE I'D BETTER MAKE IT AN EVEN $50 (IT'LL LOOK MORE NATURAL) — EVEN IF I HAVE TO THROW IN TWO CENTS OF MY OWN MONEY!

Gus Mager

THERE'S GROVER PINCHPENNY NOW!

AFTER A CONTRIBUTION FROM ME, GIRLS? HERE'S $50 — ALL THE MONEY I HAVE ABOUT ME!
